SOOCHOW

蘇州 Sú-chau

Soochow, until 1912 the capital of the province of Kiangsu, lies about 80 miles west by water and 54 by rail and a little north of Shanghai, with which it is connected by excellent inland water-ways. The Shanghai-Nanking Railway supplies still better connection. The city is a rectangle, its length from north to south being three and a half miles and its width from east to west two and a half, the total circumference being about 10 miles. It lies not far from the eastern shore of the great Taihu lake. Past its walls runs the southern section of the Grand Canal, which joins Hangchow to Chinkiang; and in every direction spread creeks or canals, affording easy communication with the numerous towns in the surrounding country. It is an important manufacturing centre, with a population of nearly 389,797 persons, of which number 225,843 were males and 163,954 females (according to the census taken by the Bureau of Public Safety in 1934). Its two chief manufactures are satins and silk embroideries of various kinds. In addition, it sends out silk goods, cotton, yarn, matches, scented tea and articles in iron, ivorywood, horn, and glass, and rape seed.

Before the Taiping rebellion Soochow shared with Hangchow the reputation of being the finest city in China, but it was almost entirely destroyed by the rebels, who captured it on 25th, May, 1860. Its recovery by Major (afterwards General) Gordon on 27th, Nov., 1863, was the first effective blow to the rebellion. Since that disastrous period it has recovered itself greatly and is once more populous and flourishing, though it has not yet attained to its former pitch of prosperity. It was declared open to foreign trade on September 26, 1896, under the provisions of the Japanese Treaty. The Foreign Settlement is under the southern wall of the city, just across the Canal, and is a strip of land about 1⅓ mile long and a quarter of a mile broad. The Government has made a good carriage road along the Canal bank extending the whole length of the settlement and as far as the railway station, a distance of five and a half miles. The care of roads has been entrusted to the Bureau of Construction of the Wushien Government, which, in recent years, continued to make a radical improvement in construction and widening of roads especially inside the city. The work on the widening of Park Road (公園路), commenced in September 1931, was completed in December of the same year. The Kong Hong (宮巷) together with the adjacent Kan Chiang Fong (干將坊) was widened in the early part of 1934 and the Chung Shih Chieh was widened in April, 1935. Thus, the city now has, in addition to those roads already widened, about 15 miles of well-constructed roads. The two wooden bridges, namely, the Gordon Bridge (戈登橋) and the Chu Kung Bridge (朱公橋), on the road leading from the Custom House—at the outside south-east corner of the city— to the railway station were reconstructed with re-inforced concrete and opened to traffic in November and December, 1931 respectively. The Nan Hsing Bridge (南新橋) was reconstructed and opened to traffic in December, 1933, at a cost of $14,000.00. The old and broken Ching Kuan Bridge (觀光橋) at Heng T'ang (橫塘) was rebuilt in December, 1933, with funds wholly subscribed by a gentry of this district named Mr. Chang Tsing Yuan (張晉源), this bridge being re-named Tsing Yuan Bridge (晉源橋) after its constributor. It forms an important link of the Soo-mu Highway (蘇木路), the construction work of which was consummated in August, 1935. It is much due to the credit of the Provincial authorities concerned that the work on the construction of the Soochow—Kashing or Soo-Kah Highway was constructed in May and opened to traffic on 28th, June, 1933, covering a total length of 66.8 kilometres and at a cost of $700,000. Following the completion of the Soo-Kah Highway a motor bus service for run on this new road was inaugurated and operated solely by the Bureau of Construction of the Provincial Government, to the great convenience of the travelling public. The year 1935 witnessed the completion of the Shanghai-Wusih Highway, covering a distance of 140 kilometres, with a branch line from Changshu to Soochow extending 40 kilometres in length. The road links up many important towns such as Kiating (嘉定), Taitsang (太倉), Changshu (常熟), Soochow (蘇州), and Wusih (無錫), all of which are densely populated and possess rich agricultural products. Construction of this road was began as early as September, 1933, and work was not finished until August, costing about $1,700,000. A new Ching Fan Highway (景范路) named after the local ancient scholar and stateman Fan Chung-yen (范仲淹), was constructed in September, 1933, connecting the Tien Ping Hills (天平山) with the Lin An Hills (靈巖山), thus providing much facility to the excursionists to these two famous hills. The Soochow-Kashing Railway covering a distance of 75 kilometres, was completed and formally opened to traffic in July. The construction of the Chung Shan Memorial Hall (中山紀念堂) was consummated in April, 1934, costing $40,000.00 a sum which was totally contributed by the citizens of the local community. It is a magnificent building and situated in the midst of the Yuan Miao K'uan (元妙觀), the commercial centre of the city. A new Y.M.C.A. building was opened in December, 1921. The Chinese and missionary schools date back to 1900. The Soochow Domestic Produce Company, situated in the centre of the city was opened in 1935. On New Year's day in 1931, a new city gate named "Chin Mên" (金門), replacing the Hsin Chang Mên and a little to the south of it, was opened to traffic. Another new city gate called "Hsiang Mên" (相門) was completed in 1936. The city of Soochow has thus, in addition to the newly built "Ping Mên" (平門) "Hsiang Men" (相門), nine city-gates, instead of six city gates as it had before. Recent years witnessed the growth of a great many modern banking institutions. Branch offices of Chinese modern banks established in this city and opened to business lately were the Ching Ch'eng Bank (金城銀行); The Shanghai Commercial and Savings Bank (上海商業儲蓄銀行); The Chinese Manufacturers' Bank (中國國貨銀行); The Peasants Bank (農民銀行); The Oriental Bank (大陸銀行); The National Industrial Bank of China (中國實業銀行); and The China South Sea Bank (中南銀行).

江 鎮 Chin-kiáng

The port of Chinkiang, which was opened to trade by the Treaty of Tientsin, is situated on the south bank of the Yangtsze River, about 150 miles from its mouth, and near the entrances of the southern and northern sections of the Grand Canal. Formerly this position gave it great importance, and it was at one time believed that the port must eventually become a serious rival to Shanghai, but the neglect of the inland waterways, and especially of the Grand Canal, which is closed to steam traffic for some months during each year, either because the water is too shallow or because the wash from launches during the high water season would injure the embankments, is causing the trade to be diverted to Pukow, Tsingtao and Nantung-hsien. A further reason for the decline in importance of the port is the silting up of the harbour. The Chenjenchow Spit to the west of the harbour continues to increase slowly, and two additional spits, one stretching north-west from Consular Bluff and one stretching north-west from Silver Island Bluff, are now forming.

Chinkiang is one of the pleasantest ports on the river. It is now within five hours railway journey of Shanghai, which enables necessities to be delivered promptly, while the Shanghai papers are received the same afternoon. The surrounding country is very pretty and contains fair shooting. Road development is proceeding apace and motor cars are steadily increasing in numbers.

The former British Concession was formally handed over to China on 15th November, 1929, and all undertakings of the former British Municipal Council, such as electric light and waterworks plants, have been taken over by Chinese companies who now supply the concession with electric power and water from their installations in the city.

The work of road construction at Chinkiang and its suburban places was done very satisfactorily, though it has been carried on slowly and steadily ever since the removal of the Kiangsu Provincial Capital to this port in 1928. The Chung Shan Road which occupies the former city centre is available for motor traffic from the West Gate Railway Station in the west to the various highways in the east. The Chung Cheng Road is also available for motor traffic, commencing from the waterfront of the Yangtze River near the Pai Ku Shan and terminating at the South Gate Railway Station, thus linking up the various highways in the south. The work of the east section of the Chung Hua Road between the Shih Fu Chiao and the Chung Cheng Road has not yet been started. A new road named Pao T'a Road crossing the West Gate main street from the Chung Hua Road in the north to the Pao Kai Road in the south, has just been completed and this is considered as a pivot between the city of Chinkiang and its business centre outside the West Gate. Bus roads are now radiated to various places such as Chuyung, Tangyang, Kintan, Liyang and Kiangyin. It is worthy of note that a Provincial Observatory has been built on the Pei Ku Shan towards the end of 1934 for meteorological purposes.

Trade in 1938

NANKING

寧江 Kiáng-ning

The city owes its present name, "Southern capital," to having been many times the capital of the Empire, the last occasion before the removal there of the Seat of Government in 1927, being in the Ming dynasty at the commencement of the 15th century. Nanking is also known as Kiang Ning Fu, being the chief city of the prefecture of Kiang Ning, and the seat of government for the provinces grouped under the designation of Kiang Nan. Besides Kiang Ning Fu, an elegant Chinese name commonly used is Kin Ling or "golden mound." From the 5th or 6th century B.C. to the present there has been a walled city at this place. Nanking was specified in the French Treaty of 1858 as one of the Yangtze ports to be opened to trade, but it was not formally opened until May, 1899. In July, 1915, Pukow, the southern terminus of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway (lying across the river from Nanking), was opened to foreign trade as a branch office of the Nanking Customs.

Nanking is situated on the south bank of the Yangtsze, 45 miles beyond Chinkiang and 193 by rail or 215 by water from Shanghai. From the river little can be seen of it except the long line of lofty grey brick walls which encircles it. The walls have an elevation varying from 40 to 90 feet, are from 20 to 40 feet in thickness, and 22 mile in circumference. They enclose a vast area, a large part of which still remains undeveloped and includes some pretty hilly country. The busiest portion lies towards the south and west, and is several miles from the banks of the river. Whatever of architectural beauty or importance belonged to Nanking perished or was reduced to a ruinous condition at or before its occupation by the Taiping rebels. The world famous Porcelain Tower, the most beautiful pagoda in China, was completely destroyed during this period of its history, and now nothing remains of the structure that was once the glory of Nanking. It stood outside the walls on the south side of the city. The celebrated mausoleum of the Emperor Hung Wu, founder of the Ming dynasty (who died in 1398), with other tombs and monuments, known as the Ming Tombs, is just outside the eastern walls. There are many other interesting ruins in or near the city, including the remains of Hung Wu's Palace. Nanking was first brought into notice among Europeans in 1842, in which year the first British Treaty with China was signed here. During the Taiping rebellion no place suffered more. It was first taken by assault by the Taipings on the 19th March, 1853, and after sustaining a prolonged siege was recaptured by the Imperial forces on the 19th July, 1864, a fatal blow to the rebels. Although Nanking has recovered to a small extent from the prostration which attended its ill-treatment during the Taiping rebellion, it has never yet attained any commercial importance, but both coal and iron mines are known to exist in the neighbourhood and must eventually be worked, in which case Nanking will probably become a great manufacturing centre.

The Naval College, a large pile of buildings, was opened in 1890. It was closed during the Revolution, but has since been re-opened. Later, it was again closed and the buildings now form the admiralty. The Nanking (Ginleng) University was founded in 1888 by the Central China Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is now an imposing and well-appointed school, with a roll of 500 scholars. There is also a women's College. In December, 1923, a large quadrangle of the National South-Eastern University was destroyed by fire, the damage being estimated at $300,000. The library, containing 3,000 English and 30,000 Chinese books, was almost a total loss. The Arsenal and Powder Mills, for many years in the charge of foreigners, are now entrusted to native direction. They are situated just outside the South Gate. A macadamized road has been built from the steamer landing clear through the city to the Tung Tsi Gate in the south wall, a distance of eight miles, and many similar roads in other parts of the city have been added during the last few years. A noticeable improvement to communication between the centre of the city and Hsiakwan was the construction of the Chungshan highway, the opening of which in 1929 greatly facilitated traffic and has given an impetus to motor transportation. Many new roads are planned inside the City, where since it became the Capital. Many fine buildings have been erected, or are in course of erection: notably the ministries of Railways, Communications, Justice, and a new Foreign office. Outside the City, Motor roads now join the Capital both with Hangchow & Wuhu.

British and American Consulates were opened in 1900, and since then a Japanese and French Consulates have also beenestablished. Most of the Legations also have established sub-Legations here.

Nanking was the scene of much fighting in the revolutionary compaign during October and November, 1911. The whole city was occupied by the revolutionaries in the early days of December, the Tartar City was sacked and burnt, and Nanking became the seat of the Provisional Government with Dr. Sun Yat-sen as President. Here the Republican Constitution was drawn up and promulgated, and the Revolutionary leaders sought to make Nanking the capital of the Republic. In July, 1913, a military outbreak occurred which rapidly developed into an armed rebellion against the Central Government, and from the 15th August until the 1st September the city was under a severe bombardment. All of Hsia-kuan was burnt, and Nanking was looted. The city was made the seat of government by the Nationalists in 1927. The great event of 1929 was the burial of Dr. Sun Yat Sen in a magnificent mausoleum, specially constructed for the body of the great leader on a slope of the Purple Mountain. In 1931 the Sun Yat Sen Memorial Park was developed by the construction of sports grounds, a stadium and a swimming pool.

Trade in 1938

The port of Nanking, having been occupied in November 1937 and remaining in Japanese occupation throughout 1938 with no Customs functioning, no report of trade or trade statistics are available.

WUHU

蕪 湖 Wú-hú

This port (the name of which signifies "grass and lakes," i.e., swamps) was opened to foreign trade by the "Chefoo Convention" on the 1st April, 1877. It is situated on the Yangtsze, in the province of Anhwei, between Nanking, the National capital city, and Kiukiang, being distant 84 km. from the former by water, 85 km. by road and 90 km. by rail, and 312 km. from the latter by water. It is well located for trade, mainly owing to the excellence of its water communication with the interior. A large canal, with a depth of five to six feet of water in the winter and more than double that in the summer, connects the port with the important city of Hsuancheng (recently known as Ning-kuoh-fu) 80 km. distant. Another canal runs inland for over 170 km. in a south-westerly direction to Taiping-hsien an extensive tea district. This canal, which is only navigable in the summer, passes through Nanling and King-hsien, where the cultivation of silk is carried on, and may some day be of importance. These silk districts are situated within 80 km. of Wuhu. Besides the canals leading to Hsuancheng and Taiping, there are two others communicating with Ssu-an in Chekiang and Tung-pa.

Coal is now becoming an important article of export from Wuhu, both Government and private interests having been directed to the great coalfields of the province. The most important mines now under operation are in Lohochen on the right bank of the Huai river, near Pengpu, managed by the National Reconstruction Commission. A railway right from the colliery to Yuchikou, on the left bank of the Yangtze some 11 km. down river from Wuhu, has been built by the Commission and recently opened to passenger as well as to cargo traffic on January 20, 1936. Another important mine in Shuitung in south Anhwei is now operated with private capital. This mine possesses a light railway connecting the coalfields with the Wuhu—Sunchiapu railway at the latter terminus. The Mantoushan coal mines, also a private concern, occupy a better geographical position in that the mines are on the brink of the Yangtze a few km. above Tatung. Shipments are frequently made by specially chartered steamers to Shanghai for transshipment there.

Exports of iron ore, which constitutes the most important direct trade of the port with foreign countries, increase yearly Three private concerns are now engaged in opening these mines, namely, the Yu Fan Co. of Tichiang, the Pao Hsing Co. of Manganshan and the Fu Li Min Co. of Chenchiayu. This mineral, so richly produced in Anhwei, is all shipped to Japan. Motor roads exist between Wuhu, Nanking, Tunki and Wuwei.

The tract of land selected 30 years ago for the Foreign Settlement was definitely ceded in 1906, and sites were allotted to the then Anhwei Railway Company and to various shipping companies, each lot having a river frontage of 600 to 1,100 feet. In 1914 the Ministry of Communications took over the Anhwei Railway Company with its entire assets and liabilities, the property being transferred to the Kiangnan Railway Company in 1933. Large godowns were built by Messrs. Buttefield & Swire on their ground in the Settlement for storing rice. Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co. Ltd., own a large property here and the Chinese Government Salt Administration has also bought some with the intention of erecting large storage godowns. The Customs House and buildings on the bund near the Settlement were completed and occupied in 1919. The Chinese population of Wuhu and its suburbs was estimated at 328,803 in 1934. A railway has been constructed by the Kiangnan Railway Company connecting this port with Nanking and Sunchiapu. The former line was opened to passenger and goods traffic in May 1935 and the latter in July of the same year.

Trade in 1938

The port of Wuhu, having been occupied in November 1937 and remaining in Japanese occupation throughout 1938 with no Customs functioning, no report on trade or trade statistics are available.

KIUKIANG

江九 Kiú-kiang

Kiukiang is situated on the river Yangtsze near the outlet of the Poyang Lake, and was formerly prefectural city of the province of Kiang-si. It is distant about 142 geographical miles from Hankow and 454 miles from Shanghai. Kiukiang, before the Rebellion, was a busy and populous city; but it was occupied by the Taiping rebels in 1853, and before it was given up to the Imperial troops was almost entirely destroyed. When the Foreign Settlement was established there, however, the population soon returned, and has continued to increase rapidly: it is now estimated at 80,000. The city wall has been pulled down, and a maloo has been built in its place.

The city is built close to the river, along the banks of which the walls run for some 500 yards. Their circumference is about five miles, but a portion of the space enclosed is still unoccupied. The city contains no feature of interest. There are several large lakes to the north and west of it, and it is backed by a noble range of hills a few miles distant, amongst which is Kuling, some 3,600 feet high, the well-known summer resort, and the existence of which, within 2½ hours' of the port, gives Kiukiang a high position among the Treaty Ports. The former foreign Settlement lies to the west of the city ad is neatly laid out. It possesses a small bund lined with trees, 2 clubs, and a Roman natholic cathedral. Since the end of 1927 the foreign settlement has been under Control of the Chinese authorities, and a new residential and business district, close to but outside the city, is slowly coming into being. Aeroplanes on the Shanghai-Hankow run pass through here daily—up plane about 2 p.m. and down plane about 9 a.m.

During 1921 a system of drainage of approved foreign style was initiated. Pinhingchow now comprises either in or adjacent to it the following prominent buildings: the railway station and godowns, the electric-light power-house, the Yi Sung Match Factory, the Kiuhsing Spinning and Weaving Company's factory, and a large fourstoried hotel.

With the construction of the boom in the Yangtze River at Kiangyin at the outbreak of hostilities and, at a later date after the fall of Wuhu in December 1937, of a second barrier at Matang, some 40 miles below the port, Kiukiang was effectively cut off from supplies from the outside world, except for a mere trickle of goods arriving in the district through the parcel post or by the Canton-Hankow Railway by way of Hankow. Trade in the real sense of the word did not exist, as is illustrated by the fact that the total value for direct foreign imports only reached the insignificant figure of G. U. 12, 349, whilst that for direct exports to foreign countries was no more than $1,720.

The Customs continued to function right up to the time when evacuation became necessary with the near approach of the Japanese and the outbreak of serious fighting in close proximity to Kiukiang itself, but activities mainly centred on the coastwise movement of native produce, in every case up rever. Coastwise movements of native produce inwards totalled $5.4 million and outwards $3.8 million for the six months during which the Customs functioned, and these figures compare very unfavourably with the totals for 1937, which were $26.6 million and $51.7 million respectively for the 12 months of that year.

As a result of the fall of Wuhu considerable uneasiness became apparent, and an exodus of a large number of the more wealthy residents occurred, some of whom did not return even when it became evident that an immediate attack on Kiukiang was not intended. By April, however, this state of uneasiness had became noticeable once again, and an exodus, which grew in volume as time progressed, led to Kiukiang being denuded of all but 2,000 or 3,000 of its lower class inhabitants by the end of June, and this figure included a number of peasants from the surrounding district. The withdrawal of all representatives of foreign concerns to the concentration point took place on the 11th July, which necessitated the closing of the Custom House on the same day, whereas the military occupation of the town occurred on the 25th, July.

HANKOW

口漢 Han-kau

Hankow, as its name implies, is located at the mouth of the Han Rver—the longest tributary of the Yangtsze—in latitude 30 deg. 32 min. N., and longitude 114 deg. 9 min. E. Its central position, standing as it does like a half-way house between North and South China, has led to its being called the "Chicago of China." It was formerly regarded merely as a suburb of Hanyang, which it immediately adjoins, but it has since far outstripped the older city in commerce, wealth and influence. It is, of course, the principal port on the Yangtsze, which drains about 750,000 square miles of territory and waters a hinterland with a population of close upon 200,000,000 people. Thus situated and environed, it is natural to expect that it will ultimately become the chief emporium in central China. Hankow is 600 miles distant from Shanghai, and foreign and Chinese steamers ply regularly between Shanghai and Hankow throughout the year. During the high water season river steamers also ply between Shanghai and Ichang and Shanghai and Changhas. But during the low water season a Hankow-Ichang service is maintained by steamers also ply between Shanghai and Ichang and Shanghai and Changsha by tugs and lighters.

Attention was first drawn to Hankow as a place of trade by Hue, the French missionary. Captain Blakiston, in his work "The Yangtsze," gives the following correct description of the place and its surroundings:—"Hankow is situated just where an irregular range of semi-detached low hills crosses a particularly level country on both sides of the main river in an east and west direction. Stationed on Pagoda Hill, Hanyang, a spectator looks down on almost asmuch water as land even when the rivers are low. At his feet sweeps the magnificent Yangtsze, nearly a mile in width; from the west and skirting the northern edge of the range of hills already mentioned comes the river Han, narrow and canal-like, to add its quota, and serving as one of the highawys of the country; and to the north-west and north is an extensive treeless flat, so little elevated above the river that the scattered hamlets which dot its surface are, without exception, raised on mounds, probably artificial works of a now distant age. A stream or two traverse its farther part and flow into the main river. Carrying his eye to the right bank of the Yangtsze one sees enormous lakes and lagoons both to the north-west and south-east sides of the hills beyond the provincial city."

The port was opened to foreign trade in 1861, and was visited by Mr. (afterwards Sir) Robert Hart in that year in connection with opening a branch of the Imperial Customs. The British and other Bunds have many imposing buildings on the water-front. On the British Bund, are the outstanding offices of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, the National City Bank of New York and the Yokohama Spiece Bank and extensive godowns, etc., belonging to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co. and Messrs. Butterfield & Swire and the Asiatic Petroleum Company have also constructed large premises on the lot immediately to the north of the Commissioner's house. The latter was dismantled in 1924, and the oldest landmark on the British Bund has thus been removed. The British Bund, indeed, was rapidly becoming the banking and business centre of the Concessions, and was ceasing to be a quarter for private residence In many respects the Hankow bund is the finest in the East, and in point of length is probably unsurpassed. The new Custom House was completed at the close of the year 1922, and is located in an imposing position at the Southern end of the British Bund—admittedly the finest site in Hankow—and the building is in every respect worthy of the site. The fact that it was re-constructed on such extensive lines may be taken as an index, states the Commissioner of Customs in his Annual Report for 1924, of the confidence reposed in the future development and prosperity of Hankow as the foremost trade centre of Mid-China. Of the Concessions acquired by Britain, Russia, Germany, France and Japan, only the last two remain under foreign control, the rest having been handed over to or taken back by, the Chinese authorities.

The year 1931 brought a disastrous flood to Hankow, the whole city being under many feet of water. An even worse situation threatened in 1935, but the Tung Chi Dyke, which surrounds the whole city and the level which had been constructed along the entire length of the Bund kept the water out of the city.

The native city of Hankow was burnt by the Imperialist army in October, 1911 and a population of about 800,000 were thereby rendered homeless. At the end of 1914 it was estimated that fully 80 per cent. of the burnt area had been reconstructed, though unfortunately on the old lines, all the laudable plans for modernising the city having fallen through, owing to difficulties in obtaining the necessary funds. During 1919 large tracts of land in the back of the native city were reclaimed and several new roads were constructed. A scheme for the development of a Greater Hankow was started with the backing of the Government.

The Hankow Race Club and Recreation Ground was incorporated in 1904, and developed in a remarkable way. The property of the Club is extensive enough to embrace a racecourse, an 18-hole golf course, football and cricket field, swimming pool, and, in fact, every branch of sport indulged in by the members. Apart from this club, which is chiefly devoted to sport, there are the Hankow Club, the Russian Club and the French Club, which have splendid libraries, billiard rooms, bowling alleys, etc. The Hankow Golf Club was instituted in 1878. There is also a Chinese Race Club and an International Race Club with courses as good as any in China.

The success of the northern expedition of the Canton Government and the capture of the Wuhan cities and the establishment of the Nationalist headquarters at Wu-chang late in 1926, altered the position entirely from the point of view of foreign trade. A mob, aroused by agitators, stormed the British concession and, in order to avoid bloodshed, the unarmed British marines who were defending the place were ordered to withdraw and British women and children were evacuated. All British business firms closed down for a time and the Nationalist Government took possession with a Committee of Administration. Following upon protracted negotiations the British concession was handed over to the Chinese Authorities and is now adminis. tered by them. The Chen-O'Malley agreement provided that the municpal administration of the former British concession should be taken over by a Sino-British Council. This arrangement took effect on March 16th, 1927, and the administration of the ex-British concession has worked with remarkable smoothness and efficiency.

As a result of protracted hostilities the adverse conditions prevailing in Hankow during the latter part of 1937 continued, the year under review witnessing a steady decline in all economic activity in the area. River communication with Shanghai, severed in August 1937 as a result of the booms laid across the Yangtze at Kiangyin and later at Matang, remained suspended throughout the year. Apart from the Eurasia Aviation Corporation's air service between Hongkong and Hankow, which could handle only a negligible number of parcels, the Canton-Hankow Railway—kept open by herculean efforts on the part of its repair gangs—remained the only means of transportation between the Hankow area and the coast capable of carrying cargo in any appreciable quantity. The extensive use of this railway for the importation of Government supplies however, restricted the import of general merchandise from the coast to comparatively minor quantities, and although outward shipments of merchandise were larger, the restricted freight space available and the inevitable risks and delays en route resulted in a heavy and general decline in the port's export trade. As hostilities approached Kiukiang in June, a large influx of refugees took place, while the removal of factories—both local and those recently transferred from points down river—and shops commenced, so that by August all factories in Wu-Han had been dismantled and their machinery sent up river to Ichang, Chungking, etc., to which places a considerable portion of the population also evacuated. This exodus continued up to the arrival of the Japanese forces on the 26th, October, by which time local business had come to complete standstill. The occupation of the three cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang was generally peaceful, but complete stagnation of business existed locally during the last two months of the year. Customs statistics for the port of Hankow were as follows according to value: direct imports from abroad, $2.7 million as compared with $33.4 million during 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $47.1 million as against $124.6 million; direct exports abroad, $0.4 million as against $9 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $65.3 million as compared with $201.4 million. With regard to the Hankow Customs statistics of trade with foreign countries, it must be remembered that in the case of imports these include only steamer-borne import cargo paying duty at Hankow, excluding the considerable volume of goods on which duty may have been paid at another port (e.g., Shanghai); on the other hand, they include goods which, while destined for ports farther up river, have paid duty at Hankow. As regards outward cargo also, the Hankow Customs statistics of foreign trade include only cargo carried directly abroad by steamer from Hankow, other goods, even if declared for transhipment abroad at another port and paying duty at Hankow, being recorded under interport trade.

Since the comparatively small quantities of cargo imported from Hongkong and Canton by rail are not recorded in the port's statistics but by the port of first entry into China, the value of $2.7 million under direct imports from abroad represents only parcels brought up by air and withdraws of small stocks of cargo still remaining in bond from 1937. Similarly, the value of $0.4 million under direct exports covers only parcels sent by air direct to Hongkong, goods carried outward by rail southwards—most of which are eventually shipped abroad—being recorded in the Customs statistics of the port of final shipment (e.g., Canton or Kowloon).

A considerable decline took place in the consumption of kerosene oil, since only a comparatively small quantity remained in bond at the beginning of the year and only negligible quantities could arrive by rail from the South. With the exception of aviation gasolene, a large falling-off took place under most petroleum products, prices advancing considerably. Arrivals of sugar amounted to about half of the preceding year's figures and were made up largely of importations from Szechwan; prices were governed entirely by local conditions and difficulties of replacement, good profits being made from such stocks as were available. Disruption of communications much restricted the trade in chemicals, there being, however, a good demand for khaki sulphur dyes. Trade in piece-goods declined to insignificant proportions as a result of the continued closure of Japanese import firms and general dislocation of transport facilities. Spring harvests were reported abundant as a result of favourable weather conditions at the opening of the year. The winter wheat crop was also reported good. On account of the continued enforcement of the embargo on export, the bulk of this commodity is reported to have been sold to local mills at low prices. Due to heavy rainfall during the summer months on the upper reaches of the Han River, the early rice crop was generally better than that of the following autumn; exports diminished considerably as was to be expected. With the Canton-Hankow Railway as the only practicable means of transportation from Hankow, export trade was generally restricted. Nevertheless it is estimated that a total of from 50,000 to 60,000 tons of cargo, with an approximate value of $40 million, was transported south during the year. Rail-borne cargoes are not recorded in the Customs statistics; the approximate figures given below represent, however, the general features of those staple exports declared for abroad via the Canton—Hankow Railway, exports which in normal times would have found their exit down river by steamer. Shipments of wood oil were satisfactory and are estimated to have amounted to about 350,000 quintals; supplies were adequate to meet demand and prices ruled fairly steady. It is stated that about 100,000 to 120,000 quintals remained in stock locally at the end of the year. As no facilities existed on the railway for transportation of frozen egg products, the market was left entirely to producers of dried and preserved varieties. A fairly good year was reported at satisfactory prices, shipments being estimated at about 49,000 quintals. Owing to their bulky nature and difficulties in transportation, trade in cow and buffalo hides was very slack; prices dropped steadily up to the middle of the year, after which no shipments were forwarded. Very little interest was shown in nutgalls, sesamum seed and beans. Trade in Hankow tea also diminished as a result of general dislocation resulting from hostilities. It is reported that lack of shipping facilities resulted in a 50 per cent decrease under pig intestines. Arrivals of raw cargo were restricted from many districts through disruption of communications, while prices were not satisfactory. Difficulties were also encountered in the bristle trade, and prices gradually declined throughout the season; buyers abroad demanded that sales must be guaranteed "on board" ocean steamer. It is estimated that about 7,000 quintals of bristles were shipped by railway to the South during the year. In spite of considerable risks, trade in ramie was generally satisfactory; demand was good, and relatively steady price levels were maintained both here and abroad. It is estimated that about 60,000 quintals of ramie was shipped out of the port, leaving some 20,000 quintals awaiting transportation. Though demand was slow, exports of goat skins were well maintained and are reported to have amounted to about 1,600,000 skins, consisting of Hankows and Szechwans. The cotton trade was badly dislocated by war conditions; export to Shanghai and Japan came to almost a complete standstill, but there was a good native demand which resulted in considerable shipments to up-river districts. As the Canton-Hankow Railway afforded the only means of exit, all supplies of antimony were shipped direct from Changsha to Hongkong.

The total tonnage entering and clearing under General Regulations amounted to 1.5 million tons, showing a large decrease of about 5 million tons over the previous year. No ocean vessels reached Hankow during 1938. Channels throughout the district remained normal. The Hankow Crossing showed the least recorded depth in the Hankow district on the 7th, March, when 3.962 metres of water was obtainable. As a result of military requirements, considerable progress was made in the general improvement and upkeep of all main roads. Extension to telephone services was also carried out. The Eurasia Aviation Corporation and the China National Aviation Corporation maintained air connexions between Wu-Han and Hongkong, Sian, Changsha, Ichang, Chungking, Chengtu and Kunming. Rigorous control of exchange was exercised by the Government throughout the period under review. Remittances to Shanghai and abroad became much restricted. Considerable fluctuation took place during the year in the open market exchange rate of the Hankow dollar.

YOCHOW

Yochow, with a population of some 500,000 is situated in latitude 29° 26′ 29″ N. and longitude 113° 11′ 6″ E. at the outlet of the Tungting Lake. Past it ebbs and flows practically the whole of the trade of Hunan, which, however, adds little to the prosperity of the place, as it simply passes by after having paid its dues and duties. The city being the gateway of the province holds a very strategic position from a military point of view and consequently has always been a bone of contention among the warring factions, whenever there is internicine strife in this centre. The opening of Changsha in July, 1904, took away much of Yochow's transit trade. The recently-completed Canton-Hankow Railway passes through Yochow.

The province of Hunan used to be to foreign commerce what Tibet has been to the explorer—a Forbidden Land—and it is only two decades ago that foreigners were stoned out of Yochow. In 1904, the people were described as showing a "friendly attitude" to all foreigners, which attitude is now well maintained in spite of the recent activities of the extremists in this province.

The province is rich in many forms of wealth, though the inhabitants say it consists of "three parts mountain, six water, and one arable soil." The staple exports are rice, raw cotton, ramie, lotus nuts, vegetable tallow and wood oil. In past years much rice was allowed to leave the province, with the result that the Hunan people themselves have at times suffered acutely from rice famine.

Steam launches and steamers run through from Hankow to Changsha with cargo and passengers, under river passes; and from Yochow to inland places known as the "Lake Ports" under Inland Waters Steam Navigation Rules—principally to Changteh-Yiyang and Tsingshih. The business is increasing, more particularly, with the last, mentioned place.

The city of Yochow is perched on a bluff in a very picturesque way. Its site is however, not adapted for transit trade, and it offers no shelter for small craft. The port has, therefore, been opened at Chengling, five miles to the north and only a mile from the Yangtsze, where a small creek provides the needed shelter for cargo-boats and other vessels, though the steamer anchorage is bad, being fully exposed to the frequent northerly gales, while the bottom affords bad holding ground. Here the Chinese Government has set aside a place for a cosmopolitan settlement, for which they have provided roads, police, etc.; the site contains level ground for business purposes, well raised, but not too high above flood limits, while higher ground gives good and healthy sites for foreign houses. Work on the formation of the Settlement and bunding operations was commenced in 1900, and a Custom House and Quarters have been built. It is to be noted, therefore, that the Yochow Custom House is situated at Chengling and not at Yochow as the name would lead one to believe. British, Japanese and Chinese shipping firms maintain regular communications with the "Lake Ports" and have their agents stationed at Chengling. Given peace, Chengling is undoubtedly one of the most healthy towns in the Yangtsze Valley. Since the occupation of this port by the Cantonese Army in August, 1926, the Chengling Bluff has twice been fortified and the Harbour mined in order to prevent a hostile army coming down river from Shasi.

A noteworthy feature of 1907 was the connection of Changteh by steamer during the high-water season—June to October—the resulting trade being valued at Tls. 617,000. Connection with Changteh is now maintained practically throughout the year by steamers of the river type, and tugs and lighters. Buoys and lights were established in 1907 to mark the channel across the lake. The difficulties and risks of this route are considerable, and it is probable that it will be found advisable to adopt the somewhat longer route viâ Lulintan; on account of the sharp bends of the River Yuan in its lower reaches, specially adapted steamers will probably have to be used. The question of making Changteh an "open port" was considered in 1906 and again taken up in the spring of 1915, and Chinese officials visited the place to enquire into the conditions, but it still remains open only to vessels under Inland Water Steam Navigation rules. In 1920, a new organization for the technical control of the Middle Yangtsze Aids to Navigation and channels was instituted by the Customs.

The Standard-Vacuum Oil Company has established an oil installation at a point about two miles below the Settlement. It has erected three tanks and contemplates erecting three more. The first oil tanker direct from California arrived here during the high water season of 1926. This installation will be the centre of distribution for the upper Yangtsze and the "Lake Ports," such as Changteh, Yiyang and Tsingshih. Although all oil was withdrawn from the tanks in May, 1927, owing to the then disturbed conditions, the use of the tanks has been resumed since June, 1928.

The trade of Yochow was considerably diminished as a result of the complete severance of river communication between this port and Shanghai throughout the year under review. Direct imports from abroad completely fell off, while exports of local produce were considerably restricted owing to the Canton-Hankow Railway being the only practicable outlet to the coast. The transportation of Government supplies and dislocation of traffic occasioned by the Sino-Japanese hostilities prevented any extensive use being made of this means of transit. As hostilities approached Hankow, export trade was restricted to junk-borne shipments from Yochow and Tungting Lake ports to Changsha for transhipment into railway cars, which were more easily obtained there than at Yochow. With the farther south westerly advance of Japanese forces, all trade at Yochow came to a complete standstill about the 11th November. The Customs stations at Changteh, which had been moved from Yochow and Chenglingki in October, ceased to function on the 13th November. Direct imports from abroad recorded a nil value as compared with $0.6 million for 1937. There were no importations of kerosene oil—which usually represents the principal item under this trade,—while bonded stocks had all been withdrawn by the end of 1937. Even in normal year Yochow has no direct export trade, native products destined for foreign countries being re-exported at Hankow and treated at Yochow as interport movements. The value of coastwise imports of Chinese produce decreased to $5.8 million and that of coastwise exports to $2 million, as compared with $12.7 million and $15.2 million respectively in 1937. With the exception of nankeens—which advanced from 5,988 quintals valued at $0.6 million in 1937 to 28,193 quintals valued at $3.9 million,—a falling-off was recorded in the domestic import of piece-goods, due to the closing down of factories in war areas down river. As a result of disruption in river traffic, salt from Haichow declined to 41,663 quintals valued at $0.2 million, as compared with 1,236,672 quintals valued at $6.5 million during 1937. Yochow has long been a distributing centre of this commodity for the neighbouring districts. Cigarettes also declined, while cement fell off entirely. Coastwise shipments of wood oil—the mainstay of the export trade—declined to 12,553 quintals valued at $0.6 million, as against 164,357 quintals valued at $13.5 million in 1937. Disruption of river communication and lack of freight space on the railway to the South restricted the movement of this commodity. Ramie from Yüankiang declined for similar reasons to 20,708 quintals valued at $0.9 million from 22,737 quintals valued at $1 million in 1937. Decreases were also recorded in hides and lotus-nuts, while improvements were registered under nutgalls and raw cotton.

市 沙 Sha-si

Shasi (the "market on the sands") roughly 900 miles from the sea, is one of the ports opened to foreign trade under the Treaty of Shimonoseki (1895) the official declaration of the opening being dated the 1st October, 1896. The port is about 85 miles below Ichang. It is reclaimed from the river by a magnificent system of dykes and canals. The district suffers periodically from the flooding of the Yangtze. On July, 4th, 1935, the river rose to a height of 35. 7 feet, the highest level in the history of Shasi, and nearly plunged over the dyke into the low-lying roofs of 100,000 inhabitants, Many lives were lost in surrounding districts and whole towns disappeared under the waters. On the 9th and 10th May, 1898, a serious anti-foreign riot occurred at Shasi. The Customs Office and the residence of the Commissioner, the Customs boats, the premises of the China Merchants' Company and their hulk, the office of the Foreign Board, the Japanese Consulate, the premises occupied by the native agents of Messrs. Butterfield & Swire and Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., and a number of newly-erected Chinese houses were burnt by the mobs, kerosene oil being used to feed the conflagration, and the foreign residents were driven out of the port, narrowly escaping with their lives. The Custom-house was re opened on the 1st July of the same year. In August, 1898, an area 3,800 Chinese feet in length, by 800 to 1,200 in breadth, lying along the riverside below the town, was assigned to Japan as a Japanese Concession but was not developed and much of the land on which it would have stood has since undergone erosion. The British Consulate was withdrawn in January, 1899, British interests being placed under the care of the Consul at Ichang, whereas the outburst of Sino-Japanese hostilities in August, 1937 necessitated a complete evacuation of the Japanese Consul and his staff and up-to-now their probable return is very remote. A telephone service was introduced in March, 1921. A motor bus service between Shasi and Hankow was compteled in 1933, while bus services also run to Ichang in the west. Motor buses now leave Shasi daily at about 7 a.m. and reach Hankow soon after 4 p.m. on the same day. The trip by steamer from Hankow to Shasi takes from two to three days, by bus nine hours and by air one and half hours! The distance by water is nearly 300 miles and by air only one half as great, the numerous serpentine curves of the river being avoided by the plane. The Air-mail and passenger service between Hankow and Chungking via Shasi and Ichang was commenced in April 1931. Flights are made three times a week. A private company supplies the Shasi public with electricity. The Hankow Press Packing Co., Ltd. (Shasi Branch) started operations in September 1929, while the Shasi Cotton Testing Department of Hankow Bureau of Inspection and Testing for Commercial Commodities, a governmental organ, commenced work in October 1929. The SHASI Cotton Weaving and Spinning Factory was informally opened in May 19 31with a capital of $1,000,000. The Bank of China, Shanghai Commercial & Savings Bank and Bank of Communications have branch offices at Shasi, besides a few other banking establishments. The Young Brothers Banking Corporation is the only one having a modern and large building on the main street. A fine new bund, one of the best on the Yangtze, was completed along the Yang Ma Tou section of the waterfront in 1935.

TRADE IN 1938

The value of the trade of Shasi as recorded by the Customs was as follow: direct foreign imports $722 as compared with $147,000 in 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $9.5 million as against $4.3 million; direct exports abroad, nil as against $630; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $14.9 million as compared with $19.1 million. Importations of sugar, which in 1937 represented 84 per cent of the value of direct imports and totalled 10,369 quintals, were nil during 1938. Of domestic imports, cotton piece-goods dropped in value from $935,000 to $554,137; gunny bags from $154,211 to $49,745; and cigarettes from $1.2 million to $1.1 million. The decline in coastwise exports was primarily due to a decrease in coastwise shipments of raw cotton, which felt from 194,134 quintals valued at $12 million to 102,235 quintals valued at $5.7 million, with the coastwise shipment of cotton yarn also declining in quantity from 22,234 to 21,137 quintals. Rice also fell from 260,987 to 133,400 quintals, sesamum secd from 25,610 quintals to nil, and broad beans from 29,898 to 1,007 quintals. Coastwise exports of wheat flour increased in quantity from 7,141 to 22,523 quintals.

CHANGSHA

沙 長 Chaug-sha

Changsha (or "Long-sands," as the Chinese words may be translated) is the capital city of the province of Hunan. It stands on the right bank of the Siang river, which flows into the Tungting lake, and is about 100 miles south of the opening of the lake into the Yangtsze at the north-eastern corner of the province. It is in lat. 28.10 N. and long. 113. 1 E.

The name first occurs about B.C. 220 as that of the 36th and last of the commanderies into which the First Emperor divided the land after conquering it. It was used as the name of one of the kingdoms for about 100 years (B.C. 202-101) during the Han dynasty. Its greatest mark in history was its successful resistance to the 90 days' siege by the Taiping rebels in 1852 by methods which, afterwards employed elsewhere, led to the final defeat of the rebels by Tseng Kuo-fan, the greatest of all Chinese statesmen in the nineteenth century.

Changsha was opened as a treaty port by the China-Japan treaty of 1903. The Custom House was established on July 1st, 1904; a Japanese Consulate followed in November, and a British Consulate the next year. Since then, America and Germany have also sent representatives. These have since been withdrawn and Japan and Great Britain are the only countries which now maintain Consular posts in the port.

The Chuchow-Shuichow section of the Canton-Hankow Railway was completed in August. The first through train left Canton at 11 p.m. on September 1st and reached Wuchang at 8.30 p.m. on September 3rd. The provisional schedule calls for a regular service of two trains per week in each direction, but the rolling stock ordered by the railway administration from England is not yet available and much remains to be done before the the whole line will be in full running order. The service of the Eurasia Aviation Corporation between Peking, Hankow, Changsha and Canton, which was suspended in July, 1935, has not yet been re-opened.

The surrounding country is hilly and picturesque, especially on the west bank of the river, where the Yoluhshan rises some 900 ft. high. This hill, called "Yo Foothills," connected by its name with the great Nan-yo or "Southern Peak," is not actually connected with the Peak in its physical geography, though the Buddhist monastery on its slope is within the Nan-yo diocese. Near the top ridge is a replica of the famous Yü Tablet, which purports to be a monument raised by the Great Yü, in the third millennium B.C., in commemoration of his having redeemed the flooded lands of those days. The original stands on the most southern ridge of the "Southern Peak," which is a range of hills 20 miles long. The original is, however, a shameless fraud which cannot be dated earlier than the twelfth century A.D. The whole story of anyone in those very early days having any knowledge of the country as far south as Hunan is baseless legend and not historically authenticated fact. The hill, however, retains some sanctity from the legend and has a Confucian college at its base, a Buddhist temple in the centre of the slope, and a Taoist shrine on its ridge—hence the name of the "Hill of the Three Religions." The College boasts the possession of some very fine Chou dynasty bronzes and also some autograph writings of the celebrated scholar, Chu Hsi, who was connected with the college in the twelfth century. Near the Buddhist monastery, the trees are exceptionally tall and large. The whole slope here is well-wooded, and in the spring (when the azaleas are in flower) or autumn (when the leaves are of all tints) the scenery is of great beauty. From the balcony of the Taoist temple a commanding view of the southern stretches of the Siang on one side, and on the other a bird's-eye view of the whole city of Changsha and of the intervening island are obtainable.

One of the finest buildings inside the city is a memorial temple to Tseng Kuo-fan. In the beautiful gardens of this temple there is now established a High School and College for girls, the Principal of which, Miss Tseng, who holds the London degree of B. Sc., is the great grand-daughter of the distinguished statesman himself. There is a second memorial temple to Tso Tsung-t'ang, one of the most famous lieutenants of Tseng Kuo-fan. There is al so a temple on one of the western streets to Chia I, the most celebrated scholar of his day, who died in Changsha, B.C. 165 In the temple is a marble settee which is alleged to have been used by Chia I.

Outside the city there is a very fine hospital, which was erected at a cost of $185,000 by a former Yale graduate for the use of the Hunan-Yale Medical College The direction of the hospital is in the hands of a board, composed equally of representatives of the Hunan gentry and the Yale Mission. The Yale School and College buildings are in the immediate neighbourhood. These are all outside the north gate. Outside the south gate are the famed antimony works of the Huachang Company, which has branch offices in the Woolworth Building, New York. There are two electric-lighting companies.

On the island are to be found the British Consulate and the residences of the indoor Customs and Post Office staffs and of the managers of the Standard Oil, Asiatic Petroleum, British-American Tobacco Companies, Butterfield & Swire and many other mercantile firms.

Many new roads have been built and motor buses now run daily direct to Ningsiang, Yiyang, Changteh and Taoyuan to the Northwest, Hengchowfu, Leiyang. Chenchow and Ichang to the South and to Siangtan and Paoking to the Southwest from Changsha. The Changsha-Kweichow road, which runs via Changteh, T'aoyuan, Shenchow (Yuanling), Ch'enhsi and Yuanchow (Chihkiang), to Hwanghsien on the Kweichow border—a distance of about 835 kilometres—has been completed and opened to traffic. From Hwanghsien it is necessary to travel for two days by chair before the journey can be continued by road to Kweiyang. The Changsha-Szechwan road, branches off from the Changsha-Kweichow road at Shenchow (Yuanling), whence it runs via Luhsi, Ch'ien-ch'eng, Yungsui and Ch'at'ung, to Hsiushan—a distance of 220 kilometres. The road-bed has been laid as far as Ch'at'ung. It is hoped that the surfacing with stone and gravel will be completed and the road be opened to through traffic by November this year. The Changsha-Changteh-Lichow-Tungyomiao has been extended and opened to traffic as far as Shasi on the Yangtze. The Changsha-Hankow road, via P'ingkiang, T'ungch'eng and Tsungyang is complete except for a distance of 25 kilometres between P'ingkiang and T'ungch'eng. Progress is being made with this section, however, and through traffic between Changsha and Hankow is now under discussion. The Changsha-Kwangsi road, via Siangtan, Hengchow, Hungch'iao, Ch'iyang and Yungchow (Lingling, to Lishanp'u on the Kwangsi border, has been completed and opened to traffic. From the border it is necessary to travel by chair for half a day to Hwangshaho, whence the road has been completed as far as Kweilin. The Changsha-Kwantung road, via Siangtan, Hengchow and Leiyang, to Pingshek was completed and opened to traffic two years ago.

Trade in 1938

As recorded by the Customs, the value statistics for the trade of the port of Changsha were as follows: direct foreign imports, $617,000 as compared with $6.7 million in 1937; coastwise imports of Chinese merchandise, $19.7 million as against $25.8 million; direct exports, $5,000 as against $4,000; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $11.7 million as compared with $30 million. Much cargo also passed Changsha from Hankow and the Yangtze River regions by rail for Canton, which, not being passed under General Regulations, is not recorded by the Customs. The port, therefore, assumed considerable importance until its practically entire destruction by fire in October brought trade to a standstill. Of direct imports, kerosene, gasolene and sugar usually accounted for 90 per cent of the direct import trade, imports of gasolene which amounted to 1,922,200 litres in 1937 being, however, reduced to nil for 1938, with sugar also nil as against 75,460 quintals. Importations of kerosene oil were reduced in quantity from 25,809,316 to 2,846,244 litres. Under coastwise imports, wheat flour declined from 97,099 to 58,608 quintals and cotton yarn from 55,655 to 35,606 quintals, with an increase under cigarettes from 7,103 to 11,875 quintals. The interruption of traffic on the Yangtze River reduced recorded coastwise exports to practically nil; large quantities, however, of the staple exports usually appearing in the Customs returns, such as wood oil, tea oil, etc., were forwarded by rail south. Recorded coastwise exports of wood oil fell from 48,873 to 1,623 quintals, of tea oil from 59,311 to 1,164 quintals, and of fire-crackers from 22,648 to 2,318 quintals. Rice declined from over 1 million to 97,806 quintals. Under shipping, recorded tonnage under General Regulations fell from 574,409 to 277,191 tons.

昌宜 I-chang

Ichang is one of the four ports opened to foreign trade on the 1st April, 1877, in accordance with Clause 1, Section 3, of the Chefoo Convention. It is situated in lat. 30° 43.4′ N., long. 111° 12.8′ E., on the north bank of the river Yangtze, about 363 miles above Hankow, and some five miles below the entrance to the great Ichang Gorge, or just about 1,000 miles from the coast. The navigation of the river to this port is comparatively easy for vessels of light draught and has in recent years been rendered easier by the labours of the Customs River Department, which has marked every crossing and established numerous aids to navigation. The anchorage is off the left bank, and is good, except in freshets, when the anchors should be sighted every two or three days. The port is the centre of a hilly country, the productions of which are rice in the valleys, cotton on the higher grounds, winter wheat, barley, and also the tungtzu trees, from which the ordinary wood oil is obtained by pressing the nuts gathered from the trees. In the sheltered valleys, amongst the mountain ranges west of the city, oranges, lemons, pomeloes, pears, plums, and a very superior quality of persimmons are grown, and find a ready market in the city and at Shasi. The importance of Ichang is chiefly that of an emporium for goods in transit to and from Chungking. Most of the cargo for the latter port is landed here and transferred to steamers. Steam navigation is practicable for the larger vessels from the middle of April to the end of November and for the smaller vessels throughout the year. The rates for foreign passengers are much higher than on the lower Yangtsze. Aids to navigation and rules of the road through the gorges are efficiently maintained by the Government, with three River Inspectors functioning between Chungking and Ichang, night navigation having been introduced in 1936. The upward voyage to Chungking now takes between three and four days, and the return trip just under two days. The port is now connected by motor highway with Hankow and is an important station on the Hankow-Chungking and Shanghai-Chengtu air service lines. The Hupeh-Szechuan motor highway, which will pass Ichang, is under survey. The estimated Chinese population of Ichang is 110,000.

Trade in 1938

The effects of the hostilities were acutely felt at Ichang, transportations of commodities on the Upper Yangtze River being seriously handicapped, while air raids were frequent, with unceasing anxiety regarding the approach of Japanese forces. Despite, however, all adverse circumstances the trade of port was on the whole not unsatisfactory. The port value statistics were as follows: direct foreign imports, $15,000 as compared with $313,000; coastwise importations of native goods, $9.9 million as against $8 million; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $6.8 million as against $11.5 million for 1937. No exports abroad were recorded, shipment for foreign countries being of necessity transhipped at some other port. Direct imports of sugar, gasoline and kerosene were nil. Coastwise, or duty-paid, imports of gasolene from Hankow in 1938 totalled 1,409,350 litres only as compared with 4,786,950 litres in 1937, while the import from Hankow of duty-paid kerosene oil totalled 333,858 litres only. Coastwise imports of native cotton piece-goods were valued at $527,847 as against $1.3 million. Imports of native cotton yarn and raw cotton increased, while arrivals of Szechwan salt increased from 184,535 to 257,343 quintals, the increase recorded being due to the necessity of forwarding through Ichang supplies of salt usually received frow seaboard districts. All exports from Ichang were coastwise, wood oil exports amounting to 54,971 quintals as against 103,862 in 1937. As in the case of wood oil, coastwise shipments of such other staple products as black fungus, goat's skin, vegetable seed oil, and black tea all declined in volume.

Chinese vessels entered and cleared during 1938 numbered 2,064 vessels with a total tonnage of 923,277 as compard with 1,711 vessels with a total tonnage of 620,058 during 1937. Foreign entries and clearances numbered 906 vessels with a tonnage of 506,891, as against 1,292 vessels with a total tonnage of 640,608 during the preceding year. River conditions remained normal, the highest water-mark recorded at Ichang being 15.09 metres above zero on the 24th, July and the lowest 0.03 metres above zero on the 1st, March.

慶 重 Chung-king

The city of Chungking, situated in lat. 29 deg. 33 min. N., long. 106 deg. 30 min. E., may well be described as not only the commercial capital of Szechuen but of the whole of Western China. The foreign import trade centres here, and is then distributed by a smaller class of trading junks up the various rivers of the province.

The city occupies the end of a high and rocky bluff forming a peninsula, at the junction of the river Kia-ling with the Yangtsze, 1,400 miles from the mouth of the latter. The principal streets of the city, in which are many fine shops, are on the side of the Yangtsze, while new motor roads have now been driven right through the heart of the city, work still continuing in different directions, and one road leads out by way of the Tung Yuan Gate, where it merges with the new Great East Road to Chengtu, over 285 miles distant, which has been completed and is open to traffic. The city is surrounded by a crenelated stone wall which is some five miles in circumference, pierced with nine gates. This wall which has now been partially demolished, was built in 1761, replacing an older one. Chungking is now electrically lighted, the service being now controlled by the Municipality. The climate of Chungking is depressing, the summer being hot and damp, the winters raw and chilly, with thick fogs from November to March. The ordinary rise of the river is about 75 feet; on 6th August, 1898, it rose to 101 ft., on 11th August, 1905, to 108 ft., on 22nd July, 1920, to 95 ft. 2 in., on 14th July, 1921, to 100 ft., 90 ft. at the beginning of August 1931 and on 4th August 1936 to 93 feet. In 1908 it only attained a height of 52 feet 4 inches. According to a Chinese report, the river rose 120 feet in 1878. On the left bank of the Kialing and facing Chungking, extending below the junction of the two rivers, is the walled city formerly styled Kiangpei Ting and now known as Kiangpei Hsien. It is proposed eventually to connect the two towns by a steel bridge. These two cities and the large villages in their immediate neighbourhood are estimated to contain a population of about 700,000.

The port was declared open to foreign trade in 1891, since which date a large trade has been done both in imports and exports, carried at first in foreign chartered junks, but for the last twenty years in steam and motor vessels.

With the exception of the short period before the approach of the Chinese New Year, when the money market was very stringent, trade conditions at Chungking were throughout the year comparatively stable. The volume of trade was, not uunaturally, much restricted owing to the blockade of the Lower Yangtze River. Until the fall of the port of Canton in October trade was chiefly carried on via Hankow and the Canton-Hankow Railway, after which other outlets were found via Kweichow and Yunnan provinces, though these presented difficulties in connexion with the transport of relatively bulky commodities.

Comparative statistics for the trade of the port were as follows: direct foreign imports, $2.6 million as compared with $3.2 million during 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese goods, $34.54 million as against $46.12 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $203,131 as against $204,357; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $16.49 million as against $39.23 million. Gasolene and kerosene oil, usually the main imports from abroad, declined seriously: gasolene from 4.83 million to 1.14 million litres and kerosene oil from 8.96 million to 2.28 million litres. Among coastwise imports, raw cotton increased in quantity from 5,943 to 37,647 quintals, the increase being due to the removal from the war-stricken areas into the province of Szechwan of many spinning factories with their stocks of raw materials. Cotton yarn, though still heading the list, fell from 178,062 quintals valued at $19.4 million in 1937 to 98,285 quintals valued at $15.4 million. Owing to transport difficulties other staple imports also declined: cigarettes from 26,388 to 10,138 quintals and rice from 79,299 to 13,124 quintals. Direct exports abroad, as usual, consisted mainly of musk and expensive medicinal substances, etc., forwarded to Hongkong by aeroplane or parcel post. Under exports coastwise, sugar was the only item to show an increase—from 129,687 to 162,741 quintals—owing to the fact that, the supply of foreign sugar being practically cut off, Szechwan sugar more or less dominated the markets in Hupeh and Hunan provinces until the fall of Hankow at the close of October. Other staple exports coastwise registered considerable declines, as follows: wood oil from 206,357 to 128,870 quintals; undressed goat skins from 979,231 to 375,267 pieces; sheep's wool from 900,040 to 1,043 kilogrammes; silk from 531,746 to 29,653 kilogrammes; nutgalls from 14,966 to 5,610 quintals; medicinal substances from $2.5 million in value to $1.3 million; and bristles from 8,454 to 3,389 quintals. Difficulties in transport account generally for the decreases shown, though the decline in the export of bristles was in part due to lower production as a result of a shortage of foodstuffs during the drought. The output of Szechwan salt was greatly increased during the year owing to additional demand from the provinces of Hunan, Hupeh, Anhwei and Kiangsi, which were cut off from their usual supply of sea salt.

Regarding improvements to waterways on the Upper Yangtze, repairs effected to the first and second courses of the breakwater wall at Chaipantze, the stonework of which was found in November 1937 to have been displaced for lengths of 800 feet and 160 feet respectively. Attempts to further blast the Kunglingtan pinnacles were suspended for military reasons. Owing to transport difficulties the building of the Chungking-Chengtu Railway was temporarily suspended in the autumn, but was resumed again at the close of the year. The building of the Szechwan-Yunnan Railway from Ipin to Kunming, a distance of 691 kilometres, was commenced in August. Highway development proceeded apace, while further development was made in long-distance telephonic service.

杭州 Háng-chau

Hangchow, the capital of the province of Chekiang, is situated 120 miles south-west of Shanghai, and 110 miles south of Soochow, adjacent to the Chien-tang River the Green River of Robert Fortune's famous journeys to the neighbouring tea districts), at the apex of a bay which is too shallow for the navigation of steamers. The mouth of the river is, moreover, visited by a bore, or tidal wave, which further endangers navigation. The highest bores occur in autumn during the three days after the middle of the eighth moon, and Haining is the best place for observing this famous phenomenon, which is formed by the north-east trade wind heaping up the water of the Pacific on the China coast and causing enormous tides. Hangchow Bay is shaped like a funnel, and the mass of water rushing up, more and more concentrated as it advances, is suddenly confronted by the current of the river. The constriction and opposition, acting in concert, bank up the rising water. Gathering momentum and speed with the immense pressure of the ocean behind it, thus forcing its volume into the ever-narrowing waterway, the bore occasionally attains, at a favourable spring-tide, a height of as much as 15 feet as it rushes, with a roar like thunder, along the sea-wall on the northern shore of the Bay, at a rate sometimes reaching 12 miles an hour.

Before the Taiping rebellion Hangchow shared with Soochow the reputation of being one of the finest cities in the Empire on account of its wealth and splendour, but it was almost destroyed by the rebels. Since then it has recovered to a considerable degree, and is once more populous and flourishing, though it has not yet regained its former pitch of prosperity. Historically, Hangchow is perhaps the most interesting city in the Republic. The earliest reference to it in the annals dates back to B.C. 2198. The great Shih huang-ti visited the place in B.C. 210, and the kings of the Wu-Yüeh dynasty made it their capital. It was, however, under the Sung dynasties (circa A.D. 960-1200) that Hangchow became most famous as a capital. Marco Polo spent considerable time in the city, and, to this day, his image may be seen in the famous and picturesque Ling-yin Buddhist Monastery. Hangchow is indeed a great centre of Buddhism, and its temples include some of the most remarkable in China. The famous Yo Wang Temple, on the West Lake, which perpetuates the name of a revered Chinese patriot in the 12th century, has been reconstructed under the auspices of the Military Governor, who has been successful in raising large sums to meet the expenditure involved.

Hangchow was declared open to foreign trade on the 26th September, 1896, in accordance with the terms of the Japanese Treaty. The latest census taken in May, 1933 by the local authorities shows that the population is 529,663.

One of the sights of Hangchow is the beautiful Western Lake, dotted with islets crowned with shrines and memorial temples. Several of the islands are connected by causeways. The general picturesque effect is heightened by temples, pagodas, and similar monuments judiciously placed in effective spots; while the slopes of the hills bordering the lake on the west are bright with azaleas, honeysuckle, and peach-blossom at various seasons of the year; and clusters of bamboos, several kinds of conifers, tallow and camphor trees, and maple, in rich profusion, all enhance the grandeur of the scene. Foreign-style houses and villas are also springing up along the lake shore, and a motor scenic road around the lake has been completed as far as Linying temple The western wall of the city has been pulled down to some extent, and a broad lake shore promenade, about two miles in length, with spacious gardens has been constructed. Indeed, the whole of this district has been laid out with a series of imposing tree-bordered thoroughfares, all of great length and width, comparable with the principal streets of any large city in the world. In this area the buildings are chiefly foreign-style, many of the Government offices and other premises being well constructed and of impressive size. Several hotels, in semi-foreign-style, have been opened, including one near the City Railway Station and others near the Public Garden on the Lake, besides one with western accommodation on the lake-shore near the Imperial Island. A fine Y.M.C.A. building was completed early in 1920 The excursions around Hangchow are numerous and extraordinarily picturesque; and any person who can allow a month for the trip should not fail to explore the rapids of the Ch'ien-t'ang River as far as the Anhwei border. The green crystalline water and constant alternation of gorges and park-like rolling country, the lofty heights, heavily afforested right down to the sandy banks with every variety of conifer, camphor tree, scrub oak, maple, tallow tree, bamboo, etc., combine to form a series of landscapes scarcely equalled in Japan. Sport of all kinds is to be had in profusion, including excellent fly-fishing.

The site selected for the Foreign Settlement extends for half a mile along the east bank of the Grand Canal; it covers over half a square mile and is four miles from the nearest point of the city wall. The Japanese Settlement adjoins it on the north and is about the same size. The Custom-house and Commissioner's and Assistants' residences are built on the Customs Lot, and there is also a Chinese Police Station in a modern building. The Hangchow Electric Light Company has erected outside the Kên Shan Mên a large installation for the supply of current to the suburbs.

Some three or four miles south-west of Hangchow city lies the rising little town of Zakow, situated upon the Ch'ien-t'ang River at the railway head. The Socony-Vacuum Corporation, the Asiatic Petroleum Co., and several missionary establishments (including a large College) have their headquarters here. For residential purposes the hilly sites in the vicinity, overlooking the broad estuary and open to the sea breezes, afford far more sanitary locations than the low-lying malarial Settlement 10 miles away.

Halfway between Hangchow and Shanghai is Kashing, where the Grand Canal joins the Whangpoo River on which Shanghai is situated. Kashing is a Customs Station under Hangchow and was first opened in 1898 for collecting duties on foreign opium, owing to the fiscal arrangements being against the collection at Hangchow.

A railway from the Settlement to the further end of Hangchow City near the Ch'ien T'ang river was completed in September, 1907. It was built solely by Chinese and with Chinese capital. There is now railway connection with Shanghai viâ Kashing. Twenty-eight miles north of Hangchow is situated the well known summer resort of Mokanshan which is now connected with the motor road leading from Hangchow to Nanking and it can be reached in one hour's time from Hangchow. Special bus service is also maintained along this line during the hot season. It can be reached from Shanghai by way of the railway and a motor-launch service in ten hours. There are now over 500 houses on the slope of a hill about 2,250 feet high. The scenery is magnificent and the views are very grand. Bamboo forests cover the mountain and afford shade to all the roads, and clear mountain springs abound. Chairs and coolies for baggage are always available, and are under contract with the Mokanshan Association. Houses more or less completely furnished can be rented. The difference in temperature from the plain amounts to 10° F. in the day and 15° F. at night.

Save for the prevalence of malaria—which, however, is not of a virulen type—the climate of Hangchow is fairly salubrious. July and August are hot, the spring months are wet and raw, but the autumn is delightful, and the winter is cold and breezing.

Trade in 1938

The port of Hangchow, having been occupied in 1937 and remaining in Japanese occupation throughout 1938 with no Customs functioning, no report on trade or trade statistics are available.

NINGPO

波 甯 Ning-po

Ningpo, one of the five ports originally thrown open to foreign commerce by the British Treaty of Nanking in 1842, is situated in lat. 29° 55′ 12″ N. and long. 121° 22 E. at the confluence of Rivers Yung, Fenghua and Yuyao in the province of Chekiang, of which it is the Yung which runs into the sea at Chinhai some 13 miles away. The foundation of Ningpo as a departmental city dates from the 10th century, but the principal interest attaching to its early records arises from the fact that the first development on a large scale of European intercourse with China took place at this point. The place was "discovered" in A.D. 1517 by the embassy to Canton under the Portuguese Fernão Peres d'Andrade, and the first notice of Portuguese trade at Ningpo occurs about A.D. 1522, or a few years after the expulsion of the Portuguese from Kwangtung. The settlement was at Chinhai, and by 1542 there were a senate house, two churches, two hospitals and hundreds of well-built private residences, the community then consisting of 3,000 adults, besides women and children, of whom 1,200 were Portuguese. Their lawless acts in plundering the surrounding villages, however, led to reprisals being instituted in this year by the Governor of Chekiang, and in five hours the settlement was utterly demolished, 800 of the Portuguese being massacred, 25 of their vessels, and 42 junks being destroyed by a Chinese force consisting of 60,000 men and 300 junks. The next attempt at trade was made by the East India Company towards the end of the 17th century, when a factory was established at the island of Chusan, some 40 miles from Ningpo, the nearest point at which foreign merchants were allowed to reside. The experiment, however, proved unsatisfactory and the factory was abolished in 1703. Thence, till 1832 when the "Lord Amherst" visited the port, Ningpo was visited only by two or three foreign vessels. When hostilities broke out between Great Britain and China in 1839, the fleet moved north from Canton, captured Chinhai in the first week in October 1841 with some 2,200 men and 12 field pieces. On the 13th October Ningpo city was peacefully occupied and a garrison stationed there. On 10th March, 1842 an attempt was made by the Chinese to re-take the city, but the British artillery repulsed them with great slaughter. Ningpo was, however, evacuated on 7th May, and, on the proclamation of peace in the following August, the port was thrown open to foreign trade. For some time, however, there were practically no foreign residents, but in December, 1843 the first British Consul was appointed, and took up his residence in the portion set apart for foreigners on the north bank of the river Yung. In 1857 attention was directed to the port through a repetition of the 1542 massacre of Portuguese, whose lawless piratical acts, after a lapse of three centuries, again drew upon themselves the vengeance of the injured natives on the 25th June in that year. From this blow Portuguese prestige and enterprise have never recovered. Ningpo was easily captured by the Taiping rebels on the 9th December, 1861, its garrison then consisting of between 3,000 and 4,000 men with heavy artillery. The rebels displayed great anxiety to remain on good terms with foreigners, and an active trade in arms, rice, and silk at once sprang up. The native population, however, deserted the city, many of the inhabitants seeking refuge among the foreigners in their settlement. The British and French naval officers commanding the men-of-war lying in the river were directed to protect this tract of land from any invasion by insurgents. Musket shots from a rebel battery on the city wall directed at this territory and the men-of war, however, eventually led to a bombardment of the city on the 10th May, 1862, and to its capture on the same day by combined British and French forces. It was immediately handed over to the Imperial authorities, and eventually a monument on the city bund was built of the materials composing the battery and inscribed to the memory of those foreign troops who had fallen in the action. This monument was restored in 1906, and in June, 1932, was removed to the Foreign cemetery in the Campo, as the place set apart foreign residence is called. An official ceremony of re-dedication was held on May 6,1933.

Ningpo is built on a plain which is surrounded by many small hills. The walls of the city, originally enclosed a space of some five miles in circumference, they were pulled down in 1931 and macadamised roads now occupy the entire site. Ningpo has the reputation of possessing the fourth library in the Republic of which the founder was Fan Chin (范欽) a high officer under the Ming Dynasty. There are also many beautiful temples. The Fukien temple of "Mother of Heaven" is famous for its carved pillars. The Nyo Wang (育王) and Tien Dong (天童) monasteries, which are accessible by launches or motor bus, are situated in the hills some forty li from city. The former is celebrated for its "Holy Pearl" (舍利珠) and "Shining Pine-tree" (放光松) and the latter for its wealth. The railway to Hangchow is completed only as far as Pakuan (百官) but there is a motor road to Hsiao Shan (蕭山) near the bank of Chien Dong River (錢塘江) some 90 li from Shaohsing (紹興). Four main bus routes starting from Ningpo are in operation: (1) The Ning-Feng Public Road (鄞奉汽車公路) which joins Ningpo with Fenghua by motor transport of about 1¾ hours; (2) The Ning-Chin-Tze Public Road (鄞鎮慈公路) which starts from Ningpo, passe) Lotchiao (駱駝橋) and terminates at Kwei Hai Wei (觀海衛) in Tzeki (慈谿); (3) The Ning-Chuan Motor Bus Road (甯穿長途汽車路) from Ningpo to Chuan Shan (穿山) along the coast, covering a distance of 42 kilometres; (4) TheNing-Huan Road (甯橫汽車路) from Ningpo to Huangshan Pu. Passengers from Ningpo to Hangchow and vice-versa can make the journey in three ways: (1 by the combined method of rail, ferry and motor bus; (2) by motor bus via Kwei Hai Wei, Tsao-O (曹娥) Shaohsing (紹興) and Asiao Shan (蕭山) with the assistance of ferry boats when crossing the rivers; or (3) by motor bus via Fenghua (奉化), Hsinchong (新昌), Chen Hsien (嵊縣), Shaohsing and Hsiao Shan. There is also a landing ground for aeroplanes in T'uan Tang (段塘) outside the south gate, which was made by order of the Ministry of War in 1932, but no air traffic has yet taken place.

The population of Ningpo is estimated at 260,000. There are a cotton mill, a match factory, an electric light company, a telephone company, a flour mill, two coal ball factories, three knitting factories, two cotton weaving and dyeing factories and two canned goods factories. A new stock-breeding school has been established at Fênghua (奉化) by General Chiang Kai-shek at his personal expense. There are ten middle schools (four of which belong to foreign missions) and about a hundred primary schools. In all educational institutions girls play their part and co-education is encouraged. There is no college in the port as yet. There are some ten Chinese foreign style banks; no foreign bank has ever been established since the opening of the port in 1842. Foreign business interests are represented in only four firms: Butterfield and Swire, Standard-Vacuum Oil Company, Asiatic Petroleum Company and Olivier Chine, but in all cases the local management has been entrusted to Chinese agents. All foreign business is now in the hands of Chinese agents, the last foreign agent having left the port in April, 1932. There are five main steamship lines, one of which is British, the rest being Chinese; and steamers proceed to and from Shanghai daily except on Sundays. Small launches ply regularly to inland places along the coast and to the Buddhist island of Pootoo, a well-known place of pilgrimage and where foreigners may spend holidays during the summer. The staple exports of the district are green tea, straw mats, straw and rush hats, samshu, bamboo poles, cotton yarn and vegetable medicines. The Ningpo Lakes are very beautiful and provide excellent shooting. There is a proposal to make San Men Wan (三門灣) into a good modern harbour.

The year at Ningpo opened in an atmosphere of general uncertainty and anxiety due to the probable approach of hostilities from Hangchow and neighbouring districts. Shipping was subjected to increasingly strict emergency regulations during the year, with the port either partly or even completly closed to traffic. There was, furthermore, a large exodus of the population to country districts and to inland towns. As time passed, and with the fighting front apparently stabilised on the Ch'ient'ang River, the population generally and the mercantile community in particular became inured to the situation, with an obvious and by no means unsuccessful effort on the part of all to adapt themselves to the emergency conditions. As a result of excellent harvests, conditions in the rural districts continued prosperous, the maintenance of purchasing power in the rural districts reacting favourably on urban centres. The closure of normal trade outlets at delta and Lower Yangtze ports tended to favour Ningpo, the total trade of the port reaching a value of $62 million. According to Customs statistics, direct imports from abroad were valued at $1.2 million as compared with $2.1 million in 1937; coastwise imports of Chinese goods, $16.1 million as against $18.7 million; direct exports abroad, $4.8 million as against $26,000; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $39.9 million as compared with $20.7 million. Under direct imports, kerosene oil fell from 6,446,263 to 4,728,127 litres; gasolene from 1,550,478 litres to nil; and liquid fuel from 2,556 to 1,115 metric tons. Sugar imports also declined in quantity from 49,750 to 18,765 quintals, and rice and paddy from 9,953 quintals to nil. Of coastwise imports, cotton piece-goods declined from 33,251 to 16,557 quintals. Tea, totalling 47,409 quintals valued at $4.7 million, comprised the entire direct export abroad, with coastwise exports of green tea totalling 49,124 quintals. The principal articles under coastwise exports of Chinese produce were mats and buntal fibre hats, both commodities totalling just over 1,000,000 pieces. Hemp fibre hats totalling 511,756 pieces as compared with 743,269 pieces in 1937; rush hats, 801,000 pieces as against 610,588 pieces; and hats, other kinds, 10,236 pieces as compared with 17,564 pieces.

Shipping, as already stated, was much restricted, steamers of Chinese nationality being suspended from the outbreak of hostilities. Foreign-flag steamers operating under General Regulations entered and cleared during the year numbered 597, with a total tonnage of 591,377 tons, as against 1,502 vessels totalling 2,196,257 tons in 1937.

WENCHOW

州温 Wan-chau

Wênchow, one of the five ports opened to foreign trade by the Chefoo Convention, is the chief town in the department of Wênchow, occupying the south-east corner of Chekiang province. The city is situated on the south bank of the river Ou, about 20 miles from its mouth, in lat. 28 deg. 1 min. 30 sec. N., long. 120 deg. 38 min. 45 sec. E. The site is a well cultivated plain, bounded on all sides by lofty hills. The walls are said to have been first erected during the fourth century, and they have been enlarged and re-built at various times since. They are formed of stone, diagonally laid at the foundation, and partly also of brick, and measure about four miles in circumference. The streets generally are paved with brick or stone and kept in careful repair by the householders. Many of them run side by side with small waterways, which in their turn communicate with navigable canals intersecting the whole city. There are numerous large nunneries and temples in Wênchow. The Custom House, outside the North Gate, various Yamêns, other public offices and the Foundling Hospital, are also among the chief buildings. The last-named institution, built in 1748, contains 100 apartments. The Roman Catholic Missionaries have a spacious and imposing church in the western part of the city. The English Methodist Mission has a church capable of seating about 1,000 people. In 1903 this Mission erected a fine college at a cost of $20,000, containing sleeping accommodation for over 100 students, and teaching accommodation for more than 200. Early in 1906 an extensive and substantially constructed Hospital was also completed by the Mission at a further outlay of fully $20,000. The building consists of a central block and two wings after the style of Hunt's Block, Guy's Hospital, and can accommodate about 200 patients. Among the objects of greatest interest and curiosity are two pagodas situated on Conquest Island, abreast of the city. They are both of great antiquity, and the temples between them were for some time the retreat of Ti Ping, the last Emperor of the Sung dynasty, when seeking to escape from the Mongols under Kublai Khan. His Majesty Ti Ping has left behind him autographs preserved to this day in one of the temples. A few members of the Customs staff occupy foreign-built houses on the island. There were Boxer troubles in the Pingyang district several Christians being murdered, in 1900, and all the missionaries left Wênchow, where, however, the officials were able to maintain order. During the summer months some of the foreign residents repair to the Northern Hills (大田山), across he river where several bungalows have been built.

There is no foreign settlement at Wênchow, and the foreign residents are a mere handful, consisting entirely of officials and missionaries. There is a considerable native export trade in tea, bitter oranges, tobacco, timber, charcoal, bamboos and kittysols, but manufactures do not flourish, though some excellent floor-matting and cross-stitch work are produced by local factories. The firms engaged in the timber trade are located in the west suburb, where are also the timber yards. Immense quantities of timber and bamboos are kept on hand.

During August and September of 1912 two abnormal freshets occurred in the Wênchow river, causing immense destruction of life and property. In the upper reaches of the main river the water rose 60 feet above normal level, washing away villages and carrying away houses bodily. Some 30,000 people are reported to have been drowned in the Yungchia, Chingtien, Ch'uchow and Juian magistracies. Such a calamity was unprecedented within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Two particularly severe typhoons in the summer of 1920 caused enormous damage in the neighbourhood. Haimen, a neighbouring city, about 85 miles by sea north-east of Wenchow, was partially destroyed on July 15th by a tidal wave with great loss of life; while in the Nanchi River valley, opposite Wenchow, an equally large loss of life was reported in the second typhoon between September 4th and 6th. In August 1923 and 1926 this port was visited by severe typhoons, although they did not cause much damage either afloat or ashore.

During a year when many ports were suffering partial or complete dislocation of trade, Wenchow enjoyed a period of comparative tranquillity and prosperity, trade statistics for the year 1938 being as follows: direct foreign imports were valued at $1.9 million as compared with $842,050 in 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise at $27.4 million as against $6.6 million; direct foreign exports at $6.2 million as against $540,657; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce at $20.6 million as compared with $4.3 million. With a few exceptions foreign imports showed advances. Among the leading articles, sugar occupied first place with a total of 20,439 quintals as against 15,701 quintals during 1937. Paraffin wax was second on the list with an aggregate import of 12,248 quintals as compared with 9,512 quintals, while mangrove bark advanced from 500 quintals in 1937 to 11,127 quintals. Commodities such as sulphate of ammonia, raw hemp, chlorate of potash, metal manufactures, artificial indigo, birds' nests, panama straw and sulphur black, which showed a nil import for 1937, were among the main imports during 1938. Oils, usually forming one of the chief imports, registered considerable decreases, kerosene oil declining by 27 per cent and liquid fuel by 39 per cent, while imports of gasolene were practically nil. Coastwise imports comprised chiefly woollen piece-goods and textile products. Cigarettes, one of the main imports in 1937, failed to maintain their position, but medicines, sugar, cotton socks and stockings, rubber boots and shoes, glass and glassware, stationery and toilet requisites, which appeared only in negligible quantities in the 1937 returns, were among the leading domestic imports during the year. Beancake and yellow beans, bean oil, groundnut oil, wheat flour and coal, however, declined, largely due to the closure of factories in Shanghai and vicinity. Of exports abroad, tea and wood oil constituted the bulk, tea leaf totalling 38,434 quintals as against 133 quintals, and wood oil 43,910 quintals as compared with 3,783 quintals. The export abroad also of kittysols was well maintained. Under coastwise exports, tea leaf totalled 55, 312 quintals as against 3,556 quintals; wood oil, 28,049 quintals as against 2,106 quintals; while 3rd quality paper exported coastwise was valued at $3.7 million as compared with $343,915; fresh eggs totalled over 96 million pieces as against 5.7 million pieces; and kittysols, 4.5 million pieces as against 3.4 million pieces. Of pig lard 21,121 quintals was shipped as compared with 971 quintals, while of softwood timber the value of exports chiefly to Shanghai and Haimen, was $679,587 as against $483,377 during the preceding year. During the year the total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared under General Regulations was 644,479 as compared with 195,889 in 1937, British vessels heading the list with 210,107 tons.

SANTUAO

澳都三 San-tuao

Santuao was voluntarily opened to foreign trade by the Chinese Government on the 8th May, 1899. The port includes the whole of the magnificent Santu Inlet, which is situated some 70 miles north of Foochow. The island of Santuao in the centre of the inlet. The harbour is certainly one of the finest on the China coast: the approaches to it are well-defined, and vessels of the largest size may enter at any time, regardless of the state of tide. H.M.S. Waterwitch surveyed the whole of the inlet in 1899, and an Admiralty chart has been published. A telegraph cable was successfully laid from the mainland to the island July, 1905, and communication established with all China ports. A new cable connecting the telegraph office at Santuao with the mainland was laid in May, 1921, and the inconvenience caused by receiving and dispatching all messages from the other side of the harbour, which had been experienced for four years previously, was thus removed. A long distance telephone system was installed in 1936 connecting Foochow as well as the principal towns bordering the Santu Inlet.

The port of Santuao serves important tea districts as much of the tea exported from Foochow to Europe is first shipped from Santuao. No building operations worth mentioning have been undertaken at the port, and no modern methods have as yet been introduced in the manufacture of the principal local products —paper and pottery, except softwood planks, which are manufactured by a modern saw mill though excellent raw material is close at hand, especially extensive deposits of kaolin capable of yielding far superior pottery than is now brought on the market from this district. The iron mines in the districts of Kutien, Fuan, and Siapu, where the deposits were reported in 1918 to be of a promising nature, have not yet been properly exploited, and so far no smelting work s at Santuao, as then anticipated, have been erected, so that a regular trade in this, valuable mineral does not yet exist here. Since 1937 manufacture of black tea by machinery has been introduced by the Fuan Agricultural Experimental Station under the auspices of the progressing Fukien Provincial Government. Most of the trade is transhipped at Foochow though occasionally direct imports were effected by tramps arriving from Shanghai with cotton piece goods, flour, etc. or from Hongkong with sulphate of ammonia. The chief towns of the district are Funing, Fu-an, Ningte and Shouning.

Santuao being of little importance politically or economically, the year passed peacefully, though trade did not escape the general depression. Owing to the blockade of the China coast, steamer traffic between Foochow and Santuao was largely interrupted, though junk traffic from Santuao was comparatively well maintained. Excellent crops of rice and other cereals permitted a good level of subsistence. The value statistics as recorded by the Customs were as follows: direct foreign imports, $277,000 as against $160,000 for 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese produce, $1,800 as against $670,000; direct exports to foreign countries, $51,000 as against $14,000; and coastwise exports of Chinese produce, $3.1 million as against $4.2 million. Imports of kerosene oil from abroad and coastwise declined in quantity from 1,266,503 litres, the rise in price tending to cut down demand. The import also of sulphate of ammonia fell off considerably from 9,908 to 2,290 quintals. The direct import of sugar was nil its place being taken by the native brown sugar. Among staple domestic exports, black tea increased in quantity from 16,631 to 18,242 quintals; green tea, on the other hand, fell away from 34,370 to 22,050 quintals. The Tea Experimental Station established last year at Fuan was removed during the year to Tsungan in the Northern Fukien. Exports of paper fell to nil from 6,955 quintals during 1937, the demand for this article in Dairen having entirely ceased owing to the hostilities. The rice-bowl industry has also been practically suspended. The bowls, hand-made at a village called Wanyao on the opposite bank to Santuao, were formerly shipped in considerable quantities to Shantung and Manchuria, but no shipments have taken place since the opening of hostilities, with the result that out of over 100 kilns only five or six are still in operation, and most of the workers have been thrown out of employment. The embargo placed on rice and other cereals resulted in only 724 quintals of paddy being exported coastwise as against 4,028 quintals during 1937.

FOOCHOW

州福 Fuh-chau

Foochow is situated in lat. 26 deg. 20 min. 24 sec. N., and long. 119 deg. 20 min. E. The city is built on a plain on the northern side of the river Min, and is about thirty-four miles from the sea, and nine miles from Pagoda Anchorage, where foreign vessels used to anchor (now at Sharp Peak).

Foochow has been the capital of Fukien. In April, 1938 the capital was removed to Yingan, Central Fukien. The removal of government offices, schools, etc., to the interior, was made because the provincial authorities a journey which was both long and difficult. The East India Company as military operations. Though Foochow has ceased to be the capital, yet it is an important city from the political, economic and commercial points of view. Following the fall of Canton, the importance of Foochow as a southern port appears to be enhanced.

The attention of foreigners was early attracted to Foochow as a likely place where commercial intercourse could be profitably carried on in the shipment of Bohea Tea, which is grown largely in the locality. Before the port was opened, this article used to be carried overland to Canton for shipment, a journey which was both long and difficult. The East India Company, as early as 1830, made representations in favour of the opening of the port, but nothing definite was done till the conclusion of the Treaty of Nanking in 1842. The early years of intercourse with the natives were anything but what was anticipated. The navigation of the river was difficult, there was no market for imports, and several attacks by the populace rendered the port an undesirable place of residence for some time. It was not until some ten years after the port had been opened that there was much done in the export of tea from the interior, but after the quantity shipped increased largely, and and Foochow became one of the principal tea ports in China. From 1880, however, when the tea trade of the port reached its highest figure, the prosperity of the place has gradually waned.

The city is built around three hills, and the circuit of what used to be the walled portion is between six and seven miles in length. The walls were about thirty feet high and twelve feet wide at the top. The streets were narrow and filthy, but during recent years remarkable improvements have been carried out, the walls being torn down and replaced by a wide motor road, the narrow streets have been widened to permit motor traffic. Motor roads have been built and motor buses connect Foochow City with Nantai, Mamoi (Pagoda), and Amoy. Highways from Foochow to Kienow (on the Upper Min River), and to Sienyon, Taitien, Tehwa and Yingan, and thence to Changting (West Fukien), have been constructed. The means of communication between Foochow and important districts in North, South and West Fukien is fairly easy. Kienow is connected by motor road and bus services with the Chekiang road system while Changting and Shaowu (North Fukien) are connected with the Kiangsi road systems.

The climate of Foochow is mild for about nine months of the year, but in the summer, it is trying, the range of the thermometer then being from 74 deg. Fahr. to 98 deg. Spring is the wet season, but typhoons lead to rain in the summer and autumn also, and frequent local cyclonic disturbances make it a somewhat damp climate at most times of the year.

The scenery surrounding Foochow is very beautiful. In sailing up the Min River from the sea, vessels have to leave the wide stream and enter what is called the Kimpai Pass, which is barely half a mile across, and enclosed as it is by bold, rocky walls, it presents a very striking appearance. The Pass of Min-ngan is narrower, and with its towering cliffs, surmounted by fortifications and cultivated terraces, is extremely picturesque, and has been compared to some of the scenes on the Rhine. The Yung Fu, a tributary of the Min, also affords some charming scenery, the hills rising very abruptly from the river bank. The Min Monastery, the Moon Temple and the Kushan Monastery, all occupying most romantic and beautiful sites, are fine specimens of Chinese religious edifices, and are much resorted to by visitors. Game abounds in all the ravines and mountains in the vicinity of Foochow, while tigers and panthers are common in the more remote hills, and some of these beasts have been killed within ten miles of the city.

The population of Foochow, comprising Foochow City and the suburbs of Nantai on the banks of the Min River, amounted to 357,790 persons according to police census of July, 1935, but has diminished since the outbreak of Sino-Japanese hostilities in July, 1937. What with removal of government organs and what with fear of Japanese imminent attack, more than a hundred thousand people have evacuated the city.

The trade of Foochow is on the decline. Generally speaking, business is in a state of stagnation which has been caused by disturbed political and financial conditions. The shipping business of British and other foreign companies, is, however, thriving very well. As Chinese and Japanese steamers have stopped running since the Sino-Japanese war, the ships plying between Foochow and other ports are mostly British-owned. In spite of the unstable situation, the Provincial Government is doing its utmost to improve the tea, timber and paper trade. Bureaux for control of methods of production of timber and paper, and then sale, have been established. Foochow and its adjoining districts, had very rich harvests in 1938.

While the year 1938 was not a satisfactory one for Foochow, the statistics of trade show a smaller decline than expected. General uneasiness prevailed throughout the district during the first half of the year as a result of intermittent air raids, while the fall of Amoy aroused apprehension that an attack on Foochow might follow. Local trading conditions were unsettled, banks restricting their loans to commercial enterprises, and merchants, consequently, being under the necessity of confining their trading to immediate requirements. The Provincial Government also had perforce to curtail their reconstruction programme, but with the object of encouraging trade they established bureaux to control the marketing of several of the principal commodities of the district, notably tea, timber, paper, etc. The crops in the northern districts were good, a healthy sign, but there was no improvement in purchasing power. Prices, however, remained generally steady, and in the later half of the year confidence began to return, the year closing with increasing movements of cargo. The trade figures were as follows: direct foreign imports, $6.9 million in 1938 as against $6.3 million in 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $17 million as against $21 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $5.3 million as against $6.4 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $16.9 million as compared with $17.6 million. The low rate of the national dollar and the campaign for economic self-sufficiency naturally affected the volume of direct foreign imports, imports of fishery and sea products dropping in value from $307,925 to $129,419; sulphate of ammonia from 79,078 to 46,298 quintals; and kerosene oil from 6,621,614 to 3,573,791 litres, a decline indicating a forced reversion to native oils for illumination purposes. The remainder of the petroleum products, however, showed substantial increases, especially in the case of liquid fuel and gasolene, the latter advancing from 841,398 to 2,425,532 litres as a result of the coastal blockade which brought into greater use vehicular transportation. Tinned plates declined approximately 50 per cent owing to the removal of the tea market to Hongkong, while machinery, dyes and cement, the latter doubtless for protective purposes, all showed considerable improvement over the preceding year's figures. Imports of wheat flour advanced in value from $312,748 to $483,823, offsetting the decline in coastwise importations resulting from the destruction of factories at Shanghai during the hostilities there. There were also heavier importations of rice from abroad, the greater portion being imported for Chüanchow, a district not self-supporting and usually supplied from Foochow in normal times. Owing to the destruction or closure of many factories in Shanghai and its neighbouring districts, the local production of cotton cloths underwent considerable expansion, resulting in increased imports of native cotton yarn, these advancing in value from $715,244 in 1937 to $1,425,501 during the year under review.

Under direct exports abroad, the principal to be affected were tea, all kinds (dealt with below): dried, fresh and preserved fruits: timber which, having lost the Formosan market since the outbreak of hostilities, has dwindled in value to $98,402; and paper which fell precipitately in value from $332,881 in 1937 to $21,759 only owing to more attractive markets being found in China, coastwise exportations of paper totalling for the year $2,428,371 as against $1,791,640 during 1937. Both kittysols and mushrooms found good markets abroad, and the value of their export appreciated considerably. Coastwise exports suffered least in value: timber maintained the previous year's level; fresh, dried and preserved fruits declined slightly, as did mushrooms, markets abroad claiming a percentage from the domestic market owing to the better prices obtainable.

The year under review was a very unfortunate one for those connected with the tea trade. As explained in the previous year's report, the Black Tea Bureau, which was instituted with the object of assisting the black tea trade, was in April of this year reconstituted as the Fukien Trading Company, and as such made a considerable loan to the tea farmers, replacing the advance usually made by the Chinese tea merchants. After the fall of Amoy the Provincial Government, fearing an attack on Foochow, ordered the shipment of all black teas to Hongkong for storage and sale. This decision caused considerable losses, not subsequently regained, to foreign firms through the necessity of transferring their offices, and it is feared the tea itself suffered not a little from the precipitate shipment and the difficulty of securing adequate and satisfactory godowns in Hongkong, already congested with goods. The figures for tea exported abroad show a total value of $3,679,959 as against $4,511,138 for 1937. The bulk of the Foochow congou tea, it is understood, was sold to Russia, but there was still believed to be a balance at the end of the year both of that variety and also the souchong variety, as the prices, especially of the former, were too high. As regards the green teas, domestic imports, which are intended for scenting locally, declined from $5,948,638 to $3,036,985 in value on account of the hostilities in the Yangtze Valley; while the value for domestic exports also decreased from $6,003,958 to $4,680,211 in comparison with the preceding year owing to the weakened demand from the North. These two factors combined had disastrous repercussions on the jasmine growers, the price of the flower, the crop of which was heavy, falling off very considerably.

Passenger traffic both inwards and outwards declined appreciably, owing partly to the distance of the steamer anchorage from the city and also the restrictions on the movement of males. The majority of the passengers recorded were women and children.

The total number of vessels entered and cleared during the year was only 887 as compared with 1,469 during 1937, though the tonnage varied but little, being 1,266,786 as compared with 1,538,106 tons for the previous year. Sharp Peak continued to be the anchorage for steamers, the barrier blocking the river at Temple Rock below Kuant'ou in 1937 being maintained. Shipping passed through various vicissitudes during the year, due to shortage of cargo-boats, labour troubles with the stevedores the vessels at Sharp Peak, and the interdiction by the naval authorities on river traffic below the Ming An Pass between the hours of 7 p.m. and 5 a.m. (varying to 6 p.m. and 6 a.m.). These factors combined to delay shipping and increase demurrage costs. However, with an increasing number of cargo-boats being put into commission and better organisation, the end of the year saw an improvement and an increase in the number of ships entering and clearing. The Min River Conservancy Board's dredger was laid up throughout almost the whole year, and as a consequence the river is silting up in various places and creating new channels, rendering navigation even by launch and cargo-boat a hazardous procedure. Freight rates were increased to a certain extent, principally by the change in the scale of charges from a weight to a measurement basis.

KULIANG AND SHARP PEAK

嶺 鼓 Ku-liang 石 川 Chuan-shih (Sharp Peak)

A refuge from the heat of summer at Foochow can be gained by a ride of half an hour by car and two hours by chair to the top of Kuliang, i.e., "Drum Pass," which is a mountain resort situated about nine miles east of Foochow. The thermometer indicates an average of 10 degrees cooler on the mountain than it is in Foochow; the nights are always cool and blankets are a necessity for comfort. Dr. Rennie was the first to build a house of foreign design at Kuliang in 1886. Now there are one hundred such houses, and every summer between four and five hundred persons, chiefly missionaries, are in residence on the mountain. According to the Admiralty Chart, Kushan the last summit on the ridge reaches a height of 2,900 feet. Kuliang itself is from 2,000 to 2,500 feet high. Nearly five miles of stone paved roads about three feet in width have been made under the supervision of a Public Improvement Committee, now called the Kuliang Council, appointed by the residents, the necessary funds being provided by voluntary contribution. The greatest charm of Kuliang is the mountain walks and there are many interesting places within easy walking distance. A Chinese Post Office and a Telegraph Office are opened at Kuliang every year from the middle of June to the middle of September and daily mail connection with Foochow is maintained. In 1934, Kuliang was connected with Foochow by telephone. There are many private tennis courts and seven public courts on the mountain, also a swimming pool. as well as mountain streams where swimming can be enjoyed. Sharp Peak an island at the entrance of the Min River about 30 miles from Foochow, also, affords a seaside and bathing resort which is much appreciated by Foochow residents. The American Missions and the Anglican Mission each have sanatoriam there. It is the place of landing of the E.E.A. & C. Telegraph Co's cables. Since August 1937, all coasting steamers have anchored at Sharp Peak instead of Pagoda Anchorage.

Amoy was one of the five ports open to foreign trade before the ratification of the Treaty of Tientsin. It is situated upon the island of Haimun, at the mouth of the Pe-Chi or Dragon River, in lat. 24 deg. 40 min. N. and long. 118 deg. E. It was the scene of trade with Western nations at a very early date. The Portuguese went there in 1544, but, in consequence of their cruelty towards the natives, the Chinese authorities forcibly expelled them and burned thirteen of their vessels. The English had commercial dealings there up to 1730, when the Chinese Government issued an edict prohibiting trade with foreigners at all ports except Canton. They made an exception as regards Spanish ships, which were allowed to trade at Amoy.

In describing Amoy, Dr. Williams says:—"The island upon which Amoy is built is about forty miles in circumference, and contains scores of large villages (now 136) besides the city. The scenery within the bay is picturesque, caused partly by the numerous islands which define it, surmounted by pagodas or temples and partly by the high barren hills behind the city. The entire circuit of the City and suburbs is about eight miles. The harbour is one of the best on the coast; there is good holding ground in the outer harbour, and vessels can anchor in the inner, within a short distance of the beach, and be perfectly secure; the tide rises and falls from fourteen to sixteen feet. The western sid. of the harbour, here from six hundred and seventy-five to eight hundred and forty yards wide, is formed by the island of Kulangsu. It is a picturesque little spot. . . . . Eastward of Amoy is the island of Quemoy or Kinmun (Golden Harbour), presenting a striking contrast in the low foreground on its south shore to the high land on Amoy." The population of the City of Amoy is in normal times 180,000 with another 50,000 outside the city, making a total of 230,000 for the whole island of Amoy.

Amoy is ranked for Postal purposes as a second-class City. It was formerly regarded as one of the dirtiest places in China. There has been a very remarkable change in this respect of recent years and when modern improvements still in progress have been completed it will compare favourably with any city in China. There are several places of interest to foreigners in the vicinity, and excursions can be made to Changchow-fu, the chief city of the department of that name, and situated about 35 miles from Amoy. The island of Kulangsu ["Drum Wave Island," from a hollow rock in which the incoming tide causes a booming sound] is about a third of a mile from Amoy, and the residences of nearly all the foreigners are to be found there, although most of the foreign business is transacted on the Amoy side. It is a remarkably pretty island. It was handed over by China as an International Settlement on the 1st May, 1903.

In has become one of the most charming places of residence on the coast of China. The peace and good order which are preserved in the International Settlement are shown by the palatial residences of many wealthy Chinese residents, mostly emigrants who have returned from the Straits Settlements, the Netherlands East Indies, the Philippines and Burmah. The value of land on the island of Kulangsu has advanced 100 per cent. compared with the prices ruling a decade ago. There are several good clubs in the neighbourhood of the Recreation Ground. A neat little Anglican Church has been erected.

In 1922, the ratepayers of the International Settlement of Kulangsu recommended that an Advisory Committee of Chinese residents should be elected by the Chinese residents in the Settlement to assist and advise the members of the Muncipal Council in all matters in which Chinese ratepayers were concerned. This recommendation was approved by the foreign and Chinese authorities and adopted by the Chinese ratepayers. Three Chinese members, appointed in December, 1926, took over the full representation of Chinese rate-payers.

In Amoy electric energy is supplied at 110. a.c. and on Kulangsu at 220. a.c. There is little demand for power. All telegrams or wireless messages are transmitted through the Chinese Telegraph Administration. As telegrams are transmitted over land lines and are therefore often subject to delay, it is always preferable to use Wireless, the Radio service being more efficient and more reliable. Since 1933 Amoy has been a port of call of passenger and mail planes operated by the China National Aviation Company and since 1st September, 1936 the twice weekly service has become a three times a week service.

There is a dockyard at Amoy, formerly owned by foreigners and later belonging to the Chinese Navy, but now belonging to a private Chinese company, over which the Chinese Navy exercises supervision. The Standard Vacuum Oil Company have erected several oil tanks at Sung-Su on the mainland, close to the site of the station of the Amoy—Changchow railway, and the Asiatic Petroleum Co. have built a new installation on an adjacent site with oil tanks and a can factory capable of turning out 4,000 tins a day. In June, 1921, the proposal to reconstruct a pier between the hulk of Messrs. Butterfield & Swire and the shore aroused oppositi on on the part of the Amoy public. The matter having been referred to Peiping, no further trouble was experienced. In the late autumn, however, the recommencement of the work resulted in a boycott being declared against the steamers of the firm. A settlement was reached and the boycott was withdrawn in March, 1922. In 1932 the firm was requested by the local Chinese Authorities to assist in the development of the port facilities by moving their hulk and pier to a site some half a mile to the South where they have now acquired at considerable expense a suitable site and obtained permission to construct two piers. The work was concluded in the early summer of 1935 and has added considerably to the loading and unloading facilities of Amoy. This improvement is evidence of a progressive spirit on the part of the modern Chinese authorities. It is to be hoped that other firms will follow this example. The foreign residents number about 280, apart from Japanese and Formosans who together number between 20,000 and 30,000.

Frequent and regular steamer communication is maintained with Hongkong, Swatow, Foochow, Formosa and Shanghai, and steamers run direct to the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Manila, Japan, Rangoon and Calcutta. There has always been a comparatively good trade done at Amoy, and notwithstanding that the tea trade, for which it was long famous, has now practically disappeared, it is significant that the shipping tonnage employed by the port has quintupled since the decade 1864-73, and almost trebled since the decade 1874-83. Until the shortage of shipping caused by the European war the tonnage figures for many years topped the million mark. In former times, before the glory of Amoy had departed, the staple export was Tea—the local product as well as the superior blends brought over from Formosa—but, largely owing to the deterioration of the local product and the indifference of the grower to the changing conditions of the foreign market, tea has long since ceased to be exported. Before the Japanese obtained possession of Formosa the Formosan teas were "settled" and warehoused in Amoy, whence they were shipped to the foreign markets. Now no Formosan tea is "settled" in Amoy, and with Keelung still unimproved to any considerable extent quite 50 per cent. of the Formosan product is being shipped direct to America from Keelung. The foreign tea merchant at Amoy has practically lost his occupation, and we are witnessing the fulfilment of the prediction that "the row of quaint, rambling, old hongs on the Amoy side, and many picturesque residences on Kulangsu will be offering for the occupation of the wealthy returned emigrant or the missionary school." A University has been established at Amoy in a fine range of buildings with ample playing grounds, funds for the purpose having been provided by a native of the district who made his fortune in British Malaya; and thanks to the civic patriotism of another native of the district who amassed great wealth in Java, a contract was signed in 1922 with the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Co. for the installation of a complete new telephone system. Bunding, drainage, jetties, roads, recreation grounds and similar public works, are in progress, many of the main streets have been widened and concrete paved, and a fine public garden has been laid out with facilities for all forms of sport, including a football ground, running track, and hard tennis courts. Reclamation work (filling in without bunding) was started in 1922 to the north of the city and the Amoy Dock. A solid stone bund has been completed along the whole waterfront of Amoy.

Amoy has an up to date waterworks system, in excellent running order, operated by the Amoy Waterworks Co.

Built in 1923 the reservoirs are capable of holding 400,000,000 gallons of water, enough for one year's consumption. The Company have now provided Kulangsu with water. The water is carried over from Amoy to Kulangsu in boats and pumped to reservoirs on the high points of the Island. The quality of water supplied compares very favourably with any supply in the Far East and is extensively used by visiting steamships.

Trade in 1938

At the port of Amoy the year under review was far from normal, the troubles of the times being naturally reflected in the trade of the port. In addition to the general adverse factors arising from the Sino-Japanese hostilities, the district became actually involved in the conflict. During the early part of the year trade had shown signs of recovery from the slump in the latter months of 1937; imports were heavier and the export trade continued to improve. Though the port was frequently menaced, it was not until the 10th, May that Japanese forces opened an attack on Amoy Island and quickly occupied it. Practically the entire population evacuated, some to the mainland but the majority to the adjoining small island of Kulangsu. The few foreign vessels that called did so solely to maintain their schedules and to carry away refugees. For a period of two months the hinterland was cut off and the port isolated. Fortunately, towards the end of August confidence was in some measure restored, and on the 1st, September the Customs, having been forced to evacuate to Kulangsu, returned to the Amoy side and assumed charge over all shipping. Routes gradually reopened, and although Amoy, for the time being, lost much of its importance as a distributing centre, trade still continued.

The trade statistics of the port reflect the general position, direct foreign imports being valued at $9.1 million as compared with $13 million during 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese produce at $8.8 million as against $17.8 million; direct exports to foreign countries at $3.2 million as against $4.6 million; and coastwise exports of Chinese goods at $4.5 million as compared with $2.3 million. The bulk of foreign imports in their order of importance consisted of sulphate of ammonia, of which 154,984 quintals only were imported as against 332,900 quintals in 1937, which the hinterland cut off is understandable. Under petroleum products there were decreases under all items with the exception of paraffin wax, which gained slightly due to the demand for native-made candles consequent on high kerosene prices. There was a marked decline in the import of gasoline from 3.9 million litres due to the suspension of bus traffic, while the enforced inactivity of Chinese-owned motor and power vessels, especially since May, accounted for a decrease in imports of liquid fuel, the same applying to the drop in lubricating oil. Imports of kerosene oil, on the other hand, were well sustained at 5.3 million litres owing to the absence of smuggling. A marked drop in the import of molasses from 19,016 to 907 quintals was an indication of the depression in the local samshu and soy industries. Sugar imports also declined in quantity from 26,932 to 3,368 quintals due to high exchange and the competition of the native product. During the greater part of the year the Yee Tsoong Tobacco Distributors, Limited, and the Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company continued to import cigarettes manufactured and tax-paid in Hongkong, importations from Hongkong being valued at $192,000 as compared with $27,000 during 1937. Cigarette paper declined in valued from $93,400 to $1,200, with the import of common printing paper, mainly from Germany, Norway, Canada, Sweden and Japan, declining also in value from $154,000 to $113,000. Cotton piece-goods, woollen goods and yarn all suffered, with the importation of artificial piece-goods, mainly of Japanese origin, falling to negligible quantities. Metals and minerals, electrical meterials and fittings likewise declined, with salt herrings, mostly of American provenance, declining in quantity from 10,045 to 4,712 quintals. Heavy importations of foreign rice were due to domestic restrictions, the quantity imported during the year being 72,363 quintals as against 21 quintals only. Wheat flour imports similarly increased from 6,917 to 31,553 quintals. Under coastwise imports there were marked declines under all important headings: yellow beans from 68,712 to 30,561 quintals; wheat flour from 136,264 to 60,012 quintals; rice from 64,959 to 25,106 quintals; beancake from 177,124 to 17,596 quintals; groundnut oil from 18,405 to 10,670 quintals; and cigarettes from 10,513 to 4,706 quintals, this last item being affected by importations from Hongkong.

Exports to foreign countries declined in value by 30 per cent as compared with the previous year. Decreases were noticeable in all the principal items excepting oranges and fresh fruits. Crops in the interior were excellent, oranges showing an increase of 22,689 quintals or more than 180 per cent, while other fresh fruits also advanced from 3,462 to 8,176 quintals. Black and green tea fell from a value of $657,000 to $388,000, due partly to the existing situation and partly to exchange restrictions in force on shipments abroad. Paper under all categories declined, the chief item, joss paper, falling in value from $1,533,000 to $1,074,000. Exports to Hongkong were generally disappointing, but movements of cargo to Manila and other South Sea ports were fairly satisfactory, fresh fruits being of main interest to shippers. Under exports coastwise, sugar rose from 31,736 to 115,348 quintals, mostly for Shanghai and Wenchow; fresh oranges from 37,222 to 49,429 quintals; and dried lichees from 2,959 to 6,643 quintals.

During the early part of the year the currency situation remained unaltered, only bank-notes issued by the four Government banks being current on the market. Following the local hostilities, surplus stocks of bank-notes were either destroyed or shipped to Hongkong, resulting in some monetary stringency until reimportations of Chinese notes were made by foreign banks to remedy the situation. After May Japanese yen notes made their appearance and have since been made a medium of exchange on the Amoy side, Chinese merchants, however, generally preferring their own currency. The exchange rate between the standard dollar and the Hongkong dollar remained steady throughout January and February. Thereafter the exchange dropped continuously, reaching St. $192=Hongkong $100 in October, with the lowest rate in December being St. $198¼=Hongkong $100.

The total tonnage of shipping entered and cleared under General Regulations was 2,535,072 tons as against 3,834,627 tons in 1937, and under Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations 217,349 tons as compared with 882,867 tons.

Consequent on the fall of Amoy there arose a very acute refugee problem; the health of the port remained, nevertheless, satisfactory due to large-scale prophylactic measures. Thanks to the vigorous efforts of the International Relief Committee, to whom and to the community generally great credit is due, the situation was efficiently and satisfactorily handled.

At the beginning of the year the Amoy municipal authorities drew up plans for the construction of a stone bridge connecting Kaochi, on the northern side of Amoy Island, with Tsimei on the mainland. Work was already started when, unfortunately, local hostilities intervened.

SWATOW

Swatow, which was first thrown open to foreigners by the Treaty of Tientsin (1858-1860), is situated in the mouth of the river Han in the Southern most corner of the delta formed by that river on its way to the sea. It lies near the eastern border of Kwangtung Province in lat. 23° 20′ 43″ N. and long. 116° 39′ 3″ E. It is the shipping port and general entrepôt for the whole of eastern Kwangtung and the chief hinterland cities are Ch'ao-chow-fu (officially renamed Ch'ao-an-hsien by the Republic), Mei-hsien (formerly Kayingchow), Chaoyang, Kityang, Samhopa and Hingning.

Swatow is built on the northern shore of an arm of the sea which stretches about 10 miles inland (and not on the north bank of the Han river as is commonly supposed). The shore on the opposite side of the harbour known as Kakchioh is bold and striking, the hills stretching away eastward to the coast where they form what is known to sea-going people as "Good Hope Cape." Pagoda Hill rises on the opposite side almost due north of "Good Hope Cape" and in a direct line from this hill, across a sheltered stretch of water known as Clipper Roads, lies the large island of Namoa.

The earliest traces of foreign commercial activity are to be found in one of the southern bays of Namoa Island where there are relics of East India Company occupation in the eighteenth century. In the same spot in 1855 an American from Connecticut named Bradley and a Scotsman from Edinburgh named Richardson founded the firm of Bradley & Co. Both had previously been trading in the Philippines and both had come to Namoa Island from Amoy. Subsequently Bradley & Co. removed to Double Island which is situated at the mouth of Swatow Harbour and is 4 miles from Swatow. It is interesting here to record from an old document recently unearthed that at the time Bradley and Richardson moved to Double Island Swatow was "a collection of fishing huts on a "mud-flat" and further to state that it is now, 70 years later, a thriving city with nearly a quarter of a million inhabitants.

Shortly after the signing of the Treaty of Tientsin Bradley & Co. moved up to Swatow proper, being the first foreign firm to become established there. In 1862 the British Government was granted a piece of land about a mile outside Swatow but so strong were the demonstrations of the populace against it that the settlement project fell through. Foreign residences and offices, however, began to spring up at Kakchioh on the opposite side of the harbour and before the decade 1860-1870 was out, opposition had very largely died down and foreigners were living and trading freely in Swatow itself.

The climate of Swatow is very salubrious. The town, however, has suffered from typhoons on many occasions. Fifty thousand lives were lost and very extensive damage to shipping and property was caused by one of these terrible storms which accompanied by a tidal wave, struck the port on the night of August 2nd, 1922. Seismic disturbances, also, have frequently been felt here. The most serious was that on February 13th, 1918, when, it is computed, over 2,000 people were killed and several thousand injured, while the damage to property was immense. The native population of Swatow was estimated at 14,063 in 1929 and is now nearly a quarter of a million.

A Chinese syndicate, with a capital of $3,000,000, obtained the necessary sanction for the construction of a railway from Swatow to Ch'ao-chou-fu, and work was commenced on the line in 1904. The line, 28½ miles in length, was opened to traffic on November 25th, 1906. The contractors were Japanese, who supplied all material, the rails and engines coming from America and the carriages from Japan. The construction of the line brought about a great inflation of land values.

Swatow has an electric light plant and a waterworks has been in operation since 1914, the reservoir being at Ampou, about eight miles inland. In the middle of 1919 a telephone service was introduced. The city now has the most modern automatic telephone service.

Swatow is by no means slow in the race with other China ports for improvement. Road making and road widening are being carried out rapidly, and the public park at the back of Swatow is being gradually improved. Three Fire Brigades—well equipped with modern apparatus—protect the town, two of these being financed by different charitable guilds. An Orphanage, organised after the Typhoon of 1922, a Poor Peoples Workshop and a Leper Station, besides the Mission Hospitals, are among the charitable institutions of the port.

Although Swatow was spared actual hostilities during the year, Japanese naval demonstrations and aerial bombardments caused the population great apprehension and reacted unfavourably on trade during several periods of varying lengths. Nevertheless, trade on the whole prospered more than could have been expected under the circumstances, and its value reached almost the level of the record year 1937. For a few days at the beginning of February, Japanese naval vessels shelled the coast in this vicinity and aeroplanes were frequently over the town; from the 20th to the 24th, June raiders appeared over Swatow daily and bombed the fort, railway station, and electric-light works, while on the 1st and 2nd, July numerous heavy bombers subjected various municipal and military building and the electric-light works to most severe bombing, causing, besides much material damage, hundreds of casualties amongst the civilian population. Again on the 12th and 13th October Japanese warships bombarded the coast of this district, and the railway station was amongst the civilian population. Again on the 12th and 13th, October Japanese troops at Bias Bay. These events, particularly those in July and October, caused a great exodus of people, many leaving for the interior and others for Hongkong. Shops were closed, business suspended, factories shut down, and the import and export trade, particularly the former, came almost to a standstill. With the usual resilience of commerce in China, however, confidence was regained after each scare, and towards the end of the year trade was back at such proportions as have been normal since hostilities commenced.

A comparsion of the statistics of trade with the previous year gives the following result: direct foreign imports, $36.3 million for the previous year; coastwise importations of Chinese goods, $45.6 million as against $57.1 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $37.6 million as against $33.5 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese goods, $25.4 million as against $23 million. From these figures it is evident that, as in the previous year, the interport import trade suffered from war conditions. The inward flow of foreign goods was irregular, fluctuating according to rumours and war threats to Swatow, another adverse factor being the fall in the value of the national dollar, which early in the year stood at 107¼ and in October was quoted at 194 to Hongkong $100, while towards the end of the year it had somewhat recovered and stood at about 177. Among the principal foreign imports in Swatow, embroidery linen was in good demand during the first half of the year, but, owing to fear of hostilities reaching this locality, merchants later reduced importations to a minimum; 5,250,000 metres valued at $6.1 million were imported, which as a quantitative reduction of about 17 per cent as compared with last year. Cotton cambrics for embroidery purposes, whereof 1,210,000 metres were imported from Japan during 1937, decreased to 325,000 metres and arrived chiefly from Switzerland, Great Britain, and the United States of America. Cotton embroidery yarn also showed a marked falling off. Of sulphate of ammonia, 383,668 quintals were imported, this amount exceeding the previous year's figure only by some 47,000 quintals, whereas the value was enhanced by about $2 million. The demand for this commodity is partly due to a reduction in the quantity of beancake imported from North China. The importation of kerosene oil decreased from 17,109,129 litres in 1937 to 12,350,056 lires, war condition and diminished purchasing power of the consumers being responsible. Rice importations exceeded the figure for 1937 by 24,242 quintals and totalled 1,066,919 quintals valued at $14.9 million, or 40 per cent of the total value of the foreign import trade. Owing to the unsettled conditions and a consequent reduction in industrial enterprise in the Swatow district, the importation of foreign coal was greatly reduced. The domestic import trade was greatly impeded by the Sino-Japanese hostilities, foremost amongst the commodities affected being rice, which showed a decrease of 798,708 quintals when compared with the previous year's figure of 1,175,160 quintals.

Factors contributing to the considerable improvement in the export trade were the fall in value of the national dollar and an additional demand from Hongkong due to the increased population there. Of exports abroad, linen drawn-thread work and embroideries advanced in value from $16.6 million for 1937 to $18.6 million. This figure does not, however, give a true indication of the trade, as very large quantities of wholly and partly finished linen goods were sent abroad for safekeeping owing to the unsettled conditions. A good crop and improved organisation account for a continued increase in the export of fresh oranges. The newly organised Swatow City Fruit Growers Exchange works by modern methods; oranges are carefully graded, each fruit is wrapped in paper, and consignments are packed in wooden crates of either 10 or 30 kilogrammes. Other commodities showing a noticeable increase are fresh eggs, 1st quality paper, joss paper, and coarse chinaware. The quality of locally made chinaware has improved, and shipments were made to places formerly supplied by Kiangsi pottery works.

Turning to exports coastwise, there were two particularly noteworthy advances as compared with the previous year: medical preparations and joss paper, the former advancing from $242,000 to $2.3 million, the latter from $2.2 million to $4 million. Some other commodities, including certain products from Szechwan used for the manufacture of medicines, have been diverted during the hostilities from their normal trade routes. With the closing of the Yangtze River, herbs, etc., used for medicine found their way overland to Swatow, where labour is cheap, the manufactured articles being then exported, mostly coastwise.

No industrial development took place during the year; in fact, due to hostilities and fear of invasion, many factories closed down, as was the case with many of the drawn-thread work and embroidery firms. The Kityang Sugar Central was farmed out by the Provincial Government from the beginning of 1938, but due to inefficient management the factory went into bankruptcy. In June it was partially destroyed by aerial bombing. The plant of the Swatow Electric Light Company was similarly destroyed at the end of the same month, and the city was without electric light for the rest of the year with the exception of a small portion of the town which was supplied by a private enterprise. The native kerosene oil refineries are hard put to it to compete with the foreign oil companies, and it is anticipated that before long this industry will cease to exist. The local "Tiger Balm Medicine" factory was working at full pressure. The number of workmen was increased from 300 to 500, business was expanded, and the Yunnan and Szechwan markets supplied with the factory's products.

The total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at the port in 1938 was 3,621,623 tons, a decline of 1,303,240 tons on the figure of the previous year. This decline was due to the absence of Chinese and Japanese shipping, irregular schedule of foreign vessels caused by war tension, and the suspension of calls at this port by the Dutch motor vessels Cremer and van Heutsz. The Ho Hong Steamship Company and the Douglas Lapraik Company have extended their normal routes, the former to Foochow and the latter to Wenchow. Freight rates have been considerably raised during the year, which is explained by the depreciation of the Chinese currency, increased operating costs, heavy war risk insurance, and no outside competition against the lines working under a freight agreement. Coastal steam and motor launch traffic was suspended because of the Japanese blockade.

The agricultural crops were on the whole good. Swatow was hit by a strong gale on the 3rd, May, causing a loss estimated at $100,000 by the sinking of five motor-launches and about 70 junks and sampans and damage to buildings. In spite of repeated aerial bombing the Chaoshan Railway train service has been maintained throughout the year. The construction of of the Canton-Meihsien Railway, which was begun in 1937, was discontinued at the beginning of 1938, and no road construction took place in this district.

廣州 Kwáng-chau

Early History

Canton, which is one of the most interesting cities in China, is situated on the Chu-kiang or Pearl River, in latitude 23 deg. 7 min. 10 sec. N., and longitude 113 deg. 14 min. 30 sec. E. It is the capital of the province of Kwangtung. It is sometimes called the City of Rams and the City of Genii, both of which names are derived from ancient legends. Canton is a foreign perversion of Kwangtung, the name of the province of which it is the seat of government.

Owing to its favoured situation, Canton became at an early date the Chinese port to which the traffic of European countries was first attracted. The Portuguese found their way thither in 1516, and Arab navigators had been making regular voyages between Canton and the ports of Western Asia as early as the tenth century. The Dutch appeared on the scene about a hundred years later than the Portuguese, and these in their turn were supplanted by the English. The later, towards the close of the seventeenth century, founded the very profitable trade which was conducted for nearly one hundred and fifty years by the Agents of the East India Company, who established a factory there in 1684, which was afterwards celebrated throughout the world. From 1684 the export of tea to England increased rapidly. The Company's monopoly terminated in 1834. In 1839 Great Britain was led into a declaration of war against China as the result of various disputes which arose at Canton. The campaign terminated with the Treaty of Nanking (Aug. 29th, 1842) as a result of which the Co-Hong monopoly system at Canton closed and four additional ports were thrown open to foreign trade. The provision of the Treaty of Nanking, that foreigners were to be permitted to reside within the walls of the city of Canton was persistently resisted and illfeeling generally grew so strong that a minor incident in connection with the nationality of a small Hongkong-Chinese vessel the "Arrow,,' was magnified into an affair of such importance as to cause a general election at home, and a second China War. Sir Michael Seymour, with his fleet opened hostilities, and some two months later an infuriated mob retaliated by burning all the foreign factories In December, 1857, Sir Charles Straubenzee, in command of an expedition which had been specially despatched from England, attacked the city, and it was taken on the 29th of that month. The French also sent out an expedition, and the city was occupied by the Allied Forces until October, 1861, a period of nearly four years.

The city which is rapidly expanding now extends along the river front for a length of some four miles, having a depth of some two miles. It was formerly enclosed by walls 43 ft. thick at the base and from 25 to 40 ft. in height. This wall has in recent years been demolished in order that its site could be used for a motor road some 80 to 100 ft. in width. In January, 1921 a service of omnibuses was started running from the terminus of the Canton-Kowloon Railway to various parts of the city. This service has been gradually expanding in all directions with the completion of more and more motor roads, the construction of which is still going on apace. Canton has now four small parks, the Central Park in the heart of the city, the Hoi Chu Park on the Bund; the Tung Shan Park in the eastern suburb, and the Yueh Sau Park on Kan Yin Hill. Within the grounds of the last named park stands the newly erected memorial tablet dedicated to Dr. Sun Yat Sen, which is the highest landmark in the city, and from which a complete bird's eye view of the latter can be obtained. At the foot of the Kan Yin Hill is the Sun Yat Sen Memorial Hall, a most beautiful piece of architecture for which the same engineer that planned the Sun Yat Sen Mausoleum at N'king was responsible. Canton contains great attractions for foreign visitors in its numerous temples, pagodas, etc., and in the many curio shops to be found there. The French Mission have a large and handsome Gothic cathedral, with two lofty towers surmounted by spires, in the city. The structure is built entirely of dressed granite A Mint, constructed by the late Viceroy Chang Chih-tung, near the East Gate, and furnished with a very complete plant, commenced work in 1889, and now issues both silver dollars and subsidiary coins, all bearing a picture of the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen in front and large Chinese characters surrounded by a design of a crop of grain on the back. The buildings cover a large area. On the opposite side of the river is the island of Honam which was linked with the city proper by a bridge across the river that was opened to traffic early in 1933. Motor roads are also being constructed on this island. The principal attractions for the tourist in Honam are the grounds of Lingnam University (formerly the Canton Christian College and the Honam Temple Monastery (Hoi Tong Temple). The spacious compound of the latter, which was well-known as one of the "Five Great Monasteries"—Ng Tai Chung Sam—has since been turned into a municipal park of exceptional beauty. In the vicinity one may also see native industries such as the firing, sorting and sifting of tea, the preserving of ginger, and the picking of rattans, cassia etc. The founding of bells, the manufacture of fire crackers, and the dyeing of paper and cotton fabrics are three of the chief industries of Fatshan, some ten miles from Canton to which it is connected by rail. Because of political disturbances in recent years there has been a tendency for many of these industries to transfer to Hongkong, but now on account of the heavy import duties into China there is a movement in the opposite direction. There are large glass-works at Fatei, and paper-mills—these with up-to-date European machinery—near the village of Impo. At Shekwan, seven miles from Fatshan, are extensive potteries. Much has been done during the past few years to develop home industries. New factories have sprung up like mushrooms. At Honam an up-to-date cotton-spinning factory, equipped with modern machinery, has been erected by a local company with a capital of $5,000,000. Canton has now five large factories and several hundred workshops for producing hosiery and underwear. Locally-made matches are exported as far as the Straits Settlements, nearly twenty factories being engaged in this industry. The population of Canton was estimated at 812,241 by the Customs authorities in 1929.

When the foreign merchants returned to Canton to establish trade after the capture of the city by the English at the close of 1857, they found the factory and the buildings along the river in ruins. Recourse for accommodation was consequently had to warehouses on the Honam side of the river. Considerable discussion subsequently took place as to the selection of a site for a permanent British settlement, and it was eventually determined that an extensive mud flat known as Shameen should be filled in and appropriated. In 1859 an artificial island was created there, a canal constructed between the northern side of the site and the city, and solid and extensive embankments of masonry built. It took about two years to complete this undertaking, and cost $325,000. Of this sum four-fifths were defrayed by the British, and one-fifth by the French Government, to whom one-fifth of the reclaimed land was given. Up to 1889 most of this French concession remained unutilised, but in that year a number of lots were sold and are now built upon. The French also received a grant of the old site of the Viceroy's Yamên, on which the Catholic Cathedral now stands. Shameen is pleasingly laid out with gardens and tennis courts, and the paths are shaded with well-grown trees. Christ Church (Church of England) stands at the western end and close to it are situated the Masonic Hall, Boat House and Club. Handsome new premises, costing half-a-million dollars, for the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation were opened in Central Avenue on 29th, October, 1921. There is a Roman Catholic church on the French Concession. The Settlement has the Victoria Hotel providing good accommodation. During an anti-foreign riot on the 10th, September, 1883, 16 houses and the Concordia Theatre on the Settlement were burned by the mob.

Modern Canton

Ample means of communication exist between Canton and Hongkong, a distance of 112 miles by railway and about 95 miles by water. British steamers with luxurious accommodition and a large number of native craft ply daily between the ports. There is daily steam communication with Macao and regular connection with Wuchow and West River ports, and with Shanghai, Newchwang, and Kwangchauwan. The steam-launch traffic under the Inland Steam Navigation Regulations has proved a great success, though since rules were enforced in December, 1901, compelling all Chinese launches to undergo inspection at the hands of an engineer appointed by the Customs before obtaining licences to ply, the number of launches is not so large as previously. There is a safe and commodious anchorage within 150 yards of Shameen. Canton was connected by telegraph (an overland line) with Kowloon in 1883, and another overland line was completed from Canton to Lungchau-fu, on the Kwangsi and Tonkin frontier, in June 1884. An agreement was entered into with the South China Wireless Co., a British concern, in the latter part of 1923, for the installation of a powerful wireless station, to give a continuous commercial service with Hongkong and Shanghai and communications with Peiping, Japan, the Straits Settlements, etc. The electric light service of the city since it was placed under government supervision has improved and leaves little room for complaint. The automatic telephone system, the installation of which was completed in 1930, is very efficient and the number of subscribers is steadily increasing and already exceeds 7,000. A long-distance telephone service between Hongkong and Canton was opened on September 1st 1931 and three minutes conversation may now be had between these two cities for a fee of three dollars. Transport facilities on the Canton-Kowloon Railway, which consists of 22 miles in British territory and 89 miles in Chinese, and was completed in 1911, have also greatly improved in 1931 with the introduction of new locomotives and general reconditioning of the line. An express train now takes a little over three hours to cover the journey whereas a year ago it took half again as long. The Canton-Hankow Railway was completed in 1936 and in 1937 linked up with the Canton-Kowloon Railway. There is also a railway line from Canton to Samshui on the West River which brings West River ports within easier reach of Canton. The two Canton termini of the railway are situated on opposite banks of the Pearl River. An extension of the Canton-Samshui line to Shiuhing and thence via the West River ports to Kwangsi is planned by the authorities who also contemplate the construction of an east bound line from the Canton-Kowloon Railway to Swatow and eventually to Amoy.

In accordance with stipulations in the Supplementary Commercial Treaty between Great British and China, concluded in 1902, the various barriers or artificial obstructions to navigation in the Canton River were in 1905 partially removed. Extensive wharves and godowns have been erected at Pak Hin Hok on Honam Island, about two miles below Shameen, which enable ocean-going vessels of considerable draught to proceed up to Canton.

Present Conditions

All the above information must be treated as purely hypothetical depending on the restoration of the conditions obtaining prior to the present Sino-Japanese incident, the occupation of Canton by the Japanese armed forces, and the destruction of large areas of the city by the Chinese in pursuance of the "scorched earth" policy. Communications with the outside world are limited. The Canton-Kowloon Railway is worked by the Japanese military authorities as far as Shek-tan only, and the Canton-Hankow Railway has been largely destroyed. The Canton-Shamshui Railway has however been completely reopened to traffic. The Pearl River is closed to trade, and navigation is permitted only by Japanese vessels, men-of-war, and one British and one Portuguese passenger ship a fortnight. There is no longer telephonic communication between Canton and Hongkong.

Trade in 1938

Trade conditions at Canton during 1938 were largely governed by military and political events due to the Sino-Japanese hostilities. The Japanese coastal blockade throughout the year was responsible for the absence of coastal vessels flying the Chinese flag. All traffic was suspended when the military authorities closed the Pearl River between the 3rd, February and 15th, February, 1938. At the end of March the standard dollar and Kwangtung dollar, which had remained stable throughout 1937, began to depreciate, the former reaching its lowest point in mid-October when St. $230 was being quoted for Hongkong $100. The railways to Hankow and Kowloon as well as roadways were continually being bombed from the air. On the 28th, May an intensive bombardment from the air of the city of Canton commenced and lasted some 10 days, causing much loss of life and damage to property. A heavy exodus of the population followed, but after a few weeks the evacuees began to return. During the rest of the year, until mid-October, Canton was frequently visited by hostile aircraft, which bombed railways, power and other industrial plants, government buildings. etc., causing much destruction. The invasion of South China materialised on the 12th, October, 1938, when a landing of troops was effected at Bias Bay, and thereafter events moved with startling swiftness. The Pearl River was closed on the night of the 13th, October, 1938, and a wholesale evacuation of the population took place. When the vanguard of the Japanese forces entered Canton on the 22nd, October, 1938 the city was almost completely deserted, while considerable sections of it were afire. In the meantime factories and industrial plants of all kinds in Canton and neighbouring districts were being blown up and either completely or partially destroyed. For the remainder of the year trade was at a complete standstill, the Pearl River being closed to all but Japanese traffic. As the year drew to an end a number of the poorer section of the population returned to Canton.

The comparative values of the trade recorded in the statistics for 1938 and the preceding year were: direct foreign imports, $56.9 million as against $45.2 million; coastwise imports, $105.7 million as against $114.8 million; direct exports abroad, $106.7 million as against $63.8 million; and coastwise exports, $23 million as against $27.5 million. The large increase in exports may be attributed entirely to Yangtze Valley cargo passing through Canton. Actual sales of petroleum products in the Canton area were poor, but statistics show increased importation due to shipments to Central China. Gasolene imports improved from 9½ million litres in 1937 to 14.7 million litres; liquid fuel from 3,200 to 11,400 metric tons; kerosene from 10 million to 17.4 million litres; lubricating oil from 1.2 million to 1.9 million litres; and paraffin wax from 9,300 to 15,500 quintals. Central China demands were also responsible for the increased importation of cotton yarn, which rose from 13,000 to 80,000 kilogrammes, and for aluminium foil, which rose from 12,000 to 71,500 kilogrammes. Due to the hostilities, and especially to the invasion of South China in the autumn, sulphate of ammonia sales were little more than one-half those of the previous year. Despite all difficulties the silk industry had a satisfactory year, while there was an increased demand from America. White raw silk exports showed a conspicuous increase from 47,900 kilogrammes in 1937 to 64,000 kilogrammes, but steam filature raw silk sagged from 1 million to 957,000 kilogrammes. Indo-China was the chief purchaser, followed by India and France. Waste silk showed little change, 1 million kilogrammes being exported, the United States of America taking over 50 per cent, followed by France and Great Britian. There was, however, a heavy falling-off in the export of silk embroideries and natural silk piece-goods. Wolfram ore (tungsten) exports represented over one-third of the total value of the export trade abroad, 8,400 metric tons, being shipped as against 3.200 metric tons the previous year. This large increase was chiefly caused by the ore produced in South Kiangsi finding its outlet to the sea through Canton instead of through Kiukiang. The year opened with the price, though high, still on the downward grade, reaching its lowest point in May, then rising again until the begining of October when it sagged. The closing of the Pearl River in mid-October caused a sharp rise, and thereafter prices fluctuated until the end of the year. The ore was mostly shipped to Hongkong for sale, a considerable proportion being bartered to a German combine. Wood oil shipments from Central China were responsible for the rise in the export figure from 64,000 to 326,000 quintals. The cow hide trade was unsatisfactory, prices dropping sharply, but business in buffalo hides was more or less normal. The feather trade was poor, due to air raids and exchange control, while prices fell. Cassia lignea suffered severely in 1938, and during the four summer months its movement was prohibited by the authorities. The export of straw mats declined sharply, but mattings remained more normal. Leaf tobacco exports were favourably affected through no longer being controlled by a monopoly but suffered from the exchange control. Leading commodities not produced in this area which figure in the export statistics, having arrived from Central China, include bristles, egg products, pig intestines, goat skins, nutgalls and ramie. Imports of foreign rice increased by nearly 50 per cent, and there was a slight improvement in foreign wheat flour. Domestic wheat flour dropped to under 30 per cent of its 1937 figure. Air raids and the blowing-up of the plants before the Japanese advance rended most industrial undertaking derelict at the end of the year.

There was a considerable decrease in all classes of shipping due to the absence of Chinese-flag coastal vessels, the periodical closing of the Pearl River, and the adverse effects of hostilities generally. Total tonnage entered and cleared for the year was 3,613,827 tons as compared with 6,581,701 tons in 1937. Both the Canton-Hankow and Canton-Kowloon Railways suffered severely from air raids. Wongsha Station, the Canton terminus of the former, was one of the main objectives of hostile aircraft and was finally completely destroyed on the 23rd, October, 1938. Motor-trucks were extensively used for the carrying of cargo between Central China and Kowloon, and road traffic was very heavy up to the time of the invasion of South China. Commercial air service with Canton was suspended throughout the year. The Post Office suspended operations in mid-October, and the head office was gutted by fire on the 23rd, October, 1938. A limited mail service was resumed on the 27th, December, 1938, mails being carried either by overland couriers or by Japanese transport plying between Canton and Macao.

KOWLOON FRONTIER DISTRICT OF THE CHINESE MARITIME CUSTOMS

This is the inclusive name given to the Chinese Maritime Customs stations adjacent to Hongkong and established in 1887 in accordance with the Chefoo Agreement of 1876 and its Additional Article of 1885 for the purpose of recording the movement of opium and of collecting duty on the trade carried on by Chinese junks between Hongkong and Chinese ports. In 1899, when the New Territory was taken over by Hongkong, the Customs stations were removed from their former locations, which had been brought within the British boundary, and the present Stations and Barriers, naming them from west to east, are as follows: Lintin Station and Taishan Station (in the Canton Delta), Shehow and Kwaimiao Stations (on the shores of Deep Bay), Shatao Barrier (at the mouth of Shumchun River), Tsoc Yuk Wai Barrier (Shumchun River Station), Shumchun Railway Station and Lower Barrier (at Shumchun—nearby is Shumchun H.Q. and Wireless Station, a group of buildings on a hill not classed as a Customs Station), Lofong and Lentong Barriers and Shataokok Station (at the mouth of starting inlet). Yumtu and Sha-u-chung Stations and Namo Barrier (on the shores of Mirs Bay), Samun Station (on Tu Niang Island beyond Mirs point and further up the coast of Swabue Station). In addition there are certain minor posts for purely preventive work. Most of these Stations are temporarily evacuated due to the hostilities.

Trade in 1938

The total value of the trade in the Kowloon district for 1938 amounted to 176.7 million standard dollars, an increase of 77.4 million when compared with the corresponding figure for 1937. The following are the values of direct foreign trade recorded during the year with comparative statistics for the preceding year: Imports: 146.0 million dollars as against 82.7 million in 1937; Exports: 30.7 million dollars as against 16.6 million in 1937. These figures are not so gratifying as would appear at first sight, and although the volume of trade actually surpassed all previous records, depreciation of the foreign exchange value of the standard dollar by nearly 50 per cent during the latter half of 1938 must not be overlooked. On the other hand, the tightening of the blockade of the China coast, and still more the closing of the Yangtsz to shipping, only served to increase overland trade.

Statistics for direct imports show an increase of 7.9 millions gasolene. The importation of kerosene oil, however, was only 24.3 million litres, being 21.4 million litres less than 1937. Liquid fuel declined from 60,634 metric tons in 1937 to 36,108 metric tons in 1938. For lubricating oil there was an increase of 1.6 million litres over 1937 figure of 5.7 million litres. The large quantities of rice imported by steamer to Canton affected importations at Kowloon and a noticeable decrease resulted.

Among exports, wolfram, antimony regulus, wood oil and tea all established new records. Lack of demand, lower prices and the "Exchange Control" system accounted for the slump in duck feathers.

Owing to the Sino-Japanese crisis and fear of a European war exchange markets were in a constant state of confusion, and fluctuation of the standard dollar and Canton currency in relation to each other coupled with sharp depreciation of both in relation to foreign currencies had an important bearing on commercial transactions and trade in general. Sterling exchange on Hongkong remained steady throughout and only fluctuated between 1/2-7/8 and 1/2-19/32.

The trade of the Colony increased by 4.2 per cent compared with 1937, and in terms of sterling by 4.5 per cent. The value of imports was $618.1 (£38.2) millions compared with $617.1 (£38.1) millions in 1937; whilst the value of exports was $511.9 (£31.7) millions compared with $467.3 (£28.8) millions in 1937.

LAPPA

Lappa is the large, hilly island which shelters the inner harbour of Macao on its western side. It is also called by the Chinese Kung Pak of Tui Lien Shan, and by the Portuguese Patera Island. The island itself, which is within the jurisdiction of the Chungshan Magistrate (at Shekki) possesses no feature of interest; but it has given its name to the chain of stations under the control of the Chinese Maritime Customs which were established around Macao, by agreement with the Portuguese Government, in the year 1887. Of these stations the two principal—from a revenue collecting point of view—are at Malowchow, an islet close to Lappa and Chienshan, north of the Green Island.

There is a bus road between Macae and Shekki—the centre of the Chungshan District—completed in the year 1932. It is kept in good condition and a regular bus service is maintained by the Ki Kwan Bus Company. Connection may be made at Shekki for continuing the journey further inland by motor boats.

Abnormal conditions prevailed in the Lappa district due to the Sino-Japanese hostilities and the restrictions placed on trade in the course of operations. The blockade was gradually tightened during the year, trade being diverted to indirect and round-about channels open only to small junks and tows. Following the occupation of Canton by the Japanese in October, resulting in the disruption of communications between Hongkong, Canton, Kongmoon and West River ports, quite considerable consignments of goods found their way from Hongkong to Macao, where transhipments were made and the goods transported inland by small junks and sampans and to some extent by motor road.

The total value of the foreign import trade was $3.7 million as compared with $4 million, while the value of direct exports of Chinese produce was $7 million as compared with $3.7 million in the preceding year. The majority of stable imports declined: gasoline from 775,607 to 1,197 litres; kerosene oil from 4,258,473 to 1,257,447 litres; lubricating oil from 408,137 to 14,278 litres; and paraffin wax from 383 to 28 quintals. The decline was general in building materials. Sulphate of ammonia imported fell in quantity from 2,004 to 1.833 quintals. Imports of bran showed an increase from 15,528 to 84,998 quintals; of salt fish from 76,553 to 95,997 quintals; and wheat flour from 8,546 to 13,361 quintals.

Under exports there was a remarkable increase in such live stock as pigs, from 35,838 to 81,687, and poultry, from 597,566 to 1,111,748 head. Perishable goods such as oranges increased in quantity from 10,228 to 20,069 quintals; fresh fruits from 41,622 to 97,910 quintals; and fresh vegetables from 116,621 to 168,701 quintals. Fuel and firewood were also exported in large volume. The reason for these increases lay in the influx of refugees from the interior to Hongkong and Macao. The export, on the other hand, of indrustrial articles fell away noticeably, as, for instance tooth brushes, which fell in value from $72,927 to $4,591; tanned leather, from 1,070 to 73 quintals; and medicinal preparations, which declined in value from $141,572 to $7,800. Rice imported through the district totalled 15,463 quintals as against 48,731 quintals. Under General Regulations the tonnage of shipping declined by 91,971 tons, while under Indand Waters Steam Navigation Regulations there was a decline of 435,477 tons, cargo-junks ceasing to come down from West River after the fall of Canton and the registration of junks under this heading showing a marked falling away.

KONGMOON

門江 Kong-moon

Kongmoon was added to the list of treaty ports on 7th, March, 1904, in accordance with the stipulations of Article X of the Mackay Treaty. A British Consulate was at first established, but was withdrawn in 1905. The town of Kongmoon is located about three miles distant from the West River on a small tidal waterway which connects that river with the Gaemoon Estuary. It is in Sunwui District of Kwangtung Province at Latitude 22°-34'-49" N. and Longitude 113°-8'-53" E., and is about 45 miles from Macao, 70 from Canton, and 87 from Hongkong. The waterway on which Kongmoon is built is crowded with native craft of every description, while timber rafts line the banks near the entrance to the West River. The steamer anchorage proper is located on the West River at a point just above this entrance and is called Pakkai. It is included within the port limits and is the site of the Maritime Customs head office. The population of Kongmoon in normal times is about 55,000. The town was formerly a business centre of considerable importance, but its commercial standing has been lowered during recent years as a result of the general depression in trade and reduced remittances from Chinese overseas.

When first opened in 1904 it was generally considered that the proximity of Kongmoon to Hongkong and Macao, and its favourable situation as a trade outlet and distributing centre for the southern districts of the provinee, augured well for its future prosperity and development—but these hopes have not been fully realised.

Kongmoon no longer enjoys a direct junk trade with Shanghai and Foochow, and the opening up of Kiungchow and Pakhoi as treaty ports has still further diminished the junk trade and commercial importance of the port. In normal times there is daily communication by steamer with Hongkong and Macao, and an extensive traffic with Canton and other riparian cities in the province by the now familiar West River "Tow". These large floating hotels are towed by launch and equipped with every convenience for Chinese passenger traffic, including electric lights, fans and radios.

A railway from Pakkai to Toushan in the Toishan district was constructed in 1909-10 by native engineers trained in America. It is about 80 miles long and stops short six miles from the sea, because there is no good harbour in the vicinity. The railway authorities once contemplated shortening the line by constructing a steel bridge across the South-West River at Kungyick to replace the pontoon ferry at Niuwan, but this project failed for lack of funds when half completed. The failure is ascribed to decrease in railway receipts caused by keen competition from the bus service which parallels the entire line.

A few hundred miles of highways have been completed during recent years in the districts around Kongmoon, as a result of the unremitting efforts of the provincial authorities and co-operation of the people. The most important of these are the Kongmoon-Fatshan and Sun-Hok Highways. The former links this port with Fatshan and connects there with the Canton-Samshui Railway. The latter takes its name from the nearby towns of Sunwui and Hokshan and opens up the prosperous south-western portion of Kwangtung Province through a network of connecting roadways. A regular motor-bus service over these highways operates throughout the year and connects Kongmoon with the surrounding districts.

The West River between Kongmoon and the sea was closed to navigation in 1937 on account of the war. Thereafter steamer traffic with Hongkong was compelled to proceed via Yungki and through the Bocca Tigris entrance of the Pearl River. After occupation of Canton by the Japanese forces in October, 1938, steamer communication between this port and the outside world was entirely suspended. In its place junk traffic with Macao soon developed, and rapidly assumed large proportions. As all of the main waterways had been closed, the junks were forced to follow a devious route through the numerous small tidal creeks with which the delta abounds. Kongmoon soon became the centre of a large trade extending far into the interior and with Macao as an outlet. As a result of the hostilities, trade from distant sections of the province was temporarily diverted through Kongmoon—thus demonstrating the extraordinary capacity of the Chinese merchant to "carry on" under adverse conditions. After several false alarms, this trade was eventually terminated on 29th, March, 1939, following the sudden arrival of the Japanese forces who still continue to occupy the port.

Despite the Sino-Japanese conflict, the trade of the port of Kongmoon proved to be more satisfactory than anticipated, especially taking into consideration the fact that statistics for the year cover a period of 10 months only. Direct imports from abroad were valued at $3.7 million as compared with $4.6 million during 1937, coastwise importations of Chinese goods at $4.5 million as against $1.8 million; direct exports to foreign countries at $4.4 million as against $4.8 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese merchandise at $0.4 million as compared with $0.1 million.

Of staple imports, cotton and artificial silk piece-goods declined on account of the public will to use native products in time of war. An increase was recorded under salt fish, due to insufficiency of catches by the Chinese fishing fleet. A decline in the import of sulphate of ammonia from abroad was due to increased importations from Canton. A decrease in white sugar was the result of increased native production following the extensive planting of foreign-style sugar cane in the province.

Among staple exports, silk fell away, while lack of transport accounted for a considerable decline in the value of palm leaves and manufactures thereof. Decreases were also recorded under oranges, dried and salted turnips, fresh vegetables, black tea, soy and sauce, wood oil and mill paper. The chief increases were in garlic, leaf tobacco, fresh fish and live pigs, all resulting from heavy foreign demand.

The advance made under coastwise trade was attributed to the fact that, as a esult of defensive restrictions at the Bocca Tigris, local dealers found it more rofitable to deal direct with the various coast ports, such as Shanghai, Swatow, and akhoi. With the Japanese landing at Bias Bay, the Bocca Tigris was closed on the 3th, October, steam communication with the outside world ceasing thereafter except y permission of the Japanese. A brisk junk trade, however, soon developed with Macao to take the place of the former steam traffic with Hongkong. As a result of his communication with Macao the trade of Kongmoon increased considerably owards the end of the year, leading to the reopening of the Customs early in the New Year. With favourable climatic conditions, rice crops was excellent and fruit rowers fared well.

SAMSHUI

水三 Sàm-shui

The Treaty port of Samshui, opened in 1897 under the Burmah Convention—nearly 40 years after Consul Harry Parkes' East River Expedition—is situated near the junction of the West and North Rivers, in lat. 23 deg. 6 min. 30 sec. N., and long. 112 deg. 53 min. and 48 sec. E. The anchorage known as Hokow, at which foreigners reside, was formerly an ordinary Chinese fishing village, with boat-building as its leading industry and a flooded state in summer as its characteristic peculiarity, but it is fast becoming a busy mart. According to the Convention, the town of Samshui and Kongkun (a small village situated among the hills opposite Hokow) together constitute the port area. The formal opening took place on 4th June, 1897, since which date the trade of the port increased steadily until July, 1925, when the strike and boycott inaugurated against Hongkong shipping caused an unprecedented falling off in imports. The junk traffic is large, and the abolition of the likin station at this port and at the stage ports—Shiuhing and Dosing—from the beginning of 1931 was undoubtedly a great boon to merchants. This was evidenced by the fact that the number of cargo junks have since increased remarkably. The district city of Samshui itself was once surrounded by an imposing wall built in the 6th year of Chia Ching of the Mings (about A.D. 1560), the year after the place attained to the dignity of a magistracy. This wall was completely demolished in 1930 and the tract of land obtained thereby was transformed into a circular maloo, and some of the bricks were used for the construction of a public garden, known as the Chung Shan Garden, which was formally opened by the Magistrate on the 28th June, 1930. In the town, where dwell the magistrate and the commander of the few local troops, the space is but half occupied by poor dwelling-houses and one small street containing provision shops. Outside the North Gate which has now disappeared stands an imposing temple temp. Chia Ch'ing of the Ch'ing Dynasty (Circa 1800). Between the town and the river is a fine nine-storied pagoda, rebuilt during the reign of Chia Ch'ing, some 100 years ago.

The business focus of the district is Sainam, a large well-built town of no great antiquity, three miles distant, on the creek leading to Fatshan. At Sainam there is established an electric plant which supplies Samshui with light.

Two sets of steamship lines converge here from Canton and Hongkong, respectively, and tourists in China can do many worse things than visit the West River which presents more beautiful scenery than is to be found on any steamer route in China—the Yangtsze gorges, perhaps, excepted. Since 1st May, 1905, Samshui has been made a port of entry for foreign steamers going up the West River. Numerous steam launches carrying passengers or towing passenger-boats ply between Samshui and neighbouring cities on the West and North Rivers and on the creek leading to Fatshan and Canton. A railway line from Canton to Samshui via Fatshan was inaugurated on the 26th September, 1904, and five trains run daily each way between Canton and Samshui. The climate of the port is as healthy as any in the delta. In the summer, frequent squalls cool the air, and it is seldom that there is not a breeze of some kind; in winter, the air is fresh and clear. The waterways and surrounding country are picturesque, and the adjacent heights offer pleasant walks. Excursions of one or two days enable one to climb Mt. McCleverty (,2000 ft.), at the mouth of the Samshui Reach; or Ting Hu Shan (4,000 ft.), behind the celebrated temple known to foreigners as "Howlik," near which is to be found the popular bathing pool and fall; or the hills forming the first gorge, from which used to be quarried the famous ink-stone known throughout China as Tuan Yen. Perhaps the most interesting of the sights in the neighbourhood are the Seven Star Hills, which are situated close to the pleasant town of Shiu Hing, some 30 miles from the port. These hills, formed of pure white marble rising to a height of about 400 feet from the plain, hold many temples—some apparently clinging to the sides of the cliffs—and caves and grottoes. The fine bronze figures of more than life-size in one of these temples are well worthy of attention. Fair snipe shooting can be obtained in the winter, and an occasional partridge, quail or duck may be added to the bag. The attractions of good sport and pleasing surroundings have made Samshui a week end resort for some of the Canton community confined to the small island of Shameen.

A telegraph service is maintained from Sainam. A nice building for the Post Office, situated alongside the road leading from the railway-station to the stone jetty, was completed and opened to the public on September 9th, 1921. There are no Consulates established; the Consuls within whose districts Samshui lies reside either in Canton or Hongkong.

Though the Samshui district enjoyed comparative peace during the first nine months of the year, trading conditions were naturally adversely affected both by the instability of the money market and by the Sino Japanese hostilities, which culminated in the landing of Japanese troops in Bias Bay on the 12th, October, the closing of the Pearl River to navigation on the 14th, and the enforced evacuation by the Customs of Samshui on the night of the 23rd, October, 1938. Throughout the year the exchange rate between the Hongkong dollar and the legal tender notes, to which the Kwangtung provincial currency was linked at the fixed ratio of Small-coin $144= Standard $100, was subject to a wide range of fluctuation, Hongkong dollar notes 100 exchanging for about standrad $105 in January, Standard $132 in May, and Standard $180 and over in June and thereafter. This ever-increasing value of the Hongkong dollar in ration to the national and provincial currencies, coupled with the abnormally high prices ruling in Hongkong, placed imported goods largely beyond the reach of the masses, with the result that direct foreign imports were valued at $0.4 million only as against $1.2 million in 1937. In the value of direct export trade there was a slight improvement from $188,000 to $213,000. Steamer-borne interport trade remained insignificant, but tow-boats and junks carrying native goods did comparatively well. Under foreign imports there is little of interest to note; metal goods declined, as did the import of salt fish, there being a slight increase in the import of wheat flour. Salt herrings and betelnuts fell also to insignificant amounts. Under export abroad, timber poles increased from nil to 134,109 pieces, while there was small exports of cassia oil, cassia lignea and black tea.

Prior to the closing of the Pearl River in October, shippiug on the West River was generally satisfactory. The Canton-Samshui Railway functioned irregularly owing to repeated air raids, most of the passenger traffic being diverted to tow-boats plying by night. Rice crops in the district were reported to be good there being no floods during the year. The reinforced concrete jetty referred to in the previous year's report as being contructed under military auspices was completed during the year.

Wuchow, opened to foreign trade on June 4th, 1897, by the Special Article of th Burmah Convention, is situated on the Sikiang or West River at its junction with th Fu or Kuei (Cassia) River. By the steamer routes at present authorised it is distan about 220 miles from Hongkong and Canton. Wuchow is the limit of navigation fo ocean-going steamers; but, during eight months in the year, vessels drawing not mo than 3½ feet can reach Kueihsien (150 miles beyond Wuchow), and Nanning (36 miles from here) can be reached almost all the year round by boats drawing 2½ f The population of the city, according to a recent census taken by the local Polic Authorities, is 82, 349. The annual inundations caused by the rise in the river—ther is an average difference of 60 feet between the winter and summer levels—are a scour of great inconvenience to the inhabitants and at times bring about a total cessatio of business. To obviate this, the principal steamship offices, the Custom House an Tax Office are located on pais (houses built on pontoons), moored alongside the rive bank. In July, 1924, Wuchow was visited by a very high flood—73 feet 9 inches—whic is the second highest on record. The highest record—79 feet 6 inches—occurred in 191 In winter the only local industry worthy of mention is boat building; whe the river falls the foreshore is lined with matsheds, where native craft c all descriptions are constructed. The situation of Wuchow makes it th natural distributing centre for the trade between Kweichow, Eastern Yunna Kwangsi, and Hongkong and Canton. The future is full of promise, and Wuchow sure to make a bold bid for second place as the largest trade market in the sout of China. Local merchants are making strenuous efforts to divert to Wuchow, viâ th Liuchow and West Rivers, the trade of south-eastern Kweichow, which is principall supplied via the Yangtsze. Attempts are being made to work the manganese antimony, copper, and tin mines which abound in the Kwangsi Province.

The Kwangsi Provincial Government were able to extend their system of moder highways considerably. The whole province can now be traversed from the vicinity Wuchow by motor car north-westwards into Kweichow, the capital of whic province (Kweiyang) can be reached in some 24 hours as against the man weeks which such a journey would have occupied in the days before moto highways came into existence. Owing to the barrier formed by the West Rive the road system terminates at Yunghu—about 14 kilometres above Wuchow instead of at Wuchow itself; but a launch service connects these two place and, from the former town, almost any important city in the province ca now be reached by car. Due, however, to the destruction of roads south of the We River towards the Kwangtung border, Wuchow has been cut off, since the latter pa of the year, from any direct motor traffic with other parts of the province. Th air-service connecting Chungking with Hongkong undertaken by the China Nation Aviation Corporation, formerly making Wuchow as a port of call, has been suspende and is not yet resumed. The construction of the Siang-Kwei Railway, of a tot length of 545 milometres, connecting Hengchow in Hunan with Kweilin in th province, was completed early in September. Although it has been severely bombe on several occasions, a train service has been maintained with fair regularity.

The province of Kwangsi and the port of Wuchow did not, except for occasion air raids, suffer seriously from the Sino-Japanese hostilities until later of the yea Up to the month of August trade was good, thereafter, however, repeated bombing seriously hampered trade, which, following the closure of the West River and th Japanese landing at Bias Bay, came to a complete standstill. The value statistic as recorded by the Customs were as follows: direct foreign imports, $5.7 million a compared with $7.7 million for 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese produce $15.8 million as against $15.2 million; direct exports abroad, $21.7 million as agains

$26.4 million; and coastwise exports of Chinese goods, $5.6 million as compared with $6.5 million. The importation of metals and metalware fell off considerably as little construction work, except the building of roads and the strengthening of bridges on roads already constructed, was undertaken. Oils, both lubricating and motor, registered an increased from 320,161 litres in 1937 to 768,640 litres in the year under review, the greater portion of these oils being for consumption in Hunan and Kweichow provinces formerly supplied via the Yangtze River. Exports abroad of wood oil showed a decline in quantity from 108,175 to 63,175 quintals. Only 10,584 quintals of manganese ore were exported as against 513,860 quintals in 1937, large quantities of manganese powder being consumed locally in the manufacture of flashlight torches, an industry which was greatly developed during the past two years. Of wolfram ore (tungsten), 14,169 quintals were exported as compared with 15,457 quintals during 1937. Restrictions were imposed on movements of antimony, export only being permitted under permit. There was some decline in the export of tin ingots from 22,000 to 18,673 quintals. The export of live pigs and poultry declined owing to the closure of the West River, while only about one-third of the preceding year's total of cassia lignea was exported to Hongkong. Tea oil exports increased from 23,011 to 55,274 quintals. No rice was imported, the province of Kwangsi being independent of foreign supplies with the provincial surplus being exported to Kwangtung. Only vessels under the British flag plied between Hongkong and Wuchow, these ceasing to run after the fall of Canton in October. Since the establishment of branch offices of the Central Bank of China and the Bank of China in the early part of the year the use of national legal tender has greatly increased and no new local bank-notes have been issued.

Early in the year exchange ruled at St. $106 or Local $212 = Hongkong $100; later on the price of the Hongkong dollar rose, and in October Hongkong $100 = St. $207.50 or Local $415, while by the end of the year Hongkong $100 = St. $175 or Local $350.

The construction of the Hsiang-Kuei Railway, of a total length of 545 kilometres, connecting Hengchow in Hunan with Kweilin in Kwangsi, was completed early in September. During the year the China National Aviation Corporation kept up a regular service.

NANNING

甯南 Nan-ning

Nanning, the capital of Kwangsi, is situated in the southern part of the province, on the steep left bank of the Yukiang, the most important tributary flowing into the West River from the south. It lies in the centre of a wide and fertile plain which is some 400 feet above sea-level. The climate is moderate, the temperature in the height of summer seldom exceeding 96 degree (F.) and in the winter hardly falling below 40.

In 1907 Nanning was voluntarily opened to foreign trade in accordance with the Imperial Edict issued in 1899, whereby an area about a mile south of the walled city (with the old wall city on the east, the obsolete city tower on the south, the river on the west, and the Yi-Ching-Fong Road on the north as the four limits) has been set apart as the trading part. Within these boundaries both foreign and Chinese merchants are allowed to build houses, shops and godowns; but on the part of the foreigners, land cannot be purchased, it can only be leased for a period of 30 years, and on expiry the lease may be renewed once more. During the Ching Dynasty the administration within the said area was in the hands of a Commissioner, titled "Tso-Kiang-Tutai"; since the establishment of the Republic, the Commissioner of the Nanning Maritime Customs was appointed to serve as the Commissioner of that Municipality at the same time. In 1914 the management was taken over by the Nanning Police Headquarters which has recently been transformed into the Public Safety Bureau.

The Suburb of the city was formerly very scarcely populated and it was not until 1932 when the administration office of the Governor was moved from the city to the several imposing buildings newly completed somewhere south of the said area, which later in January, 1933 also accommodated the many departments of the government, that the suburb has evolved from solitude to prosperity. Immediately following the construction of the government office buildings number of premises for various institutions, public utility enterprises, etc., were erected. In addition to the Customs House and Post Office already founded in the past years there are at present in the suburb a Government Chemical Laboratory, a Government Observatory, a broadcast station, a Government Press, a Waterworks, a refrigerating plant, a Botanical Garden, a public library, a park, and an army hosipital. Arrangements have also been made by the government to establish a residential quarter in the southeastern part of the suburb where lodges for the homes of government officials are already on the increase. There is a paved street already completed, thereby linking this section with the city by motor cars and buses. Suffice it to say, all aspects point to the light that prosperity and well-being are forthcoming to this ever progressing city. There are, however very few foreign firms in this part of the town except a branch office of the Asiatic Petroleum Co., and the Standard Oil Co. Military and police headquarters are still located inside the city.

With the rapid improvement of the provincial highway system Kwangsi possesses, 1935, 6,443 li of motor roads constructed by the provincial authorities and 5,898 li constructed by the district authorities, amounting a total of 12,341 li. Nanning being the capital city of the province is the centre of all motor roads. The Yung-Pin route, linking up with the Hunan border, is to pass through Liuchow and Kwelin districts in the north with its terminal at Chuen-Hsien. Another goes through Ching-Yuan and reaches Tu-Shan near the border of Kweichow in the West. A third passes through Kwei-Hsien to Wuchow, the most important commerical part and the east gate of Kwangsi, leading eastward to the province of Kwangtung. A fourth is connected with Wu-Ming and Pe-Se near Yunnan, and a fifth goes in the southwest to Lungchow adjacent to the border of Indo-China. There are about 25 buses running daily on the highways to facilitate movements of passengers and freight. In Nanning. there are 13 garages or private-owned motor car companies with more than 30 automobiles and buses for highway transportation. In addition, there are 6 buses running within city limits, which are owned by the government. All highway traffic and bus companies are under the control of the Bureau of Highway Traffic Administration.

As for Communication on water Nanning is connected with the outside world also by way of Yukiang (or Yuk River) which leads down-stream to Wuchow in the east, up stream to Lungchow in the southwest, or up stream to Pe-Se in the northwest. Motor boats sailing daily from Nanning to these three cities. Concerning Communication by telephone, the dial system is adopted in the city of Nanning. The excellent telephone system recently completed enables the provincial government's orders to be sent through telephones (sometimes through the broadcast station) even to the most distant districts in the province. Besides, air transportation has been lately made possible by establishment of the Nanning-Canton and Nanning-Lungchow air lines which, carrying both passengers and mail, are run by the South Western Aviation Co.

In order to meet the rapid-growing demand of industry and trade the Kwangsi Province Bank has issued notes for circulation in the province against which the cash reserve is always so carefully kept that serious runs or depreciation of the notes seldom occur. The Bank with its head office and a board of Directors in Nanning has three main branches, (one in Hongkong, one in Canton, one in Kweichow) and a number of smaller branches and exchange stores situated in different districts. Since its establishment the Bank has been yielding steady interests and attractive profits.

As for commerce and trade, Nanning being the capital of the province and having the good communication facilities both by land and by water, is only next to Wuchow. Public utility and small industrial enterprises in Nanning are being developed very rapidly. During the past few years there have been established, in addition to those mentioned above, a leather-manufacturing factory, a dyeing and textile mill, a bonegraining and a button-making factory. With their continual effort of marking progress, they are all assured with a promising future and brilliant success.

Despite Japanese air raids in January, September and November, a general exodus of population, and unfavourable exchange, the trade of Nanning for the first nine months of the year continued to be satisfactory, domestic imports maintaining their normal level with coastwise exports showing an increase. Following the fall of Canton and the closing of the West River in October, trade conditions underwent noticeable change. The source of supply of certain imported goods was gradually cut off, while the domestic export trade with the port of Wuchow was seriously hampered by the inability of cargoes to proceed beyond that port. Exporters, nevertheless, diverted their goods to other routes, but statistics for these became no longer available. The value statistics of the trade of the port as recorded by the Customs were as follows: direct foreign imports, chiefly by parcel post, $28,000 as compared with $22,152 during 1937; coastwise imports, $5.5 million as against $5.8 million; and coastwise exports, $4.4 million as compared with $2.8 million. Cotton yarn, the principal domestic import, fell from 32,045 to 26,700 quintals due to shortage of supplies and to the fact that large quantities of this commodity for consumption at Kweiyang were obtained direct from Wuchow instead of from Nanning as formerly. Cotton piece-goods also declined, the Shanghai variety being replaced by local hand-made cloth wherever possible. Other staple imports such as cement, cigarettes, and matches also fell away. Under exports coastwise, wood oil advanced from 7,256 quintals during 1937 to 24,915 quintals, aniseed oil from 54,186 to 219,767 kilogrammes, and paper wadding from 2,289 to 4,085 quintals. Black fungus maintained its good market in Swatow, while aniseed star failed to recover its lost ground in Northern ports owing to the continued hostilities. Hides, leather, duck feathers, and doe skins largely found their way out by devious routes, while, owing to the shortage of motor-boats and enhanced freights, sugar and beans were mostly shipped down river by junk. Melon seeds exhibited a further advance owing to an excellent harvest. The first rice crop was badly damaged by prolonged drought, but the second rice crop and all other cereal and fruit harvests were above the average.

KOUANG-TCHEOU-WAN

灣州廣 Kwáng-chau-wan

The bay of Kwangchau (or according to the French official spelling, Kouang-Tcheou-Wan), situated in the province of Kwangtung, was ceded on lease with the surrounding territories by a Convention between France and China, and occupied by the French on the 22nd of April, 1898. It is situated between 20 deg. 45 min. and 21 deg. 17 min. north latitude, and 107 deg. 55 min. and 108 deg. 16 min. east longitude at a distance more or less 230 miles west-south-west of Hongkong. The two islands of Nao-tcheou and Tang-hai placed at the entrance of the bay make an excellent closed port into which entrance is by two narrow passages. The port measures about 15 miles long, and for about half of its length it is three or four miles in breadth. The depth of anchorage of 20 metres extends over a length of more than 10 miles and borders on the extremity of the junk port of Tchekam, an important commercial centre in constant communication with Macao, Hongkong, Hainan and Pakhoi. The neighbouring districts are well cultivated, and it is believed mineral beds will be found. The new French territory is only separated from the valley of the West River by chains of hills. Following the Convention of delimitation signed on the 16th of November, 1899, between Marshal Sou and Admiral Courrejolles, the territory of Kouang-Tcheou-Wan was placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Indo-China. The chief place of the territory is the town of Fort Bayard, which is at the entrance of the interior port on the right bank of the river Ma Tché. It is the commercial port, with the establishments of the civil administration, military service and the special offices.

The area of the territory is about 200 square miles and its population about 230,000 inhabitants including 100 French and 600 Annamites.

Kouang Tcheou-Wan is a free port in which all commercial operations can be carried on without paying any duty. A regular bi-monthly line of steamers joins Kouang-tcheou-wan to Haiphong and Hongkong. Five steamers of French-Chinese-Portuguese-English ownership run between Kouang-Tcheou-Wan and Hongkong.

A regular service of automobiles runs between Fort Bayard (12,000 inhabitants) and the towns of Tchekam (35,000 inhabitants), Potsi, Sin-Tchi, Taiping, Tchimoun, Teou-Soc, Poteou and the Chinese towns of Soui-Kay, Onpou, Lim-kong, Wat-Lam, Wou-Tcheou, Wampo, Ou-Tcheou, Moui-Loc, Lei-Tcheou, Pakhoi.

75 km. of new roads run in the island of Tanghai between the little towns of Tongsan, Sui-lao-kao, No-kan, Phi-leou, Cao-my-sao.

5 km. of roads run in the island of Nao-Tchao which includes the port of Tam-soui and Pac-Kong.

Fort Bayard and Tchekam are provided with electric light; a telephone between these two localities for private and commercial purposes is working daily; every district in the interior is connected with the chief town either with telegraph or telephone. An ice factory exists at Fort Bayard. A hundred and fourteen motor-cars are in circulation.

The territory's medical corps, placed under the direction of a field officer of the health service of the colonial forces includes three doctors. The European population is provided with medical attendance at the Fort-Bayard hospital where they are also admitted, the strangers of the neighhouring regions of China who want it; the natives are treated in the hospitals of Fort-Bayard and Tchekam.

A wireless station, whose traffic exceeds 900.000 words by year, connects the Territory, through Indo-China, with the telegraphic system of all countries.

Trade in 1937

The local trade maintains a steady vitality as attested by the following figures:

	Import	Export
Year: 1937	H.K. $9,735,070	H.K. $7,534,721

PAKHOI

海 北 Pak-hoi

Pakhoi was opened to foreign trade in 1877 by the Chefoo Convention. It is situated on the Gulf of Tongking in long. E. 109 deg. 7 min. and lat. N. 21 deg. 29 min.

The Chinese town is situated on a peninsula, at the western extremity of which are a few low hills (Kuantao Head 嶺頭冠). It faces nearly due north, and in winter is much exposed to the force of the N.E. monsoon winds. These blow so hard at times as to interfere materially with the shipment and discharge of cargo from steamers in the harbour, the anchorage for which is situated opposite the western end of the town and a mile and a half from the Custom House near the eastern end of the town.

Extending to the south and east is a plain which is level for many miles, although the country gradually rises towards the north. Attempts at cultivation have been made upon this plain immediately to the south of the town, but with varying success. Various roads intersect the country in the vicinity of the port and are utilized for bringing in some of the produce from the surrounding district. The carts in use for this purpose are heavy, unwieldy vehicles of an almost pre-historic type. They are drawn largely by oxen and have huge solid wooden wheels of the most primitive pattern, by which, needless to say, the roads are badly cut up in wet weather. During recent years an extensive road building programme has been carried out and are now motor connections between Pakhoi and Limchow (州廉), Tonkin, Kwangchow-wan, Kwangsi and the Canton Delta. Sportsmen will find the following game in the vicinity of Pakhoi: quails, snipe, partridges, wild pigeons, wild ducks, and some woodcocks and pheasants. The climate of the port during at least six months of the year is a trying one for Europeans, though the nights are, for the tropics, comparatively cool. Accurate figures for the population of the town, as elsewhere in China, are difficult to obtain; but the number of inhabitants may perhaps be put at some 30,000 in normal times. In recent years, no foreign consuls or merchants have resided at Pakhoi, and the only foreign residents have been a few Mission and Customs representatives. Fishing is one of the most important of the local industries, and a large number of vessels are employed in it.

At Pakhoi the year 1938 was one of difficulty and uncertainty, the trade of the port being much upset by the abnormal exchange resulting from the hostilities. A comparison of the statistics of trade with the preceding year shows direct foreign imports valued at $0.77 million as compared with $1.15 million; coastwise importations of Chinese goods, $2.86 million as against $2.92 million; direct exports to foreign countries, $2.55 million as against $1.57 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $1.46 million as compared with $1.57 million. Pakhoi's trade, especially in imports, remains handicapped by its shallow harbour and lack of landing facilities. The import of mineral oils was insufficient to meet commercial demand, being handicapped by abnormal exchange and other charges. During 1938 the importation of kerosene oil amounted to 446,003 litres only as compared with 2.2 million litres in 1937, many of the poorer population reveting to the use of vegetable oil as an illuminant. The import of gasolene also declined from 471,674 to 198,310 litres, with imports of lubricating oil showing a slight increase. The import of iron bars and similar construction materials was adversely affected by the continued hostilities. Increased imports of wheat flour—from 2,642 to 6,061 quintals—were due to the larger number of people taking refuge in the interior districts adjacent to Pakhoi. Owing to constant demand from Hongkong with its crowded population more pigs were exported from Pakhoi than ever before, exports numbering 40,073 head as against 28,563 head during 1937. Similarly, 22,843 head of poultry were exported to Hongkong as compared with 4,398 head in 1937. The export of firewood more than doubled in quantity, while the export of groundnut oil increased from 810 to 2,305 quintals. Wood oil exports also increased from 1,067 to 6,342 quintals, shipments from the interior being facilitated by the new road system. During the early months of the year Shanghai brands of cigarettes were difficult to obtain, their place being taken by French varieties. Later, however, the Shanghai brands became procurable from Hongkong factories and quickly regained their market. Exports of fishery products to Hongkong increased despite the many obstacles encountered by the fishing-junks in the course of hostilities. The planting of extra land, under Government encouragement and favourable climatic conditions, conduced to an extra production of rice, no foreign rice or paddy being imported at Pakhoi during the year. Prior to the fall of Canton considerable quantities of gypsum were exported to Canton for use in the cement works there; no other minerals were exported during the year, and the two mines of the Yü Sheng Manganese Ore Mining Company remained closed.

Total tonnage entered and cleared during the year amounted to 513,901 tons as compared with 373,071 tons in 1937. Steam shipping was at times irregular, but during most of the year exports were facilitated by coasters with cargoes of Hongay coal calling for deck cargo. During the first months the steamers of Messrs. Butterfield & Swire enjoyed a virtual monopoly of Pakhoi's sea trade, but during the second half of the year Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co.'s Shanghai-Haiphong ships called at Pakhoi on their way north. Few steamers other than British called at the port. No airplanes touched at Pakhoi throughout the year.

琼州 Kiung-chau 海口 Hoi-hau

Hoihow is the seaport of the prefectural city of Kiungchow, the capital of the Island of Hainan. The two towns are separated by a distance of some three miles of low hills dotted with graves; and across these lies a semi-macadamised road.

The port of Hoihow was opened by the establishment of a branch of the Chinese Maritime Customs in April, 1876. The harbour of Hoihow is an open roadstead, unprotected against the North-east monsoon, which blows with undisturbed vigour from September to April. The working of cargo is, therefore, normally difficult during those months, and at times impossible. In addition to the above disadvantages those months are also the dry months when no rain falls up-country, and consequently no water comes down by the Po Chung River to the sea. Again, the tides are more erratic in the winter than they are in the summer: sometimes there are two tides during the 24 hours, sometimes one, and sometimes none. Cargo then, having been loaded with difficulty into a cargo-boat alongside the importing steamer, has to face a stormy passage of two to three miles to the spit, which runs parallel to the town of Hoihow and a mile distant from it. Once at the spit the cargo-boat may be able to pole up the two miles of shallow muddy water which separates it from Hoihow.

As regards health, there is less fever in Hoihow than anywhere else in Hainan. There is excellent water to be had by the sinking of artesian wells, and several are already in existence. A harbour light and a light at Lamko (western entrance of the Hainan Straits) were opened in 1894; also one at Cape Cami on the lower tip of the peninsula in 1895. An Aga Lantern apparatus was installed on the West Fort close to the city at the commencement of 1916.

Despite the coastal blockade, occasional air raids, and the evacuation of large numbers of residents to the interior and Hongkong for safety, the trade of the port of Kiungchow was well maintained, the trade statistics as recorded being as follows: direct importations from abroad, $3.6 million as compared with $3.6 million; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise, $7.4 million as against $5.7 million; direct exportations to foreign countries, $4.3 million as against $3.5 million; and coastwise exportations of Chinese produce, $7.6 million as compared with $8.2 million. Among foreign imports there was little advance, most commodities either maintaining the same level or showing some decline. The most marked shrinkage appeared in kerosene oil and gasoline, the main items of import, which declined from 3,386,009 to 1,838,514 litres and from 2,728,117 to 2,213,215 litres respectively. Wheat flour arrived in greater quantities, totalling for the year 17,784 quintals as against 10,114 quintals. The increasing influx of cigarettes from abroad—from 6,000 to 119,950 five-hundreds—was due to the establishment at Hongkong of branch factories of the Yee Tsoong Tobacco Company and the Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company. As regards coastwise importations, the value of cotton yarn and its products shared more than one-half of the total. Other coastwise imports showing increases were paper, metals and fire-crackers. Reduced importations of rice and paddy reflected the excellent harvests in the neighbouring districts.

Pigs remained the mainstay of the direct export trade. Hides and sesamum seed receded from 4,365 to 3,659 quintals and from 6,439 to 515 quintals respectively. The embargo placed on cattle affected the export trade, no cattle being exported during the year as against 6,446 head in the first eight months of 1937. Under the coastwise exports the trade in dried betelnuts, groundnut oil, dried lichees, melon seeds, sesamum seed and vegetable oil remained as brisk as ever. A striking advance was made in rice and paddy, coastwise exports amounting to 5,000 quintals as against nil during the preceding year. The export coastwise of sugar dropped from 206,247 to 171,109 quintals, the loss of the Tientsin and Shanghai markets being a serious blow to local producers.

州 龍 Lung-chow

This city is situated at the junction of the Sung-chi and Kao-ping rivers in lat. 22 deg. 21 min. N., and long. 106 deg. 45 min. E., near the South-western border of the province of Kwangsi, and was selected as the seat of the frontier trade of that province with Tonkin. The continuation of the above-named two rivers is known as the Tso-chiang or left branch of the West River, and it enters the main stream some 30 miles above Nanning. The town is prettily situated amongst the mountains, having exits by the rivers mainly, and lies at an elevation of some 300 feet above sea level. The city wall, last repaired in 1887, is being demolished rapidly to make a circular road round the city proper. A census taken in 1929 showed the Lungchow population as consisting of 3,500 families, in all 14,796 persons, there being no foreign residents in 1931. From a military point of view Lungchow is considered to be a place of importance. Troops are stationed there and at the three frontier stations of Namkuan. Pingerh, and Shuikou, all roughly thirty miles distant in a westerly direction. The port was opened to Franco-Annamese trade on the 1st June, 1889, and has proved a valuable back door into China when strikes obstruct trade elsewhere Without however an extension of the Hanoi-Langson railway, any marked development of Lungchow is likely to be slow, though the line now runs through to Nasham, where stocks of kerosene were kept on hand during 1924, 1925 and 1926 for importation into China. The frontier road runs from Dongdang on the railway, through Namkuan or Port de Chine to Lungchow, and carries at the present date a considerable amount of motor traffic, the distance of 54 kilometres taking on an average of about three hours, There are several motor-car companies—all Chinese owned—engaged in regular traffic between Lungchow, Shuikon (a frontier mart) as well as Langson in Tonkin. The Lungchow-Nanning motor road has been opened to traffic since March, 1932, with several motor cars engaged in the regular run between the two cities, taking 8 hours to cover the whole journey of about 200 miles. The intervening country is very beautiful and runs through very mountainous areas, in which are a number of ock caves, formerly the habitat of natives indigenous to the neighbourhood. Telegraphic communication exists with Canton and other places on the West River, with Mêngtsz in Yunnan viâ Posé, and with places in Tonkin. The Chinese Post Office temporarily maintains their mail service between Lungchow and Langson in Tonkin by regular couriers instead of by motor under contract as before owing to the irregular running of trans-frontier motor cars, and sends mails to Nanning daily by a motor driven mail-car run by the Lungchow-Nanning Public Road Control Bureau since December, 1932. An establishment of the Chinese Maritime Customs is maintained at the port where foreign interests are in the charge of Consuls resident on the West River and in Hongkong. There was a Catholic Church on the South side of the Tso-chiang, the small orphanage established by the Emanuel Mission in the suburbs outside the East Gate having been removed to Hong Kong since February, 1930. The Consulate, Customs buildings and Missionary Church were completely looted and badly damaged during a Communist uprising in February, 1930. Through the prompt action on the part of the Kwangsi troops under General Wei Yun Tsung to restore peace and order in the district towards the end of 1930, the city of Lungchow, though practically deserted after the communist uprising, has gradually returned to its former prosperity, with a large population and a number of new shops. The trip up from Nanning usually takes from three to four days, and that down to Nanning about 30 hours, according to the water in the river, the level of which is liable to very sudden fluctuations during the rainy season of July and August. It has been known to rise as high as 75 feet, when the iron suspension bridge across the river is only two feet above the flood. Motor boats carry most of the cargo from and to West River ports, whilst frontier trade is carried by small junks and rafts, and by carts on the overland routes which usually travel in convoys of some number as in Tonkin. The River scenery between Lungchow and Nanning with its succession of gorges and rapids is well worth seeing but accommodation for Europeans on the motor boats is not of a luxurious type though each vessel has one special cabin for official travellers. The climate of the port is damp and very hot for some eight months of the year, but the winter is cold enough to be very pleasantamid such picturesque surroundings.

Apart from air raids by Japanese planes in September and November, Lungchow enjoyed a tranquil year. Trade progressed smoothly for the first nine months until, following the Japanese invasion of South China, communication with Canton and Hongkong became interrupted. Thereafter the route to French Indo-China was more extensively used for the transport of merchandise both inwards and outwards. The statistics of the trade of the port according to value were as follows: direct foreign imports, $273,000 as against $83,000 in 1937; direct exports of Chinese produce abroad, $425,000 as against $296,000.

For the domestic trade of the port, which is carried on by motor-launches under Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations, junks, motor vehiches, pack-mules and pedestrians, no accurate statistics are available. Deducting certain articles which showed abnormal increases as a result of the obstruction in down-river traffic, the figures do not show any appreciable improvement in the trade of the district with French Indo-China. Chinese goods continued to dominate the local market at the expense of foreign-made imports.

Under exports, antimony ore, the outstanding product of the district, declined in quantity from 23,241 to 8,380 quintals. Antimony regulus and aniseed oil were shipped in increased quantities owing to the obstruction in down-river routes. Due to unseasonable weather, rice, maize and sugar cane crops were much reduced. The construction of the Chennankuan-Nanning section of the Hsiang-Kuei Railway commenced in April. During the year several neighbouring districts resumed connexion with Lungchow in the exchange of commodities, while considerable activity was evident in highway construction. Central Government legal tender notes became more current, the value of the local dollar note having been officially fixed at 2 to 1 in relation to the national legal tender dollar note. No commercial planes visited Lungchow during the year.

MENGTSZ AND YUNNANFU

自蒙 Méng-isz

Mengtsz is a district city in the south-east of Yunnan, and together with Manhao, a small village on the right bank of the Red River, was opened to trade by the Additional Convention to the French Treaty of Tientsin of the 25th April, 1886, signed at Peking on the 26th June, 1887. The town is two days' journey by pony from Manhao, but is only an hour's distance by train from Pishihchai, a station on the Tien-Yueh Railway. It is beautifully situated, being built on a cultivated plateau 20 miles long by about 12 miles in breadth, encircled by picturesque mountains, and is 4,280 feet above the level of the sea. The place was of much more importance before the Mahommedan rebellion, as the numerous well-built temples, many of them now in ruins, still testify. The French Consul hoisted his flag at Mengtsz on the 30th April, 1889, and the Customs station was opened in the following August. Since the extension of the Tien-Yueh Railway to Yunnanfu and the removal of the French Consulate, the Customs headquarters and the Banque de l'Indochine to the provincial capital, Mengtsz has been dwindling into insignificance and its name is only remembered as one of historical importance.

The climate of Yunnanfu—the provincial capital—is temperate and good, being at an altitude of 6,400 feet. From October to April, there is very little rain and a good deal of wind, but in June, July, August and September which is the rainy season the rainfall is about 49 inches in a year of heavy rain, and as low as 24 inches when the rains are scarce. When the rain is as low as the latter figure, there is a drought and harvests are poor, and when as the first figure there are floods and the harvest is similarly poor. Being at the terminus of the Tien-Yueh Railway, Yunnanfu is now becoming an important centre for the distribution of foreign and native goods imported via Tonkin. The whole town, now a Municipality, has a population of some 250,000, being the most densely-populated in the province. There are four Consulates—the French, the British, the American and the German. Decent hotels and electric lights are available; and there is a network of highways deviating from the town to the neigbouring districts and scenic sports.

Yunnan being one of the provinces outside the area of hostilities, the year under review opened at Yunnanfu, the headquarters of the Mengtaz Customs, with every prospect of a trade boom. Although coastwise movements of native products were not exempt from the adverse conditions and disruption of transport facilities existing in other parts of China, the transfer of governmental and financial organisations to Yunnan, the removal of the national capital to Chungking—which is dependent upon Yunnanfu as main entrepôt for the import of supplies by the Yunnan-Annam Railway, the improvement in highway communications in the south-west accelerated by military exigency, and the diversion to the Yunnan route of exports abroad customarily making use of the Yangtze River were all factors contributing to the expansion of foreign trade.

The value statistics of the trade of the port are illustrative of the situation, direct foreign imports being valued at $11.5 million as compared with $9.6 million during 1937; coastwise importations of Chinese merchandise at $19.8 million as against $20.8 million; direct exportations coastwise of Chinese produce at $1.1 million as compared with $1.9 million. The increase in the foreign import trade was mainly accounted for by increased importations of machinery and industrial equipment, while a brisk demand for moter vehicles, gasoline and lubricating oil followed the rapid development of highway communications. Aniline dyes increased; artificial indigo, however, suffered a set-back, with kerosene oil declining in quantity from 3,313,637 to 2,261,639 litres. As a result of the abnormal rise in foreign exchange, the demand for cigarettes from Shanghai decreased, the total import for the year being 4,536 quintals as against 4,602 quintals in 1937. Imports of native cotton yarn similarly decreased from 106,496 to 104,324 quintals. Due to the dullness of the market and competition of local products, the import of native cotton piece-goods declined in value from $4.4 million to $3.3 million. The Yunnan Spinning and Weaving Factory, opened in August 1937, continued in operation throughout the year.

The expansion in foreign export trade continued in an even more marked degree. The export of wolfram ore (tungstan), a product abundant in the area west of Hwangmaoshan tin fields near Kokiu, advanced from 6,787 to 10,073 quintals; antimony regulus rose to 3,472 quintals, more 10 times the negligible quantity exported abroad in the preceding year. Of bristles, upward of 4,600 quintals were sent abroad, mostly to the United States of America, whereas during 1937 1,208 quintals passed though the Customs. Of this total export some 65 per cent may be attributed to the diversion of Szechwan bristles from the customary Yangtze route. Similarly, in the case of wood oil, arrivals from Szechwan and Kweichow were largely instrumental in swelling the quantity exported from 2,980 to 18,942 quintals. The meteoric rise in wood oil exports was not, however, solely attributable to disruption of Yangtze communication, additional planting of wood oil trees in Yunnan province itself having materially increased provincial output. The export of medicinal substances increased by nearly 40 per cent. In respect of cow hides, however, which depend mainly on the Japanese market, the war entailed much a heavy accumulation at Hongkong that a decrease of close on 60 per cent was recorded in total exports. Tin slabs exported abroad, the value of which constituted more than 70 per cent of the total value of exports from the Mengtsz Customs district, amounted to 92,604 quintals as compared with 94,662 quintals during 1937; the decline in quantity, barely 2.17 per cent, was in itself negligible but for the important bearing of this article on the export trade of the port.

The Yunnan Tin Trading Company and its recent offshoot, the Yunnan Tin Corporation, possess the only modern plant which can turn out standardised products of over 99 per cent fineness. At present, however, they are handing only about one-fourth of the Kokiu tin, while the major portion of the tin industry still remained in the hands of the native smelters. The year was favoured with adequate rainfall in the mining areas, which facilitated the washing of tin ores, and, as far as could be ascertained, there was no reduction in output, though certain doubts were felt as to the possible furture effects of monpoly measures and exchange control. The London quotation, which had assumed a downward trend since November of the preceding year, continued to decline until the low ebb of £150 per ton was reached in June, and although a recovery was witnessed from September. the quotation, even at its highest, was some £30 below the average value of £242 for the year 1937.

While the advance in exports abroad was particularly gratifying, there was a considerable and not surprising slump in exports coastwise—tin slabs declining by over 60 per cent and leather by 28 per cent, while shipments of sheep's wool and zinc slabs, large quantities of which used to be sent to Shanghai, were conspicuous by their absence. The rice harvest in Yunnan province was exceptionally good, no foreign rice being imported, while the crop of beans, potatoes and maize was equally good.

In common with other ports the year was marked by heavy fluctuations in the local exchange for Hongkong dollars and Indo-China piastres—the two currencies most commonly used for foreign transactions in the district. For the first five months of the year the quotation on Hongkong remained fairly stable at an average rate of St. $115.50 = Hongkong $100. After June the rate went upward, with slight variations, until the end of the year, which closed with a quotation of St. $214.40 || Hongkong $100. The Indo-China piastre followed the trend of the Hongkong dollar, reaching the highest peak of St. $226.10 in September as compared with an exchange of St. $118 = Indo-China $100 at the beginning of the year. Such unfavourable rates of exchange reacted adversly upon the foreign import trade, while high remittance charges on transfers of standard dollars to occupied areas had likewise a retarding effect on domestic trade. At the beginning of the year the exchange rate between Yunnan paper dollars and standard dollars was Y. P. $930 = St. $100. The quotation at the end of February was 990, remaining after the 24th, June until the close of the year at the official rate of Y. P. $1,000 = St. $100. Generally speaking, at no time in its history have the finances of the province been in a more satisfactory state, and with the establishment of branches of the four national banks and the infusion of large numbers of legal tender notes, it is expected that legal tender notes will soon circulate throughout the province, replacing the Yunnan paper notes of the Futien Bank which have so long enjoyed predominance.

Projected railways include the Kunming-Hsufu line which, it is intended ultimately, shall be extended to Neikiang in Szechwan, there to connect with the proposed Chungking-Chengtu line—and the Yunnan-Burma Railway, 773 kilometres in length, with its terminus at Kunnung on the Salween River. Work on the Yunnan-Burma highway, running from Yunnanfu to Juili on the Burma border, was completed by the end of September. The Eurasia Aviation Corporation continued to give satisfactory service, connecting with Air France at Hanoi for Hongkong or France.

YUNNANFU WIRELESS STATION—

HOKOW

Hokow was opened to foreign trade by the Supplementary Convention between China and France of 20th June, 1895. By the terms of the agreement France was to establish a Vice-Consulate and China a Customs House at Hokow, these stipulations being carried out in August, 1896, and July, 1897, respectively. The Vice-Consulate is subordinate to the Mengtsz Consulate and the Hokow Customs are under the control of the Mengtsz Commissioner, and the value of the trade is not separately stated in the Mengtsz Customs returns.

Hokow is picturesquely situated on the left bank of the Red River at its confluence with the Nanhsi River—commonly called the Namti—and lies immediately opposite Laokay, an important garrison town in Tonkin. The native town has a population of about 4,000, mostly living in bamboo houses and thatched huts; some good semi-foreign style buildings have, however, been built during the last few years. An iron railway bridge across the Nanhsi River was completed in 1902, and connects Hokow and Laokay. Hokow is about 420 li by land from Mengtsz, which can be reached after a train journey of about 8½ hours through magnificent country.

The climate is very unhealthy and new residents soon feel its undermining effects. In summer, when it does not rain it is hot and trying, whereas rain is accompanied by a damp, uncomfortable atmosphere which becomes even more disagreeable as soon as the sun reappears. The main climatic feature, by no means a pleasant one, is a thin, fever-carrying drizzle, which falls in winter and spring. The thick, tropical vegetation is kept moist, and a light and extremely dangerous mist overhangs everything. Malaria is rampant and claims numerous victims amongst the natives. Foreigners manage to recover by taking large quantities of quinine. During the summer, foreigners go to Chapa, a summer resort in Tonkin (Altitude: about 1,700 metres; distance from Laokay: 37 kilometres). Since the bridge over the Red River has been finished, a regular motor service is working between Chapa and Laoaky; one company (Société Transport Automobiles Indochinois, Chapa) maintains this service.

越 騰 Teng-yueh

The trade mart Tengyueh—situated near the southwestern frontier of Yunnan, in Lat. 24 deg. 45 min. N., and Long. 98 deg. 30 min. E.—was opened to foreign trade under the Burma Agreement of 1897 modifying the Convention of 1894 relative to Burma and Thibet, and the Custom House was opened on the 8th, May, 1902. Tengyueh is a walled town situated in a fertile valley at an altitude of 5,356 feet with mountains fifteen miles to the north of the town reaching a height of 12,000 feet. The valley is watered by the Tiehshui river, a small tributary of the Taiping, which itself flows into the Irrawaddy a few miles above Bhamo, a town which has been the principal emporium of Chinese goods in Upper Burma for many years. From Bhamo there is a good motor road for the first 17 miles and, in the dry season, motor-cars can go as far as the 30th Mile, but caravans usually do the last 120 miles of the journey to Tengyueh in six easy stages. On the Burma side of the frontier are two dâk bungalows, but once the Sino-Burmese frontier is crossed, at Milestone 56 at the Kulika Bridge, inns, unfortunately none too clean, have to be relied upon—though camping grounds can be found at most stages. The main route now runs through Manhsien and Hsiao-hsinkai. There is a telegraph office at the latter place, and although the official in charge cannot read English he can despatch telegrams. The old route via Manwyne is now seldom used. Here it was that A. R. Margary, of H. B. M. Consular Service in China, was murdered. His memorial stands in the Bund Garden in Shanghai. Pack animals and porters at present constitute the sole means of transport, but in normal times freights are fairly cheap between November 1 and March 31, when travelling is delightful, and expensive during the monsoon season, when some 70 inches of rain fall and travelling is inadvisible on account of climatic conditions. Mails always travel by train from Rangoon to Myitkyina and from thence they go through Sadon and Niu-chuanho to Tengyueh. The total time taken, from Myitkyina to Tengyueh, is about 7 days. It is easy to travel over this route, but camping gear is essential owing to the lack of inns. Namkhan, a town some ten days south of Tengyueh, is now joined to Lashio (a rail-head in Burma) and Bhamo by motor road. The road between Tengyueh and Yunnanfu has been repaired and while caravans take 24 days, travellers can reach Yunnanfu in 17 days, as motor transport is available on the Hsiakuan-Yunnanfu (eastern) section of the road. The mail couriers take only twelve days. In 1938 the construction of the Yunnan-Burma Highway (motor road), linking Hsiakuan, Yungchang, Lungling, Mangshih and Chefang on the Chinese side with Namkham and Lashio on the Burmese side, was accelerated and completed, and motor traffic between and Lashio and Lungling started in the spring, while through traffic between Yunnanfu and Lashio commenced in the winter of the year. Consolidation of the Highway is however necessary before it can remain useful during the rainy season. When the whole road is opened to commercial traffic, travellers will be able to cover the journey between Tengyueh and Yunnanfu in 8 or 9 days. Owing to the high cost and the difficult country there is little likelihood of a railway being built between the two towns, though it would be a comparatively easy matter to build either a road or a railway between Tengyueh and Bhamo.

The climate of Tengyueh is for the most part excellent. The temperature hardly ever rises above 80° or falls below freezing point. The climate in the valleys to the south of the town, however, is malarial.

Travellers without adequate money are not permitted to enter Burma and they would do well not to make the journey from Yunnanfu.

Letters for Tengyueh, if sent from places south and west of Burma, should be marked via Rangoon and Myitkyina, Burma (foreign postage); otherwise, they should be sent via Yunnanfu.

Telegrams should be sent via Burma from places south and west of Tengyueh, but by Chinese radio it from the east.

Parcels from places outside Burma can be sent only as far as Bhamo, from which town they can be sent on to Tengyueh by caravan by an agent (e.g. Messrs. Litung, Bhamo), or they could be sent via Yunnanfu, but by that route they take several months. A parcel post between Burma and Yunnan Provice has been introduced on trial.

Trade in 1938

From the point of view of foreign trade the year at Tengyueh was an unusually satisfactory one, the value of the import trade being $2 million as compared with $1. 1 million during 1937, and of the export trade $3. 8 million as against $3. 6 million. Owing to the reduction of supplies of native cotton yarn from Shanghai consequent on the Sino-Japanese hostilities, the markets in Western Yunnan continued to rely, as in 1937, on Tengyueh for large supplies of Burmese cotton yarn and raw cotton; the importation of these two commodities, the sole staples of the port, was therefore heavy throughout the year except during the rainy season from July to October. Total quantities imported during the year were 9,436 quintals of yarn and 6,236 quintals of cotton, an increase of about 105 per cent and 28 per cent respectively over the figures for the preceding year. Importations of cotton piece-goods from Burma also registered a fair increase for the same reason. Business was, however, handicapped by the soaring exchange of the rupee and the steady fall of the local currency, and the improvement in importations of cotton yarn, etc., was not reflected in importations of other commodities. The number of mule-loads entering Tengyueh from Burma during the year was 21,191 as against 14,973 for 1937 and 10,356 for 1936. As regards exports, the export of Szechwan raw silk again expanded, amounting to 4,526 quintals valued at $3.2 million as against 3,799 quintals valued at $3 million. This expansion was partly due to the diversion of traffic from the Yangtze River route and partly to the assistance lent by the drop on the open market of the Chinese dollar in terms of foreign exchange. So long as Burma does not impose an import duty on silk entering Burma across the land frontier, the export of Szechw an silk through Tengyueh may be expected to increase. The export of native sundries, mostly local products, also tended to increase.

The development of communications in Western Yunnan received a new impetus as the result of the Sino-Japanese hostilities. The construction of the Yunnan-Burma highway was speeded up and the road completed in November. The surveying also of the projected 700-kilometre railway across South-western Yunnan to connect with Burma was started in the autumn. For the construction of this railway and the purchase of motor-trucks for the highway the Chinese Government completed arrangements for credits in England and America. Growing trade between Burma and China was also envisaged in the impending opening of an agency of Bank of China in Rangoon.

SZEMAO

茅思 Sz-máu

Szemao, opened to the Tonkin frontier trade by the Gérard Convention of 1895 and to British trade by the Burmah Convention of 1896, is situated in the south-western part of the Province of Yunnan in latitude 22 deg. 47 min. 29 sec. N. and longitude 100 deg. 46 min. E. It is a prefectual walled city built on gently rising ground overlooking a well-cultivated plain. The elevation is 4,700 feet above the sea-level, and the population is estimated to be about 20,000. The climate is moderate, the temperature rarely exceeding 80 degrees (Fahr.) during the summer, and seldom falling below 40 degrees in the winter months. The place is distant from both Yunnan-fu (the capital of the province) and Mengtsz 18 days, from the French Laos frontier 6 days, and from British territory about 12 days. It was opened in the early part of 1897, and so far has not fulfilled the expectation of its potential importance as a trading centre.

Trade in 1938

Szemao suffered another year of trade depression owing principally to monetary reforms involving the withdrawal from circulation of silver and to the Government prohibition on the export of lead bars. Banditry also was rife, interfering with the caravan traffic; the total number of pack-loads passed during the year amounting to 23,823 only as compared with 38,764 pack loads during 1937. The value of direct imports fell from $423,000 to $310,000, and of direct exports from $466,000 to $228,000. The coastwise export of merchandise was at a standstill owing to the hostilities. The enhanced price of kerosene oil caused a decline in imports from 74,726 to 19,769 litres. Imports of foreign cotton yarn increased from 5,802 to 31,073 kilogrammes, the supply of Shanghai cotton yarn being cut off by the hostilities. The import of raw cotton also fell from 4,389 to 4,365 quintals. The total quantity of artificial indigo paste imported was 128 quintals as against 47 quintatls. Under exports abroad, tea fell in quantity from 8,884 to 7,005 quintals, there being a reduced demand for Puerh tea in the Indian market, while the export of camphor dwindled to an insignificant amount. Due to the embargo a nil figure was recorded for the export of lead bars. A timely rainfall resulted in abundant crops of rice and other cereals.

HONG KONG

港 香 Heung-kong

The Island of Hongkong (which gives its name to the British Colony in South China) is situated off the coast of the Kwangtung province, near the mouth of the Canton river. It is distant about 40 miles from Macao and 90 from Canton, and lies between 22 deg. 9 min. and 22 deg. 17 min. N. lat. and 114 deg. 5 min. and 114 deg. 18 min. E. long. The Chinese characters representing the name of the island (Heung Kong) may be read as signifying either Good Harbour or Fragant Streams. By Conventions dated, respectively, 1860 and 1898, further territory was ceded by China, consisting of upwards of 280 square miles on the opposite mainland together with the islands of Lantao, Lamma, Cheungchow and others. The last concession is by way of a lease for ninety-nine years.

History and Government

Before the British ensign was hoisted on Possession Point in the City of Victoria in the year 1840 the island can hardly be said to have had any history, and what little attaches to it is very obscure. Scantily peopled by fishermen and agriculturists, it was never the scene of stirring events, and was little affected by dynastic or political changes. It is alleged, however, that after the fall of the Ming dynasty in 1628, some of the Emperor's followers found shelter in the forests of Hongkong from the fury of the Manchus. The peninsula of British Kowloon has more claim to association with Chinese history. In the year A.D. 1287 it is recorded that the last Emperor of the Sung dynasty, when flying from Kublai Khan, the Mongol conqueror, took refuge in a cave in Kowloon, and an inscription on the rock above is said to record the fact. The inscription consists of the characters Sung Wong Toi, meaning the Sung Emperor's Pavilion. On the cession of the territory to Great Britain the natives petitioned the Hongkong Government that the rock might not be blasted or otherwise injured, on account of the tradition connecting it with the Imperial personage above mentioned. In 1898, during the administration of Major-General Wilsone Black, a resolution was passed by the Legislative Council preserving the land on which the rock stands for the benefit of the public in perpetuity.

Hongkong is a Crown Colony and was ceded to Great Britain by the Chinese Government in 1841. In the troubles which preceded the first war with China the necessity of having some place on the coast whence British trade might be protected and controlled, and where officials and merchants might be free from the insulting and humiliating requirements of the Chinese Authorities, became painfully evident. As early as 1834 Lord Napier, smarting under his insolent treatment by the Viceroy at Canton, urged the Home Government to send a force from India to support the dignity of his commission. "A little armament," he wrote, "should enter the China seas with the first of the south-west monsoon, and on arriving should take possession of the island of Hongkong, in the eastern entrance of the Canton river, which is admirably adapted for every purpose." Two years later Sir George Robinson, endorsing the opinion of Lord Napier that nothing but force could better the British position in China, advised "the occupation of one of the islands in this neighbourhood, so singularly adapted by nature in every respect for commercial purposes." In the early part of 1839 affairs approached a crisis, and on the 22nd, March, Captain Elliot, the Chief Superintendent of Trade, required that all the ships of Her Majesty's subjects at the outer anchorages of Canton should proceed forthwith to Hongkong, and, hoisting their national colours, be prepared to resist every act of aggression on the part of the Chinese Government. When the British community left Canton, Macao afforded them a temporary asylum, but their presence there was made the occasion by the Chinese Government of threatening demonstrations against that settlement. In a despatch dated the 6th, May, 1839, Captain Elliot wrote to Lord Palmerston: "The safety of Macao is, in point of fact, an object of secondary moment to the Portuguese Government, but to that of Her Majesty it may be said to be of indispensable necessity, and most particularly at this moment"; and he urged upon his Lordship "the strong necessity of concluding some immediate arrangement with the Government of His Most Faithful Majesty, either for the cession of the Portuguese rights at Macao, or for the effectful defence of the place, and its appropriation to British uses by means of a subsidiary Convention." Happily for the permanent interests of British trade in China this suggestion came to nothing, and Great Britain found a much superior lodgment at Hongkong.

On the 20th, January, 1841, H.M.'s Plenipotentiary issued a circular to British subjects announcing the conclusion of preliminary arrangements between the Imperial Commissioner, Ke-shen, and himself. One of the terms was stated in the circular as follows:

1.—"The cession or the island and harbour of Hongkong to the British Crown. All just charges and duties to the Empire upon the commerce carried on there to be paid as if the trade were conducted at Whampoa."

On the 26th, January, the island was accordingly taken formal possession of in the name of H.M. Queen Victoria. The treaty was subsequently repudiated by both parties, and it was not until the conclusion of the Nanking Treaty in 1842 that the Chinese Government formally recognised the cession of the island. In the meantime it was held by the British—who had come to stay—and on the 1st, May, 1841, the Public Notice and Declaration regarding the occupation of Hongkong was promulgated. On the 7th, May of the same year, 1841, the first number of the Hongkong Gazette was published, printed at the American Mission Press, Macao. This first number contained the notification of the appointment (dated 30th, April) of Captain William Caine, of the 26th (Cameronian) Regiment of Infantry, as Chief Magistrate, the warrant being under the hand of Charles Elliot, Esquire, Her Majesty's Plenipotentiary, etc., etc., "charged with the Government of the Island of Hongkong." Captain Elliot's idea was that the island should be held on similar terms to those on which Macao was at that time held by the Portuguese, and the Chief Magistrate, instead of being charged to administer British law, was authorised and required "to exercise authority, according to the laws, customs, and usages of China, as near as may be (every description of torture excepted), for the preservation of the peace and the protection of life and property, over all the native inhabitants in the said island and the harbours thereof"; and over other persons according to British police law. The first land sale took place on the 14th, June, and building thereafter proceeded rapidly, the population of the new town at the end of the year being estimated at 15,000. On the 6th, February, 1842, Hongkong was formally declared a free port by Sir Henry Pottinger, who had succeeded Captain Elliot as Plenipotentiary. Until the signing of the treaty, however, the ultimate fate of the new settlement remained in doubt. Sir Robert Peel, when asked in the House of Commons whether it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government properly to colonize the place or give it up, declined to answer what he deemed an unparliamentary question during a period of open war with the country by whom the cession of the island was both made and repudiated. The Treaty of Nanking, however, settled all doubts. On the 23rd, June, 1843, Ke-ying, the Chinese Imperial Commissioner, arrived in Hongkong for the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty, and the ceremony took place in the Council Room on the 26th of that month, and immediately afterwards the Royal Charter, dated the 5th, April, 1843, erecting the island into a separate Colony, was read, and Sir Henry Pottinger took the oaths of office as Governor. At first progress was rapid. The Queen's Road was laid out for a length of between three and four miles, and buildings rose rapidly. But a check was received owing to the unhealthy conditions which were developed by "the breaking of the 'malarious' soil," and in 1844, soon after the arrival of Sir John Davis, who assumed the government in June, the advisability of abandoning the island altogether as a colony was seriously discussed. Mr. Montgomery Martin, H.M.'s Treasurer, drew up a long report, in which he earnestly recommended the abandonment of a place which, he believed, would never be habitable for Europeans. Sir John Davis, in a despatch dated April, 1845, strongly combatted Mr. Martin's pessimistic conclusions and expressed a firm belief that time alone was required for the development of the colony and for the correction of some of the evils which hindered its early progress. Sir John (who died in November, 1890, in his ninety-sixth year) lived to see his predictions most amply verified, and in after years must have reflected with satisfaction on the fact that his views had prevailed in Downing Street. On the 26th, May, 1846, the Hongkong Club house, situated in Queen's Road Central., at its junction with Wyndham Street, was opened with a ball, and was occupied by the Club for over fifty years, being vacated in July, 1897, when the Club moved into new and more commodious premises on the New Praya. Sir John Davis resigned in January, 1848, and left the colony on the 30th, March of that year. On the 13th, April, 1854, Sir John Bowring took the oaths as Governor, and held the reins until May, 1859. Sir John Bowring was the last Governor who united that office with that of Minister Plenipotentiary and Superintendent of British Trade in China. During his administration various public works were carried out, and the Bowrington Canal was constructed. On the 1st, October, 1857, The Hong Kong Daily Press made its appearance. In September, 1859, Sir Hercules Robinson arrived and assumed the administration. In 1860 the peninsula of Kowloon was placed under British control, and soon afterwards became a great camp, the English and French troops of the Allied Expeditionary Force being for some time quartered there In November, 1867, a great fire occurred, which swept the whole district between the Queen's Road and the Praya, from the Cross Road to the Harbour Master's Office. During Sir Richard MacDonnell's vigorous administration the revenue of the Colony, which had fallen much below the expenditure, was augmented by the imposition of the stamp duties and other measures. One of His Excellency's last official acts was to preside at the opening, in February, 1872, of the Tung Wah (Chinese) Hospital. By March, 1882 the trade of the Colony increased greatly and Governor Hennessy accumulated a large surplus, but public works made little progress, the Breakwater at Causeway Bay being the principal work completed during his administration, while the Observatory was projected. On Christmas Day, 1878, a fire broke out in the Central District of Victoria which destroyed 368 houses and entailed enormous loss on the community. March, 1883 was the signal for great activity in the prosecution of public works, amongst others being the Tytam Waterworks, the Victoria (now Queen's) College, the Lunatic Asylum, the Observatory, and the enlargement of the Government Civil Hospital; also the residents were given the privilege of nominating two of the unofficial members of the Legislative Council. A petition addressed to the House of Commons in favour of Constitutional Reform resulted, in 1894, in the addition of a second Chinese member to the Legislative Council, in return for an increase in the Official element by the inclusion of the General Officer Commanding the Troops, and the introduction of two nominated Unofficial members into the Executive Council. The year 1894 will be memorable, also in the annals of the Colony as the most disastrous year of the plague. The disease reached its climax on the 7th of June, when 107 deaths and 69 new cases were reported. After that date its virulence decreased, and on the 3rd, September the proclamation declaring the Colony infected was withdrawn. The total number of deaths recorded was 2,547. In the meantime the trade of the Colony had suffered severely. Large numbers of the natives fled, it being estimated that the population was reduced at one time by no less than 80,000, and the usually busy Queen's Road appeared almost deserted. As the disease waned the population returned, business was gradually resumed, and with the withdrawal of the quarantine imposed at the other ports, vessels resumed their regular calls at Hongkong. In 1896 the disease again made its appearance, but was much less virulent than in 1894, and in 1898 there was another visitation. In every succeeding year there was a recurrence of the epidemic notwithstanding the expenditure of millions of dollars and the prosecution of a vigorous policy of sanitation carried out on the advice of special commissioners (Mr. Osbert Chadwick and Dr. Simpson) sent out from England to advise on the best means of improving the health of the city of Victoria. An outbreak of cerebrospinal meningitis occurred early in 1918, 1,232 cases being recorded. In consequence of the popular alarm that was felt, the Rockefeller Institute of New York was asked to send an expert in the disease to advise on the best methods of prevention and treatment. Dr. Olitsky, Lieutenant, U.S.A. Army, arrived in the Colony on the 5th, May and he strongly condemned the congestion prevailing in the western part of Victoria. On his advice the systematic manufacture of anti-meningococcic serum was undertaken.

In 1900, in the despatch of the Chinese Expeditionary Force from India, Hongkong became the base from which troops and supplies were sent forward. Prior to the arrival of these troops, a force drawn from the Garrison was despatched to the front, and the Hongkong Regiment were retained for service in North China during the whole of the campaign, only returning to the Colony in December, 1901. In October, 1902, the Hongkong Regiment were paraded for the last time in the Colony, handed over their colours to be placed in St. John's Cathedral, and embarked a few days later for India, where they were disbanded. Owing to a very short rainfall in 1901, and a prolonged drought lasting until May, 1902, a serious water famine occurred, reducing the inhabitants to great straits, and forcibly bringing home to the Administration the urgent need for increased water storage. Large reservoirs have since been built on the island and a big scheme for securing water from the Shing Mun valley on the mainland first mooted in 1922 has now been completed.

Sir Matthew Nathan, K.C.M.G., reached the Colony on the 29th, July, 1904, and his régime was distinguished by the commencement of the long-projected railway from Kowloon to Canton. The British section, from Kowloon to the frontier, a distance of 22 miles, was opened on the 1st, October, 1910, by Sir Henry May, who was then administering the Government in the absence on leave of H.E. Sir Frederick Lugard. The Chinese section, 89 miles in length, was completed at the end of September, 1911, when through railway communication was established. The year 1906 will be remembered in the history of the Colony by the typhoon which struck the Colony on the 18th, September with terrific force and with such disastrous results as to give it rank as the worst typhoon that the Colony had ever experienced. The Observatory was able to give but very short notice of its approach. The typhoon lasted only two hours, and it was roughly estimated that in that short space of time 10,000 persons lost their lives in the vicinity of the Colony, while the damage done to shipping and property ashore ran into many millions of dollars. A list, admittedly incomplete, compiled by the Harbour Authorities, showed sunk or damaged 67 large vessels, 652 junks, 54 lighters, and 70 launches. No account is taken in this list of the hundreds of sampans which were sunk or battered to pieces against the sea walls. The Colony was visited by another typhoon of greater force on the night of July 27-28, 1908, but the Observatory gave timely warning of the approach, and shipping consequently did not suffer so badly as in the 1906 typhoon, but much more extensive damage was done to property ashore. The most serious shipping casualty was the foundering of the Yingking with a loss of some 424 lives. Arising out of these catastrophes there was an agitation for the provision of more adequate protection for small shipping than was afforded by the typhoon shelter at Causeway Bay, and, as a consequence, a new refuge was constructed at Mongkoktsui. This was completed in 1915. The worst typhoon since 1908 was that which struck the Colony on the 18th, August, 1923, when the wind attained the record velocity of 130 miles an hour. Considerable damage was done to shipping and to property on shore, especially at the Peak, but the loss of life was, fortunately, small. But for the fact that the typhoon was travelling very rapidly the results must have been much more serious. In the Spring of 1918 some 600 lives were lost in a fire which occurred during the race meeting at Happy Valley. The matsheds accommodating thousands of Chinese spectators collapsed and flames spread so rapidly that the people were burned to death before the eyes of their friends, who were powerless to render assistance.

Brigadier-General Sir Frederick Lugard, K.C.M.G., arrived on the 28th, July, 1907, and his chief monument in the Colony may be said to be the University. Mr. H. N. Mody generously offered to provide buildings at an estimated cost of $280,000, and Sir Frederick Lugard worked indefatigably to secure an endowment fund of a million and a quarter dollars. When this fund was in sight, in 1909, building operations were commenced on a site in Bonham Road. Sir Frederick Lugard had the felicity of seeing the building opened in March, 1912, just before he left on promotion to become Governor of Nigeria. Mr. Mody received a knighthood in recognition of his benefactions to the Colony.

The third decade of the century was marked by immense development of the Colony and also by many striking public events. As elsewhere, there has been in Hong Kong a surprising increase in the facilities for public entertainment and recreation. In 1921 no fewer than 500 motor vehicles were licensed in 1931 the number was well over 3,000. Rickshas and chairs are accordingly reduced in number. Moving picture theatres of modern type have also increased, and considerably extended hotel accommodation (including provision for music and dancing) attracts many more people into the centres of population than was formerly the case. Wireless developments have advanced the science of meteorology and increased the valuable services of the Hong Kong Observatory to navigation; the public also has now the advantage of radio broadcasting. In the period under review the Chinese first developed a keen interest in football and bathing. Chinese football teams now frequently defeat such practised exponents of the game as members of the garrison. New motor roads have developed extensive building areas on which innumerable single residences and streets of houses have been built. A motor road to the Peak was the largest of these enterprises subsequent to the road round the Island and the New Territories. Building development has occurred especially in Kowloon where town-planning schemes have attracted a population shown by the 1931 census to be more than double that of 1921. Numerous services of motor buses serve the transport needs of the population, leading to the construction of the first reinforced concrete roads in the Colony. Development has been accelerated by pressure of arrivals from China where disturbed conditions have prevailed practically throughout the decade. The Chinese realised that the Colony afforded a safe refuge for person and property: they came in such numbers as to cause a considerable advance in the cost of living and a land boom from 1921 to 1924 (3½ million dollars worth of land was sold by the Government on long lease in 1923 alone, and 9½ millions in four years). In times of drought there have been acute water shortages, notably in 1929 when water had to be imported by steamer and supplied to the public from tanks on the water-front. Waterworks extension, referred to elsewhere, should make shortages a thing of the past. On the island the most notable achievement was the completion of the Praya East Reclamation Scheme, which doubles the area of Wanchai, while in Kowloon the construction of what will be a model city of vast dimensions progressed year by year as hill after hill was cut down and used to level up insanitary depressions and extend the deep sea frontage. Private enterprise has also added to the reclaimed area at North Point, Hong Kong. Another private reclamation was resumed by the Government in 1927 for an Air Port (Kai Tak Aerodrome).

In 1921 the Hong Kong War Memorial Cross was unveiled, and Captain (afterwards Admiral) E.R.G.R. Evans distinguished himself in rescue work when the s.s. Hong Moh went ashore on the Lammocks. On the 6th & 7th, April, 1922, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales visited the Colony on his way to Japan. An endowment of $500,000 for Chairs of medicine and surgery at the University by the Rockefeller Foundation was announced at this time. In 1923 the Industrial Employment of Children Ordinance came into force, and a Mui Tsai Abolition Bill was passed by the Legislative Council. The Cenotaph was unveiled on May 24. A very severe typhoon in August sank the Loong Sang and H.M.S. Submarine L19 in the harbour, besides doing much other damage. In 1924 the Tytam Gap-Shekko Road was completed. In 1925 the Hong Kong Government contributed £250,000 towards the cost of the Singapore Base. In 1926 a great part of the Hong Kong Hotel was destroyed by fire. The Pratas Wireless Station, striven for during many years, was opened. The new Government Building on the water front in Hong Kong, King's College and a hospital in Kowloon, were completed. In 1929 the King Edward Hotel was burnt out, with loss of life. This was a year of grave water shortage and special measures had to be adopted to cope with it. H.R.H. the Duke of Gloucester visited the Colony in April. The 90 acres of Praya East Reclamation were completed, with several large and imposing buildings including the China Fleet Club, the Seamen's Institute and the Luk Kok Hotel, one of the best and largest Chinese hotels in the Colony. A large number of houses for the middle classes were also built on this site. In this year it was proposed by the Chinese Maritime Customs that, in order to stop the increasing smuggling from Hong Kong into China which followed upon Tariff Autonomy and higher import tariffs, the Chinese Customs be allowed to function in Hong Kong. An agreement to this effect was discussed but came to nothing because China could not agree to grant Hong Kong a quid pro quo in respect of inland water navigation privileges.

The following is a list of those who have administered the Government from the date on which the Island was erected into a Colony:

1843 Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., G.C.B.
1844 Sir John Francis Davis, Bart., K.C.B.
1848 Samuel George Bonham, C.B.
1851 Major-General W. Jervois (Lt.-Governor)
1851 Sir S. George Bonham, Bart., K.C.B.
1852 John Bowring, LL.D. (Acting)
1853 Sir S. George Bonham, Bart., K.C.B.
1854 Sir John Bowring, Kt., LL.D.
1854 Lieut.-Colonel Wm. Caine (Lt.-Governor)
1855 Sir John Bowring, Kt., LL.D.
1859 Colonel Caine (Lieut.-Governor)
1859 Sir Hercules G. R. Robinson, Kt.
1862 William Thomas Mercer (Acting)
1864 Sir Hercules G. R. Robinson, Kt.
1865 William Thomas Mercer (Acting)
1866 Sir Richard Graves MacDonnell, Kt., C.B.
1870 Maj.-Gen. H. W. Whitfield (Lt.-Governor)
1871 Sir Richard G. MacDonnell, K.C.M.G., C.B.
1872 Sir Arthur E. Kennedy, K.C.M.G., C.B.
1875 John Gardiner Austin (Admr.)
1876 Sir Arthur E. Kennedy, K.C.M.G., C.B.
1877 Sir John Pope Hennessy, K.C.M.G.
1882 Wm. Hy. Marsh, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1883 Sir George Ferguson Bowen, G.C.M.G.
1885 Wm. Hy. Marsh, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1887 Maj.-Gen. W. G. Cameron, C.B. (Admr.)
1887 Sir George William Des Vœux, K.C.M.G.
1890 Francis Fleming, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1890 Sir George William Des Vœux, K.C.M.G.
1891 Maj.-Gen. G. Digby Barker, C.B. (Admr.)
1891 Sir William Robinson, G.C.M.G.
1898 Maj.-Gen. Wilsone Black, C.B. (Admr.)
1898 Sir Henry Arthur Blake, G.C.M.G.
1902 Maj.-Gen. Sir W. Gascoigne, K.C.M.G. (Admr.)
1902 Sir Henry Arthur Blake, G.C.M.G.
1903 Francis H. May, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1904 Sir Matthew Nathan, K.C.M.G.
1906-7 Hon. Mr. F. H. May, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1907 Sir Matthew Nathan, K.C.M.G.
1907 Brigadier-Gen. Sir F. D. Lugard, K.C.M.G.
1907 Hon. Mr. F. H. May C.M.G. (Admr.)
1909-10 Sir H. May, K.C.M.G. (Admr.)
1910-12 Brig.-Gen. Sir F. D. Lugard, K.C.M.G.
1912 Hon. Mr. Claud Severn (Admr.)
1912 Sir Henry May, K.C.M.G.
1913 Hon. Mr. Claud Severn (Admr.)
1914-19 Sir Henry May, K.C.M.G.
1917-18 Hon. Mr. Claud Severn, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1918-19 Hon. Mr. Claud Severn, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1919-25 Sir Reginald Edward Stubbs, K.C.M.G.
1922 Hon. Mr. Claud Severn, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1925 Sir Cecil Clementi, K.C.M.G.
1927 Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn, C.M.G. (Admr.)
1928-30 Sir Cecil Clementi, K.C.M.G.
1930-34 Sir William Peel, K.B.E., K.C.M.G.
1935-37 Sir Andrew Caldecott, K.C.M.G., C.B.E.
1937-40 Sir Geoffry Alexander Stafford Northcote, K.C.M.G.

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of six officials and three unofficials. The Legislative Council is presided over by the Governor, and is composed of the Officer Commanding the Troops, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Treasurer, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, the Director of Public Works, the Inspector-General of Police, the Director of Medical and Sanitary Services the Harbour Master, and eight unofficial members, one of whom is elected by the Chamber of Commerce and another by the Justices of the Peace. The remaining six, three of whom are of Chinese race but British nationality, are appointed by the Government. Demands for a greater measure of popular representation were made by the British residents to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in 1916 and again in 1919, both times unsuccessfully. In 1922 a numerously-signed petition on the subject was presented to the House of Commons.

Description

The island of Hongkong is about 11 miles long and from 2 to 5 miles broad; its circumference is about 27 miles. It consists of a broken ridge of lofty hills, with few valleys of any extent and scarcely any ground available for cultivation. The only valleys worthy of the name are those of Wong Nei Cheong, Tytam, and Little Hongkong, all of which are remarkably beautiful and well wooded, being in fact the only parts where any considerable arborescent vegetation was formerly to be found. The island is well watered by numerous streams, many of which are perennial. The city of Victoria and suburbs are supplied with water from the Pokfolum, Tytam, and Wong-Nei-Cheong reservoirs. The first-named, constructed in 1866-69, has a storage capacity of sixty-six million gallons, while the Tytam reservoir, constructed in 1883-1888, and extended in 1896, has an area of about 31 acres and a storage capacity of about three hundred and 84 million gallons. From the Tytam reservoir the water is conveyed into town by means of a tunnel a mile and one-third in length and a conduit along the hillside some 400 feet above the sea level and nearly four miles in length, on which a fine road—called the Bowen Road — has been formed, which commands the most charming views of the city and the eastern district, and is a favourite resort of pedestrians. In many parts the conduit is carried over the ravines and rocks by ornamental stone bridges, one of which, above Wanchai, has twenty-three arches. The Wong-Nei-Cheong reservoir, completed in 1899, has a capacity of 30 million gallons. A bye-wash reservoir of about 22 million gallons capacity, situated immediately below the overflow of the Tytam reservoir, was completed in 1903, and a dam at Tytam Tuk to impound 194 million gallons was completed in 1909. A further extension of these waterworks was completed in 1917 at a cost of about $2,400,000, making provision for impounding an additional 1,419 million gallons of water. This was expected to meet the needs of the Colony for another fifteen years but experience in dry seasons shewed that it was barely adequate and a project was started to dam the Shing Mun river and to tap practically the whole of the Eastern and Southern slopes of Tai Mo Shan. This scheme was sanctioned by the Secretary of State in June, 1924, and the work slowly progressed. The newly developed catchment area includes 8,500 acres, or 13 square miles. It was proposed originally to build nine storage reservoirs, varying in size from 55 million to 1,700 million gallons and having an aggregate capacity of 4,500 million gallons, of which 2,400 million gallons, or rather more than the whole storage capacity in the Island of Hongkong, would be stored in gravity, and the remainder would be in pumping reservoir. The water will be conveyed through the Kowloon hills by open conduit and two tunnels, the latter being 2,400 and 4,350 feet in length, respectively. It was intended that the water should be brought down from the Filtered Water Reservoir by 24-inch trunk mains, which were to be laid in the bed of the harbour from Kowloon Point and discharge into a Service Reservoir, probably under the Public Gardens. The scheme was somewhat modified but no very great difficulties were experienced until the question arose as to the best method of conveying the water across the harbour. Early in 1929 Mr. Henderson, the assistant director of Public Works, went Home to consult engineering authorities as to the best method of doing this, with a result that his own scheme was approved and he hurried back to put the work in hand. The water is conveyed across to Hongkong in a pipe line laid on the bed of the harbour. The total length of this pipe is nearly 1½ miles. The pipe, of Lap welded steel, has an internal diameter of 12.265 and is 7/16″ thick. It is protected by a double hessian wrapping impregnated with bitumastic solution. It has a discharging capacity of 3¼ million gallons per day at 280 feet above sea level. The pipe line was formally opened on the 31st, March, 1930.

In 1929 the construction of the Kowloon Byewash Reservoir, immediately below the Kowloon Reservoir, was begun and will be finished in 1931, thereby adding a further 180 million gallons to Kowloon's storage. This dam will have a maximum height of over 100 feet.

In 1926 the Aberdeen Valley was investigated as a further source of supply for the Island of Hongkong and in 1929 work was commenced. The Scheme included the construction of a dam 110 ft. in height impounding about 180 million gallons. The existing Aberdeen Paper works dam having a capacity of about 90 million gallons was purchased by Government and was incorporated in the Scheme.

The Shing Mun Valley dam, one of the largest in the Far East, was completed and is now used as a storage for the enormous quantity of water which annually runs to waste from that Valley.

The approaches to the port are well lighted. The western entrance has the following lights:

Gap Rock Light—Fl. every 3 seconds, visible 18 miles. Connected to the port by Wireless Telegraphy.

Green Island Light—Fl. W. R. every 8 seconds, visible 16 miles. Connected to the Port by Telephone.

Central Fairway—North Buoy: Fl. every 3 seconds. South Buoy: Fl. every 3 seconds.

At the eastern entrance there are:

Waglan Island Light—Group: Fl. every 10 seconds, visible 21 miles. Connected to the Port by Telephone, Telegraph and Wireless Telegraphy Diaphone Fog Signal.

Cape D'Aguilar—Wireless Telegraphy Station.

Tathong Point Light—Fl. W. R. every 5 seconds, visible 2 miles. Fog Bells every 30 seconds.

Cape Collinson Light—Double Fl. W. R. every 10 seconds, visible 16 miles.

Lyeemoon Pass Lights—North Side: Fl. R. every 5 seconds. South Side: Fl. R. every 5 seconds.

Channel Rocks—Fl. every 5 seconds.

Cust Rock Beacon—Fl. every 3 seconds.

Chin Sal Chiu Point Light—Fl. W. R. every 3 seconds, visible 10 miles.

The harbour of Hongkong is one of the finest and most beautiful in the world, having an area of ten square miles, and, with its diversified scenery and varied shipping, presents an animated and imposing spectacle. It consists of the sheet of water between the island and the mainland, and is enclosed on all sides by lofty hills, formerly destitute of foliage, but now becoming clothed, especially on the island, with young forests, the result of the afforestation scheme of the Government. The city of Victoria is magnificently situated, the houses, many of them large and handsome, rising, tier upon tier, from the water's edge to a height of over five hundred feet on the face of the Peak, while many buildings are visible on the very summit of the hills. Seen from the water at night, when lights twinkle among the trees and houses, the city, spreading along the shore for five miles, affords a sight not readily to be forgotten.

Nor on landing are the favourable impressions of the stranger dissipated or lessened. The city is well built, the roads and streets are for the most part admirably made and kept, and a few of the thoroughfares delightfully shaded with well-grown trees. The European business quarter occupies the middle of the city, from Pottinger Street to the Naval Yard. Almost all the lower levels, especially the Western District, are covered by a mass of Chinese shops and tenements, in recent years a large number of the older of these have been pulled down and replaced by more modern buildings of ferro-concrete, many of them well designed and fine looking edifices. The Botanic Gardens are situated just above Government House, and are tastefully laid out in terraces, slopes, and walks, with parterres of flowers. A handsome fountain adorns the second terrace. There is a bandstand, presented by the Parsee community and open air concerts are given in the gardens during the summer months which prove a great attraction. Aviaries, orchid houses, and ferneries are attractive features, and seats are provided in every spot where a view is obtainable or shade afforded by the varied foliage. A fine bronze statue of Sir Arthur Kennedy, Governor of the Colony, 1872-6, erected by public subscription, stands above the second terrace looking down on the fountain. It was unveiled in November, 1887, by Governor Sir William Des Vœux. A pilau erected to the memory of the Chinese who gave their lives in the great war of 1914-1918, was unveiled on the 7th, May, 1928, by Sir Cecil Clementi, K.C.M.G. It stands just above the flight of steps giving entrance to the gardens from Albert Road, and is in every way a fitting memorial. The City Hall, erected in 1866-9 by subscription, contains a theatre, numerous large rooms used for balls and public meetings (in one of which, known as St. George's Hall, is a fine portrait of the late Queen Victoria, presented by the late Sir Thomas Jackson, Bart., in 1900), a Library and a Museum—both of which however, have a neglected appearance. Eastward of the City Hall is a fine open space or lung, in the shape of the Parade Ground, south of the road, and the Cricket Ground on the north. Here a new pavilion was erected in 1923 and extended in 1927. The building of the City Hall has been demolished.

The Post Office, an imposing building in which several other Government departments are accommodated, occupies a site with frontages on the Praya, Pedder Street and Des Vœux Road. The Court of Justice were designed by the late Sir Aston Webb and Mr. E. Ingress Bell, consulting architects to the Government of Great Britain. The foundation stone was laid in 1903 and the building was completed at a cost of $856,310 and opened in January, 1912. Immediately opposite on the seaward side and appropriately occupying what was long known as "the finest site," stands the Colony's War Memorial—a replica of the Cenotaph in Whitehall, London—which was unveiled by H.E. Sir R. E. Stubbs and dedicated to "The Glorious Dead" on Empire Day, 1923. The monuments, which is of granite, stands 35 ft. high. Occupying a site in the centre of Statue Square to the west of the Courts of Justice stands the Jubilee statue of H.M. Queen Victoria, the erection of which was postponed until this site became available; it was unveiled on the 28th, May, 1896. The statue represents Queen Victoria seated on her throne, and is of bronze under a stone canopy. Close by, there was formerly a fine bronze statue of the Duke of Connaught, presented to the Colony by Sir Paul Chater. It was unveiled by Sir William Gascoigne on the 5th, July, 1902. This statue was removed in February, 1907, to a site on the waterfront near Blake Pier, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, who paid a second visit to the Colony, this time as Inspector-General of the Forces, on the 6th, February, 1907, unveiled, in what is now designated the Royal Square, a fine bronze statue of the late King Edward, presented by Sir Paul Chater, C.M.G., and one of H.M. King George, presented by Mr. James Jardine Bell-Irving. A statue of H.M. Queen Alexandra, subscribed for by the Community as a memorial of the Coronation of their Majesties in 1902, and one of H.M. Queen Mary, presented by the late Sir H. N. Mody, were placed in the same Square in 1909. Sir Paul Chater desired to add a statue of the Prince of Wales in commemoration of His Royal Highness's visit in April, 1922, but, at the Prince's request, the money ($50,000) was invested instead for the local branch of the British Legion and the Ex-Active Service

Men's Association. Government House occupies a commanding situation, in picturesque grounds pleasingly laid out, a little above the European business centre. Victoria Gaol is a large structure, with its main entrance from Arbuthnot Road. A branch prison was opened at Lai-chi-kok, Kowloon, in 1920. The Police Barracks and new Central Station adjoin Victoria Gaol, as does the Magistracy, the reconstruction of which was practically completed at the close of 1914. An additional Magistracy was opened at Kowloon in 1924.

The Lunatic Asylum consists of two small buildings, one for Europeans and the other for Chinese, below Bonham Road in the western part of the town. Adjacent is the Government Civil Hospital. The Alice Memorial Hospital is a useful and philanthropic institution; affiliated with it is the Nethersole Hospital on Bonham Road. The Royal Naval Hospital occupies a small eminence near Bowrington, and the Military Hospital, a fine range of buildings, completed in 1907, occupies a commanding site above Bowen Road. The Hongkong University, a large and handsome building erected in a commanding position at the west end of the city, was opened in 1912. Queen's College, a commodious structure, which stands on a site having its chief frontage on Hollywood Road is the home of the chief Government educational institution in the Colony. King's College, a fine building accommodating nearly a thousand students was opened in 1926 in Bonham Road. The Belilios Public School for Girls, in Gough Street, is the chief Government centre of female education. Extensive new buildings for St. Stephen's Girls' College, however, have been erected on a site between Park Road and Lyttleton Road. The foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. The Prince of Wales during his visit to the Colony in April, 1922, and the building was opened by Lady Stubbs in January, 1924. The Tung Wah Hospital, a Chinese institution, which has been of great utility in the Colony, was considerably enlarged in 1903, and new plague wards were added in 1909. A new wing, to provide accommodation for 120 patients, was completed in 1921. A Tung Wah Eastern Hospital was opened in 1929 by Sir Cecil Clementi at the Caroline Hill Road. A well-designed Plague Hospital for Chinese, situated at Kennedy Town, was also built at the expense of the Chinese community. In April, 1930, Mrs. Southorn (wife of the then Acting Governor, the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn) presided at the laying of the foundation stone of the Hongkong War Memorial Hospital on Mount Kellet, which was completed in 1932. There is accomodation for about 80 European patients. An up-to-date X Ray department and two excellent operating theatres are features of the new hospital. The Barracks for the garrison are extensive, and the buildings belonging to the Naval Establishment are spacious if not substantial. The chief cantonments lie on both sides of the Queen's Road, between the Cricket Ground and Arsenal Street, Wanchai. Representations have been made to the Imperial authorities to relinquish this area in order that it may be available for the constantly growing needs of the commercial community. Terms for the surrender of the property have been offered to and accepted by the local Government, and it is understood that the new site for the arsenal will be Stonecutters' Island. The town has spread to the East on the new Praya, and building developments are proceeding so rapidly there that it promises to become the most thriving district in the Eastern part of the city. The original scheme, on which work started in 1923, was to level Morrison Hill and build the new reclamation from it, the site of the former hill to have been used as playing fields. As the work progressed, however, the plan altered somewhat. As the core of Morrison Hill was found to be of hard rock, and sufficient earth had been obtained from it already for the reclamation, the base of the hill was left standing and buildings erected on its slopes. The roads on the reclaimed area are designed on modern lines, the main thoroughfare being 100 feet and others already for the reclamation, the base of the hill was left standing and buildings are already being erected on its slopes. The roads on the reclaimed area are designed on modern lines, the main thoroughfare being 100 feet and others 60 feet in width. Godowns and over a thousand Chinese houses of ferro-concrete have already been built and were scarcely completed before being occupied.

and two sites have been booked for the building of new theatres. Building is likely to continue on the new reclamation for another couple of years. Not the least of the benefits conferred on the Colony by the addition of this new territory, is that it has entailed the filling up of Bowrington creek formerly a most insanitary and unsavoury—if picturesque feature of the east end of the city. There are also extensive Barracks at Kowloon, in which the Indian regiments (and lately a European regiment) are quartered; and a magnificent sanatorium (formerly the Mount Austin Hotel) at the Peak for the European troops. Head-quarter House, the residence of the General in Command of the Troops, occupies a pleasant elevation overlooking the cantonments in Victoria. The Central Market, situated between Queen's Road Central and Des Vœux Road, was opened in 1895, and in 1906 another fine market was opened further west, and is known as the Western Market. The building of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank is large, handsome and massive, and would do credit to any large city. It occupies a fine site next to the City Hall, and has frontages on Queen's Road and Des Vœux Road. The exterior walls and elegant fluted pillars are of dressed granite, and the offices on the Queen's Road frontage are crowned with a large dome. Opposite the Des Vœux Road entrance to the Bank stands a bronze statue of the late Sir Thomas Jackson, Bart., who from 1876 to 1902 was chief manager of the institution. The statue was unveiled by Governor Sir Matthew Nathan on the 24th, February, 1906. At the opposite end of the Bank garden, facing the Praya, a memorial has been erected to the 42 members of the Bank's staff who made the supreme sacrifice in the Great War. It takes the form of a female figure of "Fame," in bronze, 8 feet high, holding in her hand a wreath, while in front is a smaller statue of a soldier with kit and rifle. The Memorial was unveiled by H.E. the Governor (Sir R. E. Stubbs) on the 24th, May, 1923. An extensive reclamation along the city water frontage from West Point to Murray Road, initiated by Sir C. P. Chater, C.M.G., was completed in 1903, the total area reclaimed from the sea being approximately 65 acres. Of this area 33.73 acres constitute building land, the remainder being occupied by roads and open spaces. The total cost, including reconstruction of Government piers, was $3,362,325. The various sections as they were ready were rapidly built upon and some of the finest buildings in the Colony have been erected on the reclaimed land. On the eastern section a handsome building for the Hongkong Club was finished in 1897, and was occupied in July of that year. The Pier at the foot of Pedder Street was opened on the 29th December, 1900, and named Blake Pier in honour of Governor Sir Henry Blake. A hundred yards to the East is Queen's Pier, a handsome structure now used on all official occasions. Further west is the Harbour Master's Office, a commodious building completed in 1906.

The chief religious buildings are:—St. John's Cathedral (Anglican), which was erected in the year 1842, occupies a commanding site above the Parade Ground, and is a Gothic church of considerable size but with few pretensions to architecture. It has a square tower, with pinnacles, over the western porch, and possesses a peal of bells. A new chancel was built in 1869-70, the foundation stone of which was laid by the late Duke of Edinburgh on the 16th November, 1869. A handsome stained glass window in the east end, over the altar, to the memory of the late Mr. Douglas Lapraik, another in the north transept erected in 1892 to the memory of the late Dr. F. Stewart, formerly Colonial Secretary, one in the south transept to the memory of those who perished in the wreck of the P. & O. str. Bokhara, another to the memory of the Hospital Sisters who died in 1898 while in execution of their duty during an outbreak of plague, and the stained clerestory windows of the chancel, presented by Lady Jackson in 1900, and one to the memory of Bishop Hoare, who lost his life in the typhoon of 1906, are the chief adornments of the interior. The choir stalls, pulpit and Bishop's throne are fine samples of Chinese carving in teakwood. It also possesses a fine three-manual organ. A Church Hall adjacent to the Cathedral was opened on the 31st, January, 1921, and on the previous day a Memorial, in the form of a granite cross, to those who fell in the Great War was unveiled in the compound by the H.E. The Governor. St. Stephen's Church, for Chinese, was built, in 1892. It is a neat building in red brick with white facings, with a tower and spire about 80 feet high, standing on the Pokfolum Road side of the Church Mission compound. Union Church, a rather pleasing edifice in the Italian style of architecture, with a spire, and containing accommodation for about 500 persons, formerly stood in Staunton street, but was rebuilt in 1890, on the plan of the old building, on a new site above the Kennedy Road. This church possesses an organ, and the three rose windows are filled with stained glass. A second Union Church was opened in Kowloon in 1931. A Wesleyan chapel stands at the junction of Queen's Road and Kennedy Road; this was enlarged in 1904. A Wesleyan Sailors Home stands on Praya East next to Sailors' and Soldiers' Home, it is a fine, well planned building and was opened on the 30th, January, 1929, by Sir Cecil Clementi. The Roman Catholic Cathedral situated in Glenealy, near the Botanic Gardens, is a large structure in the Gothic style; it was opened for worship in 1888. A campanile tower with a small spire surmounting it was completed in 1904 to receive a new peal of five bells. St. Joseph's Church, in Garden Road, is a neat edifice erected in 1876 on the site of one destroyed by the great typhoon of 1874; St. Anthony's Church on the Bonham Road, near West Point, is an ugly structure, erected in 1892 by the munificence of a late Portuguese resident: St. Francis' Church, at Wanchai, and the Church of the Sacred Heart, at West Point, are small and unattractive structures. St. Margaret's Church, Happy Valley was erected a few years ago in order to meet the growing needs of the Catholic Community. It is a fine handsome building. A new Chinese Church, Church of Christ in China, was opened at the junction of Bonham Road and Caine Road in 1926. The Jewish Synagogue was erected in 1901, and is situated on the northern side of Robinson Road. It is a plain but roomy edifice with two squat towers surmounted by spirets. The entire cost of the Church was borne by Mr. (afterwards Sir) Jacob Sassoon. There are two Mahomedan Mosques, one in Shelley Street and the other at Kowloon, the latter being for the accommodation of the men of the Indian Mahomedan regiments quartered on the peninsula. A Sikh temple was, in 1902, erected near the Wanchai Road approach to the Happy Valley. There are also several Protestant mission chapels. A Christian Science Church was built on Macdonnell Road in 1911. St. Joseph's College, a school for boys managed by the Christian Brothers (Roman Catholic), occupies a large and handsome building on a prominent site below Macdonnel Road. La Salle College, the biggest educational institution in the Colony was built in 1932. The Italian Convent, in Caine Road, educates a large number of girls, and brings up many orphans gratuitously. Other denominations likewise support charitable establishments, conspicuous among which are the Diocesan Home and Orphanage, the Baxter Vernacular School, the Victoria Female Home and Orphanage, &c. St. Paul's College, situated between Pedder's Hill and Glenealy Ravine, was erected in 1850, and was originally founded for the purpose of giving a theological training to young Chinese and others intended for the ministry of the Anglican Church, but is now an ordinary school. A small chapel is attached.

The Protestant, Roman Catholic, Parsee, Jewish, and Mahomedan Cemeteries occupy sites in Wong-nei-chung Valley and are kept in good order. The Protestant Cemetery is almost a rival to the Public Gardens, being charmingly situated and admirably laid out with fountains, flower beds, and ornamental shrubs. The principal Chinese cemetery is on the slopes of Mount Davis, near the Pokfolum Road, and is injudiciously crowded and dismally bare, but it is a Confucian maxim that "places of burial should not be made to resemble pleasure-gardens."

The Hongkong Tramways, Limited, operate electric tramway services in the City of Victoria, the total route length being 10¼ miles and extends along practically the whole length of the Northern Waterfront of Hongkong, i.e., from Kennedy Town to the village of Shaukiwan as well as Happy Valley.

The first car ran through the City in 1904 amidst great excitement among the Chinese. The fares are at the flat rate of 10 cents first class and 5 cents second class

There are also bus services both in the Colony and on the mainland, the former run by the South China Motor Bus Co. and the latter by the Kowloon Motor Bus Co. In the Colony the fare is 10 cents but in Kowloon, it is somewhat different, it being based on different sections of the journey. For the first section—from Star Ferry to Yaumati—the fare for first class is 10 cents and 5 cents for third class. For the subsequent section the fares for both classes are increased by 5 cents, and so on. A motor bus service to Repulse Bay is maintained by the Hong Kong Hotel.

A cable tramway has since 1888 given access to the Peak and is worked with great success, both financially and otherwise. The City terminus of this interesting little line is at St. John's Place.

INSTITUTIONS

There are numerous Clubs in the Colony. The principal are the Hongkong Club on the Praya, the Club Lusitano in Ice House Street, the Sport Club and the China Fleet Club on the Praya. The Hongkong Club is a handsome building replete with every modern comfort; a large annexe was completed in 1902. The Peak Club is domiciled in a pretty building at Plunkett Gap, and possesses tennis and croquet lawns on land adjoining. There are also the Hong Kong Jockey Club, United Services Recreation Club (Kowloon), the Club de Recreio, the Craigengower Cricket Club, the Civil Service Cricket Club, the Deutsche Club, the Filipino Club, the Indian Recreation Club, the Ladies Recreation Club, the South China Athletic Association, the Chinese Athletic Association, the Chinese Recreation Club, the Victoria Recreation Club, the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club and the Hong Kong Polo Club. The Royal Hongkong Golf Club has four courses, Happy Valley and Deep Water Bay (9 holes each) and Fanling (two 18 holes courses, the "new" and the "old"). There are also Hockey Clubs, a Chess Club, and a Yacht Club. In 1928 the Sports Club housed in King's Building was opened by H. E. the Officer Administering the Government, the Hon. Mr. (now Sir) William J. Southorn. The main object of this Club was that residents of all nationalities could meet socially. It has proved to be a great success. The Ladies' Recreation Club have several prettily laid-out tennis courts and a pavilion in their grounds on the Peak Road.

The Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce have rooms in the Chartered Bank Building. The Committee form its executive, and the Chamber is frequently asked by the Government for its opinion on questions affecting commerce. There is a branch of the China Association, with its separate Committee. A Chinese Chamber of Commerce was established in 1920 and has since been of great service, not only to the Chinese merchants of Hongkong but to Chinese merchants overseas. The Freemasons' Hall, erected in 1865, is situated in Zetland Street, and, by an arrangement concluded in 1922 at the suggestion of the parent Lodge, has now become the joint property of all the Lodges in the Colony. The Institution of Marine Engineers watches over the interests of that profession. The Hongkong Benevolent Society does good work among those who are occasionally cast destitute on the Colony. The Helena May Institute for Women, named after Lady May, situated in Garden Road, was opened on the 12th, September, 1916, and extended in 1922. In January, 1930, a branch was opened in Kowloon by Lady Clementi. Among other institutions are the St. Andrew's Society, primarily established to ensure the fitting celebration of the anniversary of Scotland's patron saint; the St. George's Society, started in 1927; St. David's Society, St. Patrick's Society, the Kowloon Residents' Association, the English Association, the Mid-Levels Residents Association and the Peak Residents' Association.

Under the auspices of the Hongkong Jockey Club pony racing is conducted in the Colony. The annual meeting which lasts five days is generally arranged to take place about a fortnight after Chinese New Year. After the annual meeting a number of "extra" meetings are held, there being about twenty race days in the year not including the annual meeting. Steeplechasing was introduced into the Colony a few years ago and the meetings of the Fanling Hunt Club are now very popular. One meeting a month is held except during July and August when it is too hot for racing.

Athletic sports are held every year by the residents, schools, and the garrison and great interest is shown by the public. Football is far and away the most popular form of sport as it has in recent years got a grip on the Chinese public. In summer swimming sports are held at regular intervals at the Victoria Recreation Club and at a number of Chinese swimming clubs at North Point. Water Polo is fast becoming the most popular form of summer sport. There is a Philharmonic Society (resuscitated in 1922) and also an Amateur Dramatic Club, the members of which give occasional performances in the Theatre Royal during the season. Several large and well equipped cinema theatres showing talking pictures and three large Chinese Theatres, where the Chinese drama is almost constantly on view, are always well attended.

There are four daily papers published in English: the Hongkong Daily Press and the South China Morning Post, which appear in the morning; the China Mail and the Hongkong Telegraph, issued in the evening. There are three weekly papers—the Hongkong Weekly Press and China Overland Trade Report, the Overland China Mail, and the Sunday Herald. The Directory & Chronicle of the Far East has been issued annually since 1862 from the Daily Press Office. The native Press consists of about a dozen papers. The Government Gazette is published once a week.

There are several good hotels in Victoria, the leading ones in the city being the Hong Kong Hotel and The Gloucester, a fine modern building opened in 1932. On the other side of the island a hotel at Repulse Bay was opened on New Year's Day, 1920, by the Governor, H. E. Sir Reginald Stubbs In Kowloon there are the Station Hotel, the Palace Hotel, and the Kowloon Hotel, while erection on Salisbury Road, by the Hongkong - Shanghai Hotels Co., Ltd., of a hotel on the most up to - date lines and containing extensive accommodation, called the Peninsula Hotel, gives Hongkong the honour of having the largest hotel in the Orient. The Peninsula Hotel was opened in December, 1928, by the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn, at that time the acting governor.

Industries

The Colony possesses a large sugar refinery, shipbuilding yards (described below), a cement works, a rope works, many Chinese knitting factories, a soap and perfumery factory, glass blowing establishments, cigar and cigarette factories of modern type, native factories for the preparation for export of vermillion, soy, baskets and rattan ware, numerous native boat building yards and granite quarries, etc. A Dairy Farm Company, under European supervision, also controls an extensive ice factory. The Colonial Government owns the British section of a single line railway to Canton.

The works of the Hongkong and China Gas Company are situated at West Point and at Yaumati, and those of the Hongkong Electric Company at North Point. A new power-station for the Electric Company was built on a site reclaimed from the sea for this purpose. The city is illuminated by electric light, which was introduced at the end of 1890. Electricity is supplied in Kowloon by the China Light & Power Co., Ltd.

Docks and Shipbuilding Yards

Excellent dock accommodation and shipbuilding facilities exist in the Colony. The Hongkong and Whampoa Dock Co., Ltd., a British Company, incorporated under the Hongkong Companies Ordinance 1865, on the 11th October, 1866, has three extensive establishments. The principal establishment and Head Office is situated at Kowloon Docks, Hung Hom, one known as Cosmopolitan Dock at Tai Kok Tsui, and two Dry Docks at Aberdeen, on the south side of Hongkong Island. The establishments of this Company are fitted with all the best and latest appliances for engineering and shipbuilding work. No. 1 Dock at Kowloon can accommodate the largest vessel in H.M. Navy on the China Station, and also the largest merchant vessel calling at Hongkong. The Docks and Slips are of the following dimensions:—

Kowloon Docks, Hung Hom—

No. 1 (Admiralty) Dock—700 feet in length, 95 feet in breadth at entrance at top and 88 feet at bottom, and 30 feet depth of water over sill at ordinary spring tides.

No. 2 Dock—Length on keel blocks, 371 feet; breadth at entrance, 74 feet; depth of water over sill at ordinary spring tides, 14 feet.

Patent Slips, No. 1—Length on keel blocks 240 feet; breadth at entrance 60 feet; depth on the blocks 14 feet.

No. 2—Length on keel blocks 230 feet; breadth at entrance 60 feet; depth of water on the blocks at ordinary spring tides, 12 feet.

Tai Kok Tsui

Cosmopolitan Dock—Length on keel blocks, 466 feet; breadth at entrance 85 feet 6 inches; depth of water over sill at ordinary spring tides, 20 feet.

Aberdeen—

Hope Dock—Length on keel blocks, 430 feet; breadth at entrance, 84 feet; depth of water over sill at ordinary spring tides, 23 feet.

Lamont Dock—Length on keel blocks, 333 feet; breadth at entrance, 64 feet; depth of water over sill at ordinary spring tides, 16 feet.

The Sheers at Hung Hom are capable of lifting 100 tons and the depth of water alongside is 24 ft. 6 ins. at low tide. There are nine building berths at Hung Hom ranging from 450 ft. to 900 ft. and the Dock is capable of building vessels up to 700 ft. in length.

Taikoo —In 1908 docks constructed by the Taikoo Dockyard and Engineering Co., Ltd., at Quarry Bay, just inside Lyeemun Pass, were completed. The dock has been built to British Admiralty requirements, and has been designed to permit of further increasing its length should it become necessary at some future time to do so. The dimensions of the dock are: 787 feet extreme length; 750 feet on the blocks; 120 feet wide at coping; 77 feet 6 inches wide at bottom; 88 feet width of entrance at top; 82 feet width of entrance at bottom; 34 feet 6 inches depth over centre of sill at high spring tides; 31 feet depth over sides of sill at H.W.O.S.T. A feature of the dock is the caisson, of the box-sliding type, weighing 400 tons and electrically controlled.

There are three slipways:

No. 1 Slipway is 1,030 feet long and 80 feet wide, capable of taking steamers up to 335 feet long having a displacement of 3,000 tons.

No. 2 Slipway is 1,053½ feet long and 60 feet wide, capable of taking steamers up to 370 feet long having a displacement of 4,000 tons.

No. 3 Slipway is 993½ feet long by 60 feet wide, capable of taking steamers up to 300 feet long having a displacement of 2,000 tons.

The building yard is 500 feet long, and 500 feet wide, and has been equipped with a view to the construction of passenger and cargo vessels, turbine

The engine shops, are most extensive and complete, capable of undertaking the building of all classes of steam engines, including geared turbines. The establishment throughout has been fitted with the latest time-saving appliances procurable. The electric crane situated on the sea-wall lifts 100 tons at a radius of 70 feet, and waggon and crane roads run the full length from end to end.

Wharves and Godowns

Cargo is handled both in midstream and at wharves. In the former case transit by means of lighter or native junk is the rule. Steamers surrounded five deep on either side by native craft are consequently a normal feature of Hongkong Harbour.

The Hongkong and Kowloon Wharf and Godown Company, Limited, owns a water frontage 2,000 feet in length at Kowloon, the total area of its property being 1,201,350 square feet. It has nine berths capable of berthing steamers 650 feet in length with a draught of 32 feet at lowest spring tides. A new wharf, 800 feet in length, and 60 feet in breadth, is in course of construction. Light railway lines facilitate the transfer of cargo to or from transit godowns or from steamer to steamer at the wharves. A railway siding connects the premises with the Kowloon-Canton Railway. The Company maintains a fleet of eleven steam and motor tugs and launches and 114 lighters of from 50 to 200 tons capacity; its godowns (including separate buildings for extra hazardous, hazardous and non-hazardous goods and bonded warehouse for storage of dutiable goods) have a total capacity of about 300,000 measurement tons. An open space (343,343 sq. ft.) is also provided for storage of timber and other cargoes not requiring cover. The newer godowns are equipped with electric conveyors and electric cranes. Sixteen cargo cranes are operated on shore and five afloat, with a lifting capacity up to 25 tons. There is additional accommodation at West Point, the principal Chinese business quarter. A large staff of Swatow coolies, trained to handle cargo, is employed and housed by the Company, which also maintains an effective force of detectives and watchmen to prevent robberies and pilferage.

Holt's Wharf has a frontage of 1,600 ft. and an area of 108,000 sq. ft. The storage accommodation comprises five, four and two-storey warehouses with a capacity of 25,000 measurement tons. A large fleet of tugs and lighters is also maintained. Both these wharves are connected by special siding with the railway.

With cargo delivered from transit godown, the system is for consignees to obtain Agents' countersignature to their Bills of Lading, after which the Bills of Lading are stamped off for delivery at the Godown Office, and consignees go to the godowns where their cargo is delivered to them, seven days' free storage (not counting date of arrival) being allowed, after which overtime is charged. Only a portion of a steamer's cargo is taken direct by consignees from transit godowns, the balance usually being transferred to storage godowns under instructions from the consignees, the greater part of the merchandise being held under lien to the various banks. Warrants are issued for such cargo and the merchants issue Delivery Orders as and when required.

The Peak District

A well-made but steeply-graded mountain road leads up from the centre of the city to the summit of Victoria Peak, with numerous other paths branching off from it at Victoria Gap along the adjoining hills. A tramway, on the wire rope system, runs to the Victoria Gap, the lower terminus being close to St. John's Cathedral. It was opened to traffic on the 30th, May, 1888. The Victoria (Jubilee) Hospital occupying a breezy site on Barker Road, was opened by Sir Henry Blake on the 7th, November, 1903, partly as the result of public subscription. A new block was added to it in 1923. Yet another hospital, named "The Matilda Hospital," is situated at the southern corner of Mount Kellett. It was built at a cost of about $350,000 and opened in 1906. The expense of erection and maintenance are borne by the estate of the late Mr. Granville Sharp, who devoted the bulk of his fortune to provide such an institution for the benefit of persons needing it who are of European or American birth. Another hospital, the War Memorial Nursing Home, was opened in 1932 on Mount Kellett Road.

The road from Victoria Gap westward leads to Victoria Peak, which is 1,823 feet above the sea and rises almost abruptly behind the centre of the city of Victoria. Not far from the summit of the Peak, on a most commanding site, stands Mountain Lodge, the summer residence of H.E. the Governor, which was erected in 1901. Another road northward from Victoria Gap and known as Lugard Road was completed in 1920, and, with Harlech Road, encircles Victoria Peak. From there a road leads down to the West of the City. Another road in a directly opposite direction leads from Victoria Gap to Magazine Gap, where a second hill village of foreign residences has been formed on the southern side of the hills at an area of about 900 feet above the sea. There is also a road from Victoria Gap down to Pokfulum and Aberdeen

A second road to the Peak district was completed in 1922. Starting from Morrison Hill Road, it runs from Happy Valley and traverses the face of the hills to Wanchai Gap and Magazine Gap to the south of the cemetery. From Wanchai Gap, also, it has been continued, along the southern face of the hills, to the Peak. It has an easy gradient and was constructed for motor traffic. A branch of it runs in an opposite direction to Wong-Nei-Cheong Gap and along the South side of the hills until it joins the motor road which encircles the island. Houses are springing up rapidly along the road, and adjacent to it.

Magazine Gap is also approached from the lower levels by an excellent and well-graded road, commencing on the Bowen Road, which is now a motor road as far as May road.

The Rural Districts

There are several villages on the island, the largest of which is Shau-ki-wan, situate in a bay in the Ly-ee-mun Pass, a centre for Chinese fishing craft. Aberdeen, known to the Chinese as Shek-pai-wan, on the south of the island, possesses a well sheltered little harbour, also much frequented by fishing craft. Two large docks of the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock Company are situated there. Pokfolum, on the road to Aberdeen, about four miles from Victoria, is also a residential district and many residences have been erected in pleasant and picturesque situations, commanding fine sea views and cool breezes, but for some years after the development of the Peak district Pokfulum remained comparatively neglected, when the difficulty of finding additional sites on the higher levels again brought it into notice. The sanitorium of the French Missions is located at Pokfulum, and is a fine building with an elegant chapel attached. The Dairy Farm is also situated there. Some distance beyond Aberdeen are two excellent bathing beaches known as Deep Water Bay (where there is a 9-hole golf-course and club-house) and Repulse Bay (where a popular hotel has been erected by the Hongkong-Shanghai Hotels Co., Ltd.). Wong-Nei-Cheong is located at the head of the valley of that name. A motor-road has been constructed from the Morrison Hill district viâ Wanchai Gap to Wong-Nei-Cheong Gap and to the Peak, and a tramway was considered for the purpose of rendering building sites in the Mt. Cameron district accessible to residents. Stanley, situated in a small bay on the south-east of the island, was once the site of a military station, but the barrack buildings have been pulled down, and the village is now stationary. A modern school named St. Stephen's College has been erected nearby. A cemetery on the point contains numerous graves of British officers and soldiers. There is an excellent motor road round the Island by way of Pokfolum, Aberdeen, Stanley, Tytam and Shaukiwan. This was commended as a memorial of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria and completed at the end of 1919. Saiwan is a small village picturesquely situated in Saiwan Bay, just outside the Ly-ee-mun Pass, and is much frequented by picnic parties. In the belief that it was a healthy locality, small barracks were erected there early in the forties, but the experiment proved most disastrous, for in five weeks out of a detachment of 20 English soldiers five died and three more were removed in a dangerous condition. The buildings were therefore soon abandoned. Shek O is a small but prettily-located village occupying a small valley shut in from the water on the eastern coast, not far from Cape D'Aguilar. This district is being developed as a European summer resort and a Country Club has been established. Near here a wireless station has been erected.

Kowloon and other Dependencies

Across the harbour is the dependency of British Kowloon, which is developing very rapidly along lines laid down by the Town Planning Committee. Some four square miles of the peninsula were first granted in perpetual lease by the Kwangtung Government to Sir Harry (then Mr.) Parkes, but were definitely ceded to Great Britain in 1860 by Article VI. of the Peking Convention. Yau-ma-ti, the principal village, has greatly increased in population, and has become an important town. There is a considerable Chinese junk trade to this district and amongst other industries is a preserved ginger factory. Gas Works were erected there in 1892, and the settled portion of the peninsula is lighted with gas; electricity is also now largely used, the generating station being at Hunghom. Three regiments of Indian infantry are usually stationed at Tsim-tsa Tsui, where barracks and officers' quarters are located and a Mahommedan mosque has been erected. At Tsim-tsa-tsui, too, a large number of European houses and flats have been erected, and this portion of the peninsula, which faces Victoria, has gradually developed into a populous residential settlement. It is approached by Nathan Road, a fine wide thoroughfare running at right angles to the water-front. A fine bund, with a massive granite wall, has been constructed here, and an extensive range of godowns built and several fine wharves made for discharging cargo and coaling. Here, also, is situated the handsome terminal station of the Canton-Kowloon Railway. During 1905 and 1906 extensive reclamation works were carried out extending eastward from the godown company's property to Hunghom. Messrs. Butterfield & Swire have erected extensive godown accommodation on the reclamation. The same period will also be remembered by the building of two churches at Kowloon—St. Andrew's, in Nathan Road, being the gift of the Hon. Sir Paul Chater, C.M.G., and the Roman Catholic Church in Chatham Road, the gift of Dr. S. A. Gomes. Sir Paul Chater also donated the funds for erecting a third place of worship on the Peninsula—a branch of the Union Church, Hong Kong. There are several hotels, the largest and newest being the Peninsula. The Central British School was erected in 1901 on Nathan Road at the expense of Mr. (now Sir) Robert Ho Tung. The Navy maintains a small naval yard, subsidiary to the principal establishment on the Hongkong side. The Royal Observatory is situated on Mount Elgin; and a large and handsome Police Station for the Water Police occupies an eminence just above the Praya. A fine building for a European Y.M.C.A. was opened in November, 1925. A steam ferry plies regularly between Tsim-tsa-tsui and Victoria; ferry boats also run between Victoria and Sham-shui-po, Mongkok, Yau-ma-ti and Hunghom, where the principal docks of the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock Co. are situated. The Cosmopolitan Dock and works, also belonging to the same Company, are situated at Sham Shui Po. At Hok-ün are also situated the extensive works of the Green Island Cement Co., Ltd., and the patent slip and shipbuilding yard of Messrs. W. S. Bailey & Co., Ltd. At Kowloon Tong a very extensive area has been levelled and a charming garden city has sprung up.

In 1898 an agreement was entered into whereby China ceded to Great Britain for ninety-nine years the territory behind Kowloon Peninsula up to a line drawn from Mirs Bay to Deep Water Bay and the adjacent islands, including Lantao, the extent of the New Territory being about 376 square miles, namely, 286 square miles on the mainland and 90 square miles on the islands. The ceremony of formally taking over the territory was fixed for the 17th April, 1899, when the British flag was to have been hoisted at Taipohu, and the day was declared a general holiday. Attacks, however, having been made on the parties engaged on the preliminary arrangements, the mat-sheds erected for the accommodation of the police having been burnt, and other evidences of organised opposition having been given, it was deemed advisable to assume full jurisdiction on the 16th, April, on which date the flag was hoisted by the Hon. Mr. (afterwards Sir) J. H. Stewart Lockhart, C.M.G., Colonial Secretary. Military operations were found necessary to overcome the opposition, and on the 18th April the rebels were completely routed in an action fought at Sheung Tsun, their force numbering some 2,600 men. On the British side there were no fatalities and only one or two slight casualties; a number of Chinese were killed and wounded, but the exact figures were not ascertained, those who fell being carried away by their friends. In the Convention it was provided that Kowloon City was to remain Chinese, but, owing to the difficulties in administration and in respect of the disturbances which occurred on the taking over of the leased area, the Home Government determined to take over this area and orders were issued to the military authorities to seize Kowloon walled city and Shamchun. This was done on the 16th, May, 1899, no opposition being encountered at either place. The Hongkong Volunteer Corps took part in the expedition to Kowloon City. Shamchun, the other place seized, is an important town on the river of the same name just beyond the boundary originally agreed upon. It was, however, restored to the Chinese authorities in November, 1899. The New Territory under British jurisdiction is being rapidly developed by the construction of roads; one of these, running from Kowloon to Castle Peak, affording magnificent sea-scapes to the motorist, who can return by way of Fan Ling and Taipo, the total distance being about sixty miles. Police stations have been established, and a system of administration by means of village communities organised. The headquarters of the administration are at Taipohu. The railway from Kowloon to Canton, which passes through the New Territory to Shamchun, has already done much to develop it. The Hongkong Golf Club acquired an area of 55.62 acres in the valley stretching West from Fanling and have converted it into a Golf Course of 18 holes, with two relief Courses of 9 holes each, which are now being extended, the whole promising to be the best in the East. The neighbourhood and Taipo are coming into favour with Europeans for residental purposes by reason of the picturesque scenery. The principal islands and their populations are as follows:—Lantao, 5,844; Cheung Chau, 5,035; Lamma, 1,256. These figures do not include the floating population. The islands to the west of Hongkong contain 1,925; those to the east 1,169. The Chinese population of the New Territories is 95,503.

Of the islands and islets in the waters of the Colony (exclusive of the above acquisitions) the most important is Stonecutter's Island, formerly known as Wong Chune-chow, opposite to and about three-quarters of a mile from the north-west extremity of the Kowloon peninsula. The island is an irregular ridge about a mile in length, and a little over a quarter of a mile broad; the principal eminences are occupied by batteries and no one is allowed to land without a permit. The Quarantine Station also is located here. After the great typhoon of September, 1874, two or three thousand bodies of the victims found afloat were interred on Stonecutter's Island. Kellet's Island is a small rock near East Point, on which formerly stood a fort, now replaced by a small magazine. Green Island, at the western entrance of the harbour, has been planted with trees and now justifies its name all the year round. A lighthouse has been placed on its south-western extremity. One Tree Island is a tiny rock near the entrance to Aberdeen. Aplichau, a considerable island opposite Aberdeen, of which harbour it forms part, has a populous fishing village on its northern shore facing Aberdeen. Lantao and Lamma Islands were brought under British jurisdiction by the Kowloon Convention of 1898. The former has a considerably larger area than Hongkong, but both this island and Lamma are very sparsely populated by agriculturists and fishermen. Cheung Chau is becoming popular as a summer resort for Europeans, numerous bungalows having been erected in the European reservation by missionaries and others.

Population and Defences

A census taken in April, 1931, showed the total population of the Colony to be 852,932, as compared with 625,166 ten years ago. Kowloon, which had a population of 74,698 in 1921 doubled its figures, while the Island inhabitants have increased in numbers from 347,000 to 424,000, an increase of about 77,000. The whole population may be summed up as follows:—City of Victoria, 424,522 (as compared with 347,401 in 1921); Kowloon, 262,899 (as compared with 123,488); New Territories, 95,503 (as compared with 83,163); and the floating population, 69,008 (as compared with 71,154).

The Garrison consists of British and Indian troops. There is also a local Volunteer Defence Corps. The approaches to the harbour are strongly fortified, the batteries consisting of well-constructed earthworks. The western entrance is protected by guns on Mount Davis, Stonecutters Island and Belcher Point. The Lyee-Mùn Pass is defended by forts on the Hongkong side and another on Devil's Peak on the mainland.

The Naval Yard consists of a large dock, an extensive range of workshops and offices east of the Artillery Barracks, and the Naval Authorities have another large establishm nt on the Kowloon side near to Yaumati.

Climate

As intimated in earlier paragraphs, Hongkong formerly possessed a most unenviable notoriety for unhealthiness, and in years past the troops garrisoned here suffered grievously from malarial fevers. At the present time, however, the Colony is one of the healthiest spots in the world in the same latitude. The influence of the young pine forests created by the Afforestation Department and the draining of nullahs on the slopes have no doubt been beneficial in checking malaria, and the attention latterly bestowed on sanitation has not been without its due effect. The number of deaths from malaria during the past six years were: 1921, 332; 1922, 454; 1923, 674; 1924, 707; 1925, 702; 1926, 587. The last number represents 0.89 per thousand of population. The general death-rate per 1,000 in 1926 was 15.9 (19.07 in 1925). Among the Chinese community the death-rate was 16.01 per 1,000, compared with 19.12 in 1925. Amongst the non-Chinese civilian community the death-rate per 1,000 was 10.9 as against 14.6 in 1925.

Four successive years of comparative drought, 1898-1901, led to the assumption that the rainfall of Hongkong was decreasing. But such is not the case; the mean annual rainfall for the period 1902-11 was 84.21 inches against 68.29 inches for the period 1895-1901. Until 1918 the rainfall was never so heavy as in the period 1888-1894, when the mean annual fall was 101.08 inches.

Trade in 1939

An interim report issued by the Imports & Exports Department on the trade of the Colony states that the combined values of imports and exports of merchandise (excluding treasure) as declared during the month of November, 1939, totalled $88.7 millions (£5.5 millions) as compared with $95.0 millions (£5.9 millions) in November, 1938.

In terms of local currency the total visible trade of the Colony (excluding treasure) decreased by 6.6 per cent in November, 1939 as compared with November, 1938, and by 6.8 per cent in terms of sterling.

Imports of merchandise in November, 1939 totalled $48.9 millions (£3.0 millions) as compared with $53.6 millions (£3.3 millions) in November, 1938, and exports $39.8 millions (£2.5 millions) as compared with $41.4 millions (£2.6 millions).

Imports of merchandise in November, 1939 decreased by 8.8 per cent in terms of local currency, and by 9.1 per cent in terms of sterling. Exports of merchandise in November, 1939 decreased by 3.9 per cent in terms of local currency, and by 3.8 per cent in terms of sterling.

SIAMESE MONEY, WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

MONEY

4 Sálü'ngs	or 1 Bät or Tical	=	$0·60	50 Ch'ängs	or 1 Häp	=	$2,400·00
4 Bäts	or 1 Tämlü'ng	=	$2·40
20 Tämlü'ngs	or 1 Ch'äng	=	$48·00	100 Häps	or 1 Tära	=	$240,000·00

WEIGHTS

The standard of weight being the coin of the country, weights are designated by the same terms. A Tical weighs 236 grains troy.

The Siamese standard of weight is just double that of the Chinese, and goods are bought and sold in Bangkok more by the Chinese than the Siamese standard.

LONG MEASURE

1 Niw				=	$\frac{13}{16}$ inch
12 Niws	make	1 K'ú'p	=	$9\frac{3}{4}$ inches
2 K'ú'ps	make	1 Säwk	=	$19\frac{1}{2}$ inches
4 Säwks	make	1 Wah	=	78 inches
20 Wahs	make	1 Sën	=	130 feet
400 Sëns	make	1 Yot	=	$9\frac{7}{8}$ statute miles

Note.—Timber is bought by the Yök, which is 64 Säwk in length by 1 Sawk in width or 36,864 Siamese inches, being equivalent to 169 square feet.

DRY MEASURE

1 Tänan	=	$1\frac{1}{2}$ pints	25 Tänans	make 1 Sat
20 Tänans make 1 Táng	=	15 pints	100 Tángs or 80 Sat make 1 Keean (Coyan).

A Keean is 20 Piculs; a Picul is $133\frac{1}{3}$lbs. avoirdupois.

The metric system is widely used in commerce. A law promulgated in 1924 provides that the metric system shall be the standardised and legalised system of weights and measures in Siam, but this law is optional for the time being.

Macao

MACAO

門澳 Ou-mun 硖馬 Ma-kau

Macao is situated in 22 deg. 11. min. 30 sec. N. latitude, and 113 deg. 32 min. 30 sec. E. longitude, on a rocky peninsula, renowned, long before the Portuguese settled on it, for its safe harbour for junks and small vessels. The Portuguese, who had already settled on the island of Lampacao, and frequented for trading purposes Chin-chew, Liampo, Tamao, and San-choan (St. John's Island, where Francis Xavier, the celebrated missionary, died), were conceded the use of Macao in 1557. Shortly after their arrival in this part of the world, the Viceroy of Canton, powerless himself to perform the task, offered to present the barren peninsula to the Portuguese if they should succeed in subduing the notorious pirate, Shan-si-lau, who styled himself "King of the islands of Canton" and, with his force of 12,000 men and 100 armed junks and lorchas, levied tribute as far as the mouth of the Yangtsze and even went so far as to blockade the port of Canton. The Portuguese manned and armed a few vessels and succeeded in raising the blockade of Canton and clearing the seas. The town of Macao soon afterwards began to rise, and during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries trade flourished there, the difficulty of residence at Canton greatly contributing towards it. The East India Company and the Dutch Company had establishments in Macao.

The Portuguese paid the mandarin of Heungshan a rental of 500 Taels a year for the occupation of Macao until Governor Ferreira do Amaral in 1848 refused to pay the rental any longer, and forcibly drove out the Chinese Custom-house, and with it every vestige of Chinese authority. This bold stroke cost him his life on 22nd, August, 1849, for he was waylaid and barbarously murdered near the Barrier of Porta do Cerco, and his head was taken to Canton. This political assassination synchronised with an attack on Macao by the mandarin's troops who were repulsed by Amaral's doughty lieutenant Mesquita. Eventually the sovereignty of Portugal over Macao was formally recognised by China in the Treaty signed with Portugal in 1887.

In November, 1901, an Envoy Extraordinary arrived from Portugal, his mission being to arrange with the Chinese Government for a delimitation of the boundary of the Colony. The line of demarcation submitted by the Envoy included certain islands which the Chinese Government refused to acknowledge as being part of the Portuguese colony, and the Envoy, while not successful in gaining this point, secured a concession for a railway from Macao to Canton. The convention, however, did not meet with the approval of the Côrtes at Lisbon, and Senhor Branco came to the East again in 1904. In November a new agreement was arranged with the Chinese Government, but the Government at Lisbon regarded the terms as far from satisfactory, and refused ratification. In accordance with the Treaty of 1887 the Governments of China and Portugal in 1909 appointed Commissioners to delimitate the boundaries of Macao and its Dependencies, but China would not admit Portugal's title to half the territory claimed, and the Portuguese Commissioner interrupted the negotiations after they had been in progress nearly four months and proposed referring the dispute to The Hague Arbitration Tribunal. China definitely refused to agree to this, and so the position remains as it has always been. In 1910 the Portuguese authorities asserted their jurisdiction over the island of Colowan by clearing the place of a piratical horde which had terrorised the whole delta.

The colony is separated from the large island of Heung-shan by an arch, built in the year 1870, at the end of the narrow, connecting sandy isthmus. The principal topographical features of Macao are two principal ranges of hills, one running from south to north, the other from east to west which may be considered as forming an angle, the base of which leans upon the river or anchoring place. On the lofty mount eastward, called Caçilha, is a fort, enclosing the church of Na. Sra. de Guia, and westward is Lillau, on the top of which stands the hermitage of Na. Sra. da Penha; entering a wide semi-circular bay, called Praia Grande, which faces the east, on the right hand stands the fort San Francisco; and on the left, that of N. Sra. de Bom Parto. Seen from the roads or from any of the forts crowning the several low hills, Macao is extremely picturesque. The public and private buildings are gaily painted and the streets are kept very clean.

In the town there are several places of interest. The Gardens and Grotto of Camões, once the resort of the celebrated Portuguese poet Camões, are worth seeing, as, also, are the noble façade of the ancient Jesuit church which used to form a part of the college of San Paulo, burnt in 1835, and the Avenida Vasco da Gama. The crusading ardour of the Portuguese in all their voyages of discovery in the East is evidenced at Macao by the large number of Churches which still exist. The Cathedral is a large plain structure having no architectural pretensions, and the various parish churches are stucco edifices, simple without and unassuming within.

Owing to its being open to the south-west breezes and to the quietude always prevailing, Macao has become a frequent retreat for invalids and business men from Hongkong and other neighbouring ports and there are several good modern hotels.

After the cession of Hongkong to the British, the trade of Macao declined rapidly and the coolie traffic subsequently developed there gave it a certain notoriety. This traffic, pregnant with abuses, was abolished in 1874. Fish, fresh and preserved, is the principal article of export, as well as fire-crackers, tobacco and preserves. Essential oils, tea and matting are also exported to some extent. Brick and cement works, and other factories have been established. The commercial activity of the place, however, as far as the Portuguese are concerned, is a thing of the past.

As the harbour has long shown signs of silting up, various projects have been prepared for its improvement, but until recently little has been done. A detailed plan of a very big scheme was prepared 30 years ago by Senhor Adolpho Loureiro, but was pigeon-holed by the home Government. The matter was raised again, however, some 10 or 12 years later, and another expert engineer, Senhor Castello Branco, was sent to Macao to make investigations. He made a few amendations to the original plan, but his report suffered the same fate as its predecessor. Then came the great constitutional change in Portugal with the promise of a greater measure of autonomy for the Colonies, and the need of harbour improvement was pressed again, with the result that Admiral Hugo de Lacerda, who had planned and superintended the important harbour works at Lourenço Marques, was sent out to make a report. He has introduced important modifications in the original scheme. Whereas the earlier schemes contemplated only the improvement of the inner harbour, Admiral Lacerda's scheme, while embracing this, provides, as its main feature, for the creation of a harbour for large vessels in front of the city. The work for making the inner harbour better fitted for the accommodation of the considerable fleet of junks which trade between Macao and neighbouring ports and engaged in the important fishing industry is now in a very advanced state of progress. There have been extensive reclamations, and some substantial sea-walls are now in position. By means of a Deauville railway running across the neck of the peninsula, the mud excavated from the inner harbour was dumped on the other side near the Barrier. The main feature of the outer harbour works is a protected anchorage to accommodate vessels drawing up to 23 feet, and a long deep-water channel of approach, giving a depth of 14 ft. at low tides and 23 ft. at high tides. Owing, however, to the nature of the mud used in the reclamations of the Outer Harbour it has not been possible to build on the extensive tract of land, but a Hongkong syndicate has made a proposal to the Portuguese Government, taking over the entire reclamations for development. The scheme has been submitted to Lisbon for approval, and there are hopes that the Central Government will not oppose it.

Another reclamation scheme has in the meanwhile been commenced by the filling in of a large part of the old Praia Grande Bay, as the means for the linking of the old town with the reclamations of the Outer Harbour. It is being carried out by a Macao Chinese syndicate.

The need for good drinking water has long been felt, for the Colony's supplies of water have all been obtained from Lappa Island and from wells within the Colony, and latterly in very small quantities from a reservoir constructed at Guia Hill. A concession has been granted by the Municipal Council for the supply of portable water.

Expert engineers were invited to draw up a comprehensive scheme, and the works were put in hand in November, 1932. Upon completion of the Company's scheme the colony will be supplied with an abundance of water.

The new Macao-Shekki motor road, started in 1928 has been completed. The country opened up by the new highway is an interesting one, and is likely to be of great commercial value.

The installation of automatic telephones was inaugurated in December, 1929.

The Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamboat Company and a Chinese Company maintain a regular service between Macao and Hongkong and there is a regular service also between Macao and Canton. The distance from Macao to Hongkong is 40½ miles, and to Canton 88 miles. Macao is connected with Hongkong by telegraph and wireless. The population of Macao, with its dependencies of Taipa and Colowan, is, according to the Census taken in 1927, Chinese, 152,738; non-Chinese, mostly of Portuguese extraction, 4,437—a total of 157,175. Macao is garrisoned with Portuguese troops.

INDO-CHINA

The French possession of Indo-China lies between 8 deg. 30 min. and 23 deg. 23 min N. lat. and 97 deg. 40 min. and 107 deg. E. long. (Paris), and comprises the colonies of Cochin-China, the protectorates of Cambodia, Annam, Tonkin, and Laos and the territory of Kwang Chéoù Wan leased from China. The total area of Indo-China is 286,000 square miles and is under the direction of a Governor-General who, under the authority of the "Minister of Colonies" represents the French Republic and has all the powers of the French Government. The Governor-General is assisted by two councils :

1. The " Grand Conseil des Intérêts Economiques et Financiers" including 28 French members and 23 native members, elected by local assemblies or appointed by the Governor-General. The Grand Conseil is compulsorily consulted on the budget and every other questions that the Governor-General may design.

2. The "Conseil de Gouvernement de l'Indochine", a body which includes the chiefs of leading services of the administration and five native members whose business is to take care of the interest of each colony or protectorate they respectively represent. The Council of Government and the Grand Conseil are movable bodies, meeting in any of the chief towns according to the summons of the Governor-General who keeps two official residences: Hanoi and Saigon; the former remains, however, the seat of the administration.

The Governor-General is assisted also by the "Secrétaire Général du Gouvernement Général de l'Indochine" who has a special and permanent delegation to settle every question that the Governor-General has not reserved to himself.

The deltas of Cochin-China and Tonkin are fertile; Annam, connecting them, is a long mountainous tract, with a narrow littoral on one side, and a wild sparsely populated hill tract stretching to the Mekong river on the other. Rice, maize, cotton, rubber, sugar, seeds, tobacco and spice are the principal products of the alluvial districts. The principal mineral production is coal, which is mined exclusively in Tonkin (in districts such as Ke-Bao, Hongay, Dong-Trieu, Campha, Thai-Nguyen, Ninh-Binh, Tuyen-Quang, etc.). The output averages 2,000,000 tons a year, 600,000 of which are used in the country and the remainder is exported. Other minerals, including gold, silver, tin, copper, lead and antimony, exist in the Protectorate and are more or less mined. Zinc mines are worked on a large scale and the annual output of zinc ore amounts to nearly 12,000 tons.

The principal harbours are Haiphong, Hongay and Campha in Tonkin, Tourane' Vinh-Ben-Thuy, Natrang, Cam-Ranh and Quinhon in Annam, Saigon in Cochin-China, and Phnom-Penh and Ream in Cambodia. The weather is warm and humid year long in the South, and in the North (that is in Tonkin) although summer days are very like those of Cochin-China—dry and wet— one can enjoy, from October to April, a true fresh season, a winter, during which a very thin rain sometimes falls. As to central—Annam,—the weather can be called an intermediary one, which varies insensibly between those of Tonkin and Cochin-China.

There are 3,400 kilometers of railway completed and opened to traffic in Indo-China, while 465 kilometers operated in the Chinese province of Yunnan belong also to the French. The population is estimated at over 23,060,000, most of whom are Annamites. The Chinese number 400,000, and the Europeans amount to 43,000. The Chinese have immigrated in large number to the South of Cochin-China, where they had obtained almost the exclusive possession of industries and commerce. But, since after the world war, the Annamites, especially those who come from the North (that are the Tonkinese), have begun to make use of their ability in trade and industries, and the Chinese find a hard time owing to concurrence they find from the natives. Besides that, the main industries and commerce have passed into the hands of French people who are gradually but rapidly organizing and improving Indo-China. The Cambodians are naturally apathetic, and have given way to the Chinese and Annamites, but they maintain and develop their ancestral artistic ability under the French direction and protection.

The Laotians and Mois, authochtones of the forests and mountainous grounds oppressed by their neighbours, are lazy and timid. The Muongs, who occupy all the basins of the Black River (Riviere Noire) and Song-Ma River are handsomer and stronger than the Annamites. The Nungs look like the Chinese and the Thos belong to the Thai race.

The trade of the Colony is rapidly increasing and nearly 50 per cent of the imports are of French origin. Indo-China has its own customs tariff governed by an Act signed by the President of the Republic on the 29th of June, 1939 and the amount of the same as that of France. By far, the largest export is rice, and second maize, third rubber.

Indo-China should attract the attention of travellers from all parts of the world, as it is an ideal field for tourists. The bay of Along (Baie d'Along), in the gulf of Tonkin, is widely famed for its scenery. Running along the Annamese coast by a railway the tourist reaches Hué, the residence of the Emperor of Annam, and finds the tombs of Emperors Gia-Long, Ming-Mang, Thieu-Tri, etc., a mine of interest. From Nhatrang the railway runs down to Saigon through the mysterious forest land, full of game from elephants, gaur and tiger to rabbit, and where the "mois" or primitive tribes inhabit, and reach Saigon, the main port of Indo-China. There is a daily express train, with restaurant-cars and berths, running between Hanoi and Saigon, covering the distance of 1,940 kilometers (1,200 miles) in 42 hours.

A good motor road, the famous "Mandarin Road" also runs almost parallel to the railway track.

Side railway lines and motor road take, either from Saigon or from Hanoi, to the fine hill resort, Dalat in South-Annam, 4,500 feet above sea-level, amid fir clad mountains, where travellers will find two large hotels and a secondary one offering excellent accommodation. In the neighbourhood of Dalat, sport of every kind, including big game hunting specially organised, may be indulged in, as well as excursions and motor trips.

Reference must on no account be omitted of the world-famed ruins of Angkor, which for magnitude, beauty and stateliness bear comparison with those of the ancient kingdom of the Pharaohs. It is easy to reach Angkor from Saigon, in a car, the distance being only 295 miles. Let us take this opportunity to mention that the Government Tourist Information Bureau, 22, Rue Lagrandière, Saigon or the Tonkin branch in Hanoi Galerie du Credit Foncièr will issue every information required on the subject of travel in French Indo-China.

TONKIN

Originally the seat of the Annam Kingdom under the Lês, but since 1802 when Gia Long, the first Emperor of the actual Dynasty, the Nguyên, had been enthroned. Tonkin has become a part of Annam Empire under a Vice-Roy. But, in 1897, the Emperor suppressed the Vice-Roy (Kinh-Luoc) and all the powers of this Great Mandarin have been given to the French "Résident Supérieur au Tonkin." It lies between lat. 19 deg. and 23 deg. N. and long. 102 deg. and 108 deg. 30 min. E. bounded on the North, by China, on west by Laos, on the South by Annam, and on the East by the gulf of Tonkin. The country near the sea is a rice alluvial plain; well watered by numerous rivers, it produces large crops of rice and maize, while sugar, cotton, spices, indigo, silk, arecquier, coffee and various other articles are also raised It possesses valuable mines of tin, lead, antimony, phosphates, coal and zinc; gold and copper are also known to exist. Concessions were granted in 1887 for the working of coal mines at Kebao and Hongay, and 800,000 tons of coal of good quality from the lastnamed is now exported annually. By the Treaty of Hue, dated June 6th, 1884, the Annamese Government placed Tonkin under French Protectorate, and its affairs are administered under the supervision of French Residents. It is, in fact, now practically a French Colony. Tonkin is divided into 21 provinces, namely: Bac-Giang, Bac-Kan, Bac-Ninh, Ha-Dong, Ha-Nam, Hoa-Binh, Hung-Yen, Kien-An, Lang-Son, Lao-Kay, Ninh-Bing, Phuc-Yen, Phu-Tho, Quang-Yen, Son-La, Son-Tay, Thai-Binh, Thai-Nguyen, Tuyen-Quang, Vinh-Yen, Yenbay; 4 municipalities namely: Hanoi, Haiphong, Nam-Dinh, Haiduong, and 4 military circles: Hai-Ninh, Cao-Bang, Ha-Giang, Lai-Chau. Hanoi, the capital, is the Chief-Town of the province of same name and has a population of 130,000 souls.

Although a country newly colonised, Tonkin has several modern plants, such as the manufactures of cement, glass-ware, cotton spinning and rice mills, match, soap leather and spirits, etc.

The population of Tonkin is over 8,700,000 chiefly Annamese, who live in the deltas, while the mountains are inhabited by different tribes, very picturesque in their attire and habits, such as the Thos, Meos, Man, Muong, etc.

A splendid scenery is to be watched by tourists in Tonkin, especially in the beautiful Bay of Along, the hilly region, the Babe lakes, etc. Mention must not be omitted that Tonkin is the cross way to Yunnan, where the town of Yunnanfu is reached by the French railway line. Shipping services link the port of Haiphong with Hongkong and Saigon, while air lines connect Hanoi, on one part with Saigon, Bangkok and Paris, on the other part, with Hongkong and the East of China.

HANOI

Hanoi, Capital of Tonkin, is situated on the right bank of the Song-Koi (Red River), about 72 miles from its mouth. The city is built close to the river and extends more than two miles along the bank. The first aspect for visitors coming from Haiphong by train or by river-boat, is not an imposing one, as the fashionable portion of the town, the principal European centre, is situated further back. Here, broad and well-kept streets under the shade of trees of all kinds, numerous imposing public and private buildings, present a very nice European town of modern style. The city is lighted by electricity and abundantly supplied with good drinkable water by enormous waterworks. Five electric tramcar lines run through the town and suburbs over a distance of eighteen miles. A special attraction is the "Petit lac," a lake of nearly half a square mile in the middle of the town, rendered picturesque by the quaint pagodas occupying the small islands which adorn it, and surrounded by promenades. Facing the lake there is the Square Paul Bert, with a fine bronze statue of Paul Bert unveiled on the 14th, July, 1890, and a bandstand in the middle. Close to the square there are the City Hall, Treasury, Post Office, Bank of Indo-China, Résidence Supérieure and the Hotel Metropole. Other public buildings, as the residence of the Commander of the Troops, the Hospital, the Museum of Fine Arts, etc., are situated on what was formerly the "Concession," close to the river bank There are two large Roman Catholic Cathedrals and a hand some small Protestant Church. The imposing palace of the Governor-General stands at the entrance of the Botanic Garden, and other fine buildings in the town are the Theatre, Economic Museum, Palais de Justice, University Ideo, Credit Foncier, etc. There are two first-class hotels—the Hotel Metropole, with a front of nearly 300 feet, and the Splendid Hotel—as well as some smaller ones. The "Cercle Spotif," and other clubs possess their own buildings. A racecourse, opened in 1890, is situated just outside the new town. Daily and periodical French and native papers are published at Hanoi. The "citadelle"—formerly the fortress of the Mandarin Governor of Tonkin is now occupied by the French troops as the barracks and general headquarters. However, many interesting and historic buildings remain within the compound, including the Royal Pagoda.

The ancient city is situated between the citadel and the river and presents a novel appearance, owing to the singular architecture of the houses. Since the occupation by the French great improvements have been effected in the laying-out of the town, and the formation of roads and streets, of which over 50 miles have already been drained, electrically lighted, and, even in the native city, well kept and very clean as compared with those of other Eastern cities. Of the numerous temples and pagodas, that of the "Grand Buddha," situated on the shore of the Grand Lake, is the most important and interesting for visitors on account of its colossal bronze statue.

Steel built halls, each 60 by 160 feet, for the native markets have been erected in different quarters.

Trade, both export and import, is steadily increasing, and besides many important mercantile houses there is also a development of industries in this town; ice factory, match factory, paper manufactory, some distilleries furniture-shops and two breweries are among the number.

The transit trade has developed considerably since the different railway lines have been opened which connect Tonkin with Cochin-China and Yunnan Province. The first line connecting Haiphong with Hanoi, was opened in July, 1902, and it enters the capital by a magnificent steel bridge, 5,100 feet in length, over the Red River.

The Botanic Garden of Hanoi occupies a very fine site and is one of the best in the Far East. It contains over 3,000 various species of plants. The climate has undergone a very favourable change, thanks to many sanitary works executed by the French, such as laying drains through the whole European and native city, filling up pools, marshes, etc. There is distinction of season: the summer begins in April the winter about October. The highest degree of temperature in summer is 40° centigrade, the lowest in winter about 8° centigrade. The population of Hanoi is about 150,000, 7,000 of whom are Europeans (Army men included), the rest being Annamites, Chinese, and Indians. The first meeting of a Native Deliberative Assembly elected on a narrow suffrage was held at Hanoi on November 14th, 1907, and was addressed by M. Paul Beau, the Governor-General.

HAIPHONG

Haiphong, the commercial capital of Tonkin, is built on the right bank of the river Cua Cam, one of the numerous divisions of the Song Khoi (Red River), which connects Yunnan with the Tonkin Gulf. Its geographical situation is 20 deg. 51 min. lat. N., 106 deg. 42 min. long. E. Although the river is somewhat obstructed by a bar, the entrance to the harbour is as accessible by night as it is by day, thanks to an up-to-date system of lights. The channel, constantly dredged and supervised by the Dept. of Public Works, allows the biggest liners of the Messageries Maritimes to call at Haiphong. The lighthouse on the island of Hondau shows a light visible 20 naval miles distant, while that on the Norway islands, indicating the entrance to Hongay, the coaling station, is visible at 25 miles. Vessels anchor in front of the city, in the middle of the river, a quarter-of-a-mile from the shore, while a wharf of 2,000 feet gives ample space for the accommodation of five big ocean-going liners at one time. This wharf is equipped with all modern appliances—2-ton electric cranes, 10-and 20-ton steam cranes, rail track, and electric light. Ships arriving alongside may be immediately connected with the telephone and thus get in touch with any point in the city. Large warehouses, covering an area of 9 acres and having a storage capacity of 100,000 tons, have been erected on the water-front and are connected by rail with the Central Station of the Compagnie des Chemins de Fer de l'Indo-Chine et du Yunnan. There is thus every facility for the quick handling of goods destined for the different centres of Tonkin and the Chinese province of Yunnan, to which Haiphong is the gateway, by means of the railway line. These godowns and the wharf are the property of the Port Autonome, which owns also the s.s. Amiral de Beaumont, a powerful sea-going tug ready to give assistance to any vessel, whether at sea or in the harbour. A floating dock, capable of lifting vessels up to 330 feet in length and 2,500 tons displacement, is attached to a modern shipbuilding and repairing yard, where the most extensive repairs can be undertaken.

Haiphong proper is in the midst of an extensive rice swamp with low-lying swampy land all around it for miles, having in the distance the monotony relieved by ruggec ranges of low limestone hills, and beyond these to the northward, at a distaned of some 16 miles, is a range of mountains, the loftiest, known as the "Tooth of Nam Mâu" being about 3,500 feet (1068 metres) high. Though at the time of its origin in 1884 Haiphong was but a mere native village in the midst of rice fields and muddy streams, it has rapidly developed into the most important commercial and industrial centre of Tonkin and the port for all home and foreign traffic. Being a new town, it has been built according to modern ideas. The streets and boulevards are wide, clean and well-shaded, and constructed for the most part at right angles. The town has a cosy and pleasing appearance, most of the houses being of the cottage type. The chief commercial and administrative buildings are the Central Post Office, City Hall, Banque de l'Indochine, Municipal Theatre, and Custom-house. There is a Roman Catholic Cathedral attached to the Spanish Mission, and a Protestant church, also has been erected in the town. There is a very pretty theatre, built in 1900 by the Municipality. The Hôtel du Commerce is a large and handsome structure, its lofty mansard roof dominating every building in the town. The Cercle du Commerce, which is a well-managed club, has its domicile in the boulevard Paul Bert. The year 1922 saw the opening of the "Cercle Sportif Haïphonnais," with a large and handsome building and extensive grounds for all forms of sport.

Haiphong has two public gardens, where military concerts are given on Sundays and Thursdays. The small Botanical Garden of the Lach Tray, two miles out of town, is one of the evening promenades.

The appearance of this city, agreeably disposed among trees and tropical vegetation, appeals to the eye of the traveller arriving by sea on a sunny day.

The city, originally comprised within the Cua-Cam and Song-Tam Bac rivers and the Bonnal canal, soon spread beyond these narrow limits owing to the development of its commerce and industry, foreign and indigenous. The principal industrial concerns are cement works (whose products are known all over the Far East), cotton mills, rice mills, brick, tile and ceramic factories, foundries, shipbuilding yards, and an important factory (opened in the beginning of 1922) for the making of all sorts of chemical products.

The total population is about 80,000.

Haiphong is connected with Hanoi by rail, passenger-trains running five times a day each way, and is in communication by landline with Saigon and by radio with Hongkong. Haiphong is also connected by a macadamised road of 22 Km. (about 14 miles) with the nice beach of Doson (Dâù-Són in native language), where come to rest, during the hot season, numerous European families of the Protectorate and, too, rich native people.

Haiphong, at last, is the point of starting for all trips in the neighbouring coal regions of Hongay and, by sea as well as by overland, throw the famous "Along Bay".

It must be noticed that the town of Haiphong has been given up to France in whole property by the King of Annam and that, therefore, the city is administrated, like in France, by a French Mayor assisted by a "municipal council" the only difference being that the Mayor is an "Administrator of Civil service" of a high grade, designated by the General Governor, instead of being an "elected citizen".

ANNAM

The Kingdom of Annam is under French protection. It extends along the Eastern coast of the large Indo-Chinese peninsula, between Cochin-China on the south, Cambodge and Laos on the west, Tonkin on the north, and the China Sea on the east. It is an extensive territory bordered by a chain of granite mountains covered with forests and having well-watered and fertile plateaux.

The kingdom is administered by a Privy Council whose members are nominated by the Sovereign. Each Ministry has the assistance of a Council. Since the Treaty of 6th, June, 1884, France has had a Resident Superieur at Huê and a Chamber of Representatives of the people was instituted in 1926. For administrative purposes Annam is divided into 17 provinces: Thanh-Hoa (Th-H), Nghé-An (Vinh), Ha-Tinh (H-T), Quang-Binh (Dong-Hoi), Quang-Tri (Q-T), Thùa-Thien (Huê), Quang-Nam (Faifo), Quang-Ngai (Q-Ngai), Binh-Dinh (Qui-Nhon), Phu-Yen (Song-Cau), Kon-Toum (K.T.), Darlac (Ban-Methuot), Khành-Hoà (Nh-Tg), Ninh Thuân (Phanrang), Binh-Thuan (Phan-Thiét), Haut-Donnai (Dalat), Plei-Ku and the Résidences-Mairies of Thanhhoa, Vinh-Bênthuy, Hué, Tourane, Quinhôn, Phan-Thiét, Dalat. The agricultural land bordering on the coast is almost exclusively devoted to the culture of rice, of which two crops a year are raised. Imports consist of products for consumption such as flour, wine, liquors, rice, spice, also iron manufactures, all kinds of hard wood, articles de luxe, cotton goods, etc. Exports comprise silk, raw and filatured, silk manufactures and waste silk, ginned cotton, lace, cinnamon, gummed lacquer, oil d'arachides precious woods, ox hides and horns, dried and salt fish, etc.

HUÊ

Huê, the capital of the kingdom of Annam, and the seat of government, is situated about 12 km. from the sea on a large but scarcely navigable river named Huong-giang and called by the French the Huê river or Riviere des Parfums, which debouches on the coast in about lat. 16 deg. 29 min N., and long. 107 deg. 38 min. E. The grand mountain chain of Annam, rising four successive lines, approaches the coast North and South, forming, round the town, an immense belt broken only by the sea, giving to the city a smiling and picturesque spect. Huê consists of two distinct parts on each side of the river. On the left bank is the citadel, an immense quadrilateral, measuring on each side 2,400 metres with the front bastioned after the type of the fortifications at Vauban. Within are the palace of the King and the offices of the Annamite Ministers. Tourists are allowed to visit the palace on obtaining a pass from the French administration. Inside the palace is a very interesting museum of ancient Annamite works of art (chiefly gold and jade jewellery). In the citadel are also two other museums—S. M. Khaï Dinh Museum (ancient Annamite works of art) and Economic Museum. The palace is kept in good order and visitors will find it very interesting. On the right bank of the river are the official buildings of the French government, and the houses of the European officials and merchants. The population of the city is estimated to be composed of 13,056 Annamites, 474 Europeans, and 360 Chinese. The environs of Huê are picturesque and pleasing. A favourite excursion is to the tombs of the old kings of Annam, some few miles from Huê. The buildings are magnificent in the style of the tombs of the Chinese Emperors.

TOURANE

The port of Tourane is situated about 60 miles to the south-east of Huê, the capital of Annam, but on account of the Thuan-an Bar it is accessible by sea for large craft during only six months of the year—from the end of March to the end of September. From Huê to Tourane there is a very comfortable railway along the sea-shore or passing through the mountains and woods, for a distance of 60 miles There is also a very picturesque road passing over the Nuages range of hills which is practicable for horse and foot traffic and motor-cars. The extensive bay of Tourane is surrounded by hills and affords anchorage to the largest vessels. The Government transports and the steamers of the Messageries Maritimes and the Chargeurs Réunis find an anchorage here at all states of the tide and in all weathers. The Tourane River, which rises in the small mountains of the interior, empties itself into the bay. It is navigable only for small boats and junks, by which the traffic with the provinces of Quang-nam and Quang-ngai is carried on. The town, which is well built, extends for a length of nearly two miles along the left bank of the river. It possesses many public buildings, including the French Residency, a fine Military Hospital, spacious and well-ventilated Barracks, the Custom-house, the Treasury, the Post Office, and the Municipal Offices, also a number of well-appointed business establishments, amongst which may be mentioned the Bank de l'Indo-Chine, the Messageries Maritimes offices, the Hotel Morin, etc. The Markets, built of brick and stone, are large and contain several hundred stalls. On the right bank of the river, also, there are a few buildings which are included in the French concession. A quarter of an hour's walk from this district is the village of My-khé, which has given its name to a magnificent beach much frequented by the European population. The trade of Tourane is considerable, and several steamers a month arrive from Hongkong, taking full return cargoes of canella sugar, rattan, bamboo, areca nuts, silk, cassia, etc. The Messageries Maritimes and the Compagnie Chargeurs Réunis have agencies at Tourane, and the vessels of these Companies, together with those arriving from Hongkong, give a total of about a dozen entering the port every month in normal times. Besides these vessels a large number of large sea-going junks from China, Hainan, and the ports of Annam, Tonkin, and Cochin-China carry on an active and considerable trade in the products of the country. Tea, coffee, and the mulberry tree are cultivated on a large scale in the neighbourhood. Less than one hour's journey by motor-car from the town are the Marble Mountains, an object of interest for travellers, who should not pass through Tourane without paying them a visit.

PROVINCE DE BINH DINH

CHEF LIEU: QUINHON

Quinhon was opened to foreign trade upon the conclusion of the Treaty between France and Annam signed in March, 1874. It is situated on the coast of Annam in about lat. 13 deg. 54 min. N., long. 109 deg. 02 min. E. The entrance to the port is obstructed by a bar, which may be crossed, however, by any vessel with a draught not exceeding 16 to 16½ feet. The chief articles of export are salt, silk, beans, arachide oil and cakes, sugar, etc. The population of the province is, 600,000—1,400 Chinese, 200 Europeans that of the port 10,000, of whom about 201 are French civilians. The country is well cultivated, and the commercial prospects of the port are improving every year. A considerable trade is carried on, chiefly with Hongkong, Haiphong, Saigon, Singapore, and Bangkok. The trade is at present chiefly in the hands of the Chinese.

COCHIN-CHINA

Cochin-China is a French Colony. The province of Giadinh of which Saigon is the chief port, was conquered by the Franco-Spanish fleet on the 17th February, 1859, but Lower Cochin-China (comprising the provinces of Giadinh, Bienhoa, and Mytho, and the Islands of Pulo Condor) was not definitely occupied until 1862, when it was formally surrendered by Treaty ; in 1867 three more provinces were conquered by the French and added to their possessions, viz., Chaudoc, Hatien, and Vinhlong. The actual boundaries of Cochin-China now are: on the North, the kingdoms of Annam and Cambodia; on the East and South, the China Sea; on the West, the Gulf of Siam and Cambodia.

The Colony of Cochin-China is divided into 21 provinces. Except Saigon, which is the capital of Cochin-China and at the same time of the province of Giadinh, the other chief towns bear the names of their respective provinces. The country is a vast plain with small hills on the West and some mountains on the Eastand North; the three highest are Baden 884 metres, Baria 493 metres, and the Mai Mountains 550 and 600 metres in height. The principal rivers are the two Vaico, the Saigon River, and the Donnai river. The lower parts of Cochin-China are wrinkled with small creeks or arroyos, giving easy and rapid communication to all parts of the country. Of late several canals have been opened. The magnificent river Mekong, which descends from the Thibetan mountains, after running through different territories, crosses Cambodia, enters the lower provinces of Cochin-China, by two branches, and empties itself into the China Sea by five large outlets called, respectively, Cua Tieu, Cua Balai, Cua Cochien, Cua Dinh-an, and Cua Bassac.

The principal product of Cochin-China is rice. It is planted in almost every province except some of the northern districts. In the last 20 years the number of hectares cultivated has almost doubled. After rice, the chief exports are maize, rubber, fish, fish-oil, hides, pepper, timber, kapok, cotton, dried shrimps, and copra The Hevea Brasiliensis has been extensively cultivated during the last ten years. The acreage planted amounts approximately to 250,000 acres, and the average export of rubber is nearing 20,000 tons per annum. Coffee, tea, China grass, sesamum, palma-christi, indigo, saffron, gum-lac, sapan wood and cinchona also exist in fairly large quantities, with several other minor productions.

The principal salt marshes are in the province of Baria. The forests contain large quantities of fine timber and abound with game of nearly every description, amongst which may be named elephants, rhinoceros, tiger, deer, wild boar, and eland, while amongst the feathered game the peacock, partridge, snipe, jungle fowl (or wildcock), pheasant, etc., may be mentioned. The rivers and creeks swarm with fish of every description, and alligators abound in same.

The country being very tranquil, the garrisons have been considerably reduced not only in Saigon but also in the provinces, and now a few hundred French and native soldiers suffice to maintain the security of the inhabitants of Cochin-China and Cambodia. The Annamites are a race devoted principally to agriculture; they are not so industrious as the Chinese and are indifferent traders. The Chinese have the largest proportion of the trade in their hands.

The whole of the French possessions are now comprised under the title of Indo-China and consist of the Colony of Cochin-China, the protectorates of Tonkin, Laos, Annam, and Cambodia, and the leased territory of Quoang-tschou-wan, and are under the control of a Governor-General, who usually resides in Tonkin. The Government of Cochin-China is administered by a Governor, who is assisted by a Privy Council. The Colonial Council of Cochin-China, some of the members of which are elected by the residents, consists of 24 members, ten of whom are natives. In the various arrondissements, moreover, Councils have been introduced composed entirely of natives. The towns of Saigon and Cholon are grouped under the direction of the so-called " Region Saigon-Cholon" which comprises at its head one administrator with the same services than for a Province and two Municipal Councils (one for Saigon, one for Cholon), the members of which bodies are partly French and partly native. The Chamber of Commerce at Saigon is also an official body elected by the merchants and traders; formerly it was composed of French, foreigners, and Chinese, but in 1896 its constitution was altered and it is now an exclusively French and native body. The Chamber of Agriculture is another official body elected by planters and composed of French and natives.

Following on irrigation works a great number of concessions have been granted especially in 1899 and 1900, by the Colonial Council of Cochin-China, some to villagers, some to settlers. The fields granted to European settlers are only taxed according to their progress, commencing by one-fifth at the end of the fifth year, to which is added another one-fifth at the end of each of the following four years. The Conseil Supérieur, in November, 1900, adopted a scheme for the improvement of Saigon Harbour which involved an estimated expenditure of F10,394,000 (£415,760). A quay 1,091 metres (3,578 feet) long was constructed on the right bank of the river, and a series of 11 warehouses 25 metres (82 feet) broad and 90 metres (290 feet) long was erected, thus making a total surface of 24,225 square metres (250,600 square feet). Railroads were built in front and at the back of the warehouses, and the line of railway leading thereto was connected with the Mytho and Cholon Railways. About 20 buoys were established on the left bank of the river in order that vessels might be moored on that side as well as on the right bank, and a bridge, level with the ground, was built in continuation of the street called rue d'Adran. A postal line of French steamers has been established between Saigon and Singapore, with a subsidy from the Government of Indo-China. A big wireless plant was erected in 1923. There are six steel towers each 780 feet high, and 4 smaller ones, each 390 feet high. This plant, replete with the latest apparatus, is one of the most powerful in the world.

SAIGON

Saigon, the capital of Cochin-China, is situated on the Saigon river, a tributary of the Donnai, in lat. 10 deg. 50 min. N., and long. 104 deg 22 min. E. It is about 40 miles from Cape St. Jacques and is accessible to the largest vessels. Since its occupation by the French the climate has undergone a very favourable change, owing to sanitary works in the town, such as drains, the filling up of pools, marshes, etc. The town presents a fine appearance, the roads and thoroughfares being broad and regular. Amongst the public buildings the Government House is the most remarkable; several millions of francs have been spent upon its construction and decoration. The other prominent public buildings are the Palace of the Cochin China Government, the handsome and imposing Post Office on the Place de la Cathédrale, the Treasury, the Supreme Court and the "Hotel de Ville" (Town Hall), the cost of which was over Francs 2,000,000. Fine buildings have been erected, among which the Banque de l'Indo-Chine and the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. There is also a stately Gothic Cathedral of large proportions, in front of which has been erected the statue of Monseigneur Pigneau de Behaine, bishop of Adran, one of the first French missionaries who came to Cochin-China in the last century. Saigon has two public gardens, the "Jardin de la Ville," which is maintained at the expense of the Municipality, and the Botanic and Zoological Garden. The municipal theatre, which was inaugurated in 1900, is a remarkable building erected at a cost of over 2,000,000 fr. There is good docking accommodation. The Bassin de Radoub, capable of receiving the largest men-of-war, is one of the finest docks in the world, and there are two floating lifts. Two petroleum godowns built by the Government are situated at Rach Doï, on the banks of the Saigon River (half-way to the town). They are said to be large enough to receive over 400,000 cases. The agents of Messrs. Samuel & Co., of London, have built two petroleum tanks at Nhabé, at the point where the Saigon River flows into the Donnaï. The largest of these is estimated to receive 2,300 cubic metres (81,190 cubic feet) of oil. There are (without reckoning the troops) over 8,000 Europeans and over 160,000 Asiatics or natives.

The M.M. steamers call twice a month at Saigon on their homeward and outward trips. Easy communication is afforded with the principal towns of the territory either by subsidized mail steamers or railway. There is a railway with Mytho, Bien Hoa and beyond, and with Hoc Mon and Laithien. The bridge of Binh-Loi was inaugurated on the 8th of March, 1902, over the river of Saigon, putting in direct communication the two rives des fleurs. It is a swing bridge and is of a total length of 276 mêtres, supported by 6 piles (en maçonnerie et à 2-culées).

All the principal towns of Cochin-China possess telegraphic and telephonic communication, and a submarine cable unites the Colony with Singapore, Haiphong, Hongkong, Amoy, etc. The Wireless Station, situated in the village of Phu-To, between Saigon and Cholon, is one of the most important in the Far East and communicates directly with Paris. The postal organization of the Colony is very complete and efficient; correspondence can be sent daily to almost all parts of the country.

CHOLON

This town, distant four miles from Saigon, with which it is connected by one electric and two steam tramways, is the seat of most of the Chinese trade of the Colony. Cholon may be said to be the granary of Cochin-China, and is the centre of much commercial activity. Most of the rice mills are located in this place, there being no fewer than 10, of which five are owned by a French society. The town is administered by a Municipal Council, composed partly of French, partly of Annamites, and partly of Chinese. The population is about 200,000. The principal buildings are the Mairie (Town Hall), the Inspection (Provincial Government), the Maternité, and the Hôpital. There are also a fair number of gorgeous Chinese pagodas in the city.

CAMBODGE

Cambodia, the kingdom of the Khmer, extends from 101 deg. 30 min. to 104 deg. 30 min. longitude E. of Paris, and from 10 deg. 30 min. to 14 deg. latitude. It was reduced to its present proportions in 1860 by the annexation of its two richest provinces, Angkor and Battambang, to Siam. Its area is about 62,000 square miles. It is bounded on the south-west by the Gulf of Siam, on the south-east by French Cochin-China, on the north by the French Laos, and on the north-west and west by Angkor and Battambang. The noble river Mekong flows through the kingdom, and, after passing through French Cochin-China, empties itself, by a number of mouths, into the sea. The Mekong is the grand waterway of Cambodia, and, like the Nile in Egypt, lays the greater part of the country under water annually, greatly increasing its fertility. The soil of Cambodia is rich and productive, and rice, pepper, indigo, cotton, tobacco, sugar, maize and cardamoms are cultivated. Coffee and spices of all sorts could be grown. Among woods, ebony, rose, sapan, pine, and other valuable sorts exist, no fewer than 80 different kinds of timber being found in the forests. Iron of good quality has been discovered, and it is affirmed that there are gold, silver, and lead mines in the mountains. The fisheries of Cambodia are very productive, and salt fish forms one of the chief articles of export. Large quantities of fish oil are also produced.

Cambodia was once an extensive and powerful State, and proofs that it possessed a much higher civilisation than that which now prevails in the country are to be found in the architectural remnants of former grandeur. The noble ruins of the ancient city of Angkor are monuments of a people much superior to the feeble race which now inhabits Cambodia. The Cambodians differ entirely from their neighbours, the Annamites, both in features and customs. Polygamy is practised among them. The prevailing religion is Buddhism. The people are apathetic and indolent, and have allowed the trade to fall into the hands of Chinese. Slavery, since its abolition by the French Treaty of 1884, has almost disappeared.

The Government of Cambodia is a monarchy under French protection. In June, 1884, King Norodom signed a new Treaty with France, by which the administration of the country was handed over to French Residents. Since the Convention of 1892 the native functionaries have been appointed by the King, under the control of the French Administration, and paid from the treasury of this kingdom.

Phnom-penh, the present capital of Cambodia and seat of the Government, is situated on the river Mekong, nearly in the heart of the kingdom. The king's palace is a large building, and the portion devoted to his use is built and furnished in European style. French functionaries have charge of the Treasury, Sanitary Board, administration of justice, customs, public works and taxes. Phnom-penh has been considerably improved under the present rule. Many roads have been made and numerous sanitary works carried out in the town, such as drainage works, the filling up of pools, marshes, etc. The town has also been provided with waterworks and electric light. The Treasury, in the ancient Khmer style of architecture, is a most remarkable building. The other prominent public buildings are the Post Office, Court, Hospital, Personnel and Registration Office, Commissariat of Police, barracks for Marine Infantry, Public Works Office, Commercial Museum-Harbour Office, and the Indo-China Bank and Messageries Fluviales agencies. The Résident Supérieur has a handsome residence in the city. Though the country is as yet undeveloped, trade is extending considerably. Cambodia has no seaports of any importance, and the import and export trade passes through the port of Saigon. Customs dues have been imposed since July, 1887, with exemptions in favour of French goods and shipping. The tariff is based on the general tariff of France, modified in certain points. The port of Kampot can only be frequented by small native coasting vessels from Siam and by Chinese junks. Easy communication is afforded with the principal towns of the interior, Saigon, Angkor, and Battambang, and Stungtreng and Khone, in the Laos, by subsidized mail steamers of the Messageries Fluviales. Telegraphic communication exists between the principal towns of Cambodia, and a land wire passing through Cambodia and Laos connects Cochin-China with Bangkok and Tavoy (Burmah).

THAILAND

(Formerly Siam)

The kingdom of Thailand, of which Bangkok is the capital, extends from the latitude of about 20 deg. north to the Gulf called after itself. It is bounded on the west by Burma and the Bay of Bengal, and on the east by the Mekong and the French protectorates of Luang Prabang and Cambodia. Formerly the Lai Mountains were claimed as the eastern boundary, but in 1893 the French pressed the claims of Annam to the territory between the mountains and the river, and the Thai were compelled to retire. The most important part of the kingdom lies in the valley of the Menam, the country of the true Thai. The boundaries of Thailand on the Bay of Bengal, reach from Burma in a southerly line to the northern frontier of Kelantan and Kedah in the Malayan Peninsula in the latitude of about 7 deg. north. The island of Puket, containing enormous deposits of tin ore, is included in the territories of Thailand. The boundary line runs south-east from the mouth of the Perlis River across the Peninsula slightly to the north of Kota Bharu, the capital of Kelantan. Under the Treaty of 1909 Thailand ceded to Great Britain her Malay dependencies of Perlis, Kedah, Kelantan and Trengganu. The kingdom also comprises a great part of the ancient domain of Lao, but the rich and valuable possession of Battambang, once a part of the kingdom of Cambodia, was ceded to France in 1907. A treaty concluded between France and Thailand in 1904 settled some disputed points with regard to the frontier between Thailand and Cambodia and Thailand and French Indo-China. By a further treaty in 1907 the territories of Battambang, Sien-reap and Angkor were ceded by Thailand to France in exchange for the district of Krat and some slight concessions in Dansai (Laos). France, at the same time, agreed to the gradual abandonment of the extra-territorial privileges hitherto enjoyed by French-Asiatic subjects and protegés in Thailand. During the second decade of this century Thailand concluded new General and Commercial Treaties with nearly all countries with which she has relations. By these treaties Thailand obtained complete fiscal and jurisdictional autonomy, subject to certain temporary limitations and safeguards. These treaties have now been denounced and Thailand has negotiated fresh treaties with the various countries, which were notified in 1938. The former capital of Thailand was Ayuthia, situated on the Menam Chao Phya river, about 90 miles from its mouth. In 1767 a series of bloody and desperate combats between the Thai and the Burmese culminated in the capture and destruction of that city by the victorious Burmese general and the consequent exodus of the conquered. They moved down the river about 60 miles, and there founded the present populous and flourishing city of Bangkok. The chief of the Thai Army rallied the scattered troops, and, building a walled city at Dhonburi (i.e., Bangkok on the west bank of the river, the modern capital being mainly on the east bank), declared himself King under the title P'ya Tak. In 1782 P'ya Tak became insane, and the kingdom passed to his most distinguished general, named Chao P'ya Chakkri, who founded the present dynasty. The actual revenue of Thailand is now over nine million pounds sterling. Prior to 1896 when a European financial adviser was first engaged for the purpose of reorganising the national finances, the revenue accounted for was little more than Ticals 18,000,000 but the amount steadily increased, and for the year ending March 31st, 1930, reached Ticals 107,117,933. Since then Thailand has felt the effects of the world depression. In the year 1937-38 the actual revenue amounted to Ticals 108,908,502, while expenditure for the same period totalled Ticals 101,627,102. The figures for 1938-39 are Ticals 109,425,940 and Ticals 57,879,979 respectively. Thailand floated her first Internal Loan (of Ticals 10 million) in May, 1933. A proposal to adopt the gold standard was mooted in 1899, but did not come to anything till November, 1902, when the Mint was closed to the free coinage of silver. The gold standard was abandoned by force of economic pressure on May 11th, 1932 and the currency was linked to Sterling. The annual capitation tax formerly paid by all under Thai jurisdiction has been abolished. The fiscal system of the country has now been reorganised under Revenue Code promulgated in 1939 (comprising income tax, business tax, stamp duty, etc.). Thailand entered the Universal Postal Union on the 1st, July, 1885.

The first railway line, from Bangkok to Paknam, was opened by the King on the 11th, April, 1893. Another railway, a Government line viâ Ayuthia to Korat, was the first important line completed. The first section, from Bangkok to Ayuthia, a distance of about 50 miles, was opened on the 26th, March, 1897. Another section, to Gengkoi, was opened on November 1st, 1897, a third, to Hinlap, on April 1st, 1898, and the whole line was opened to traffic in November, 1900. The construction of a line branching off the Korat line near Ayuthia and intended to open up the country to Chiengmai was commenced in June, 1898, and the first section (42 kilometres) to Lopburi was opened to traffic on 1st, April, 1901. The next section, Lopburi-Paknampo (118 km.), was opened to traffic in November, 1905, the section to Pitsanulok in 1907, and the last section to Chiengmai on January 1st, 1922. The line running south-west to Petchaburi, viâ Ratburi, 152 km. long, was opened to traffic in the early part of 1903. In 1909 the construction of this Southern line was continued from Petchaburi, and has now been completed to the Kedah frontier at Padang Besar and to the Kelantan frontier at Sungei Golok. A through rail service between Bangkok and Penang was opened on July 1st, 1918, and the journey only takes 26 hours. A bi-weekly International express runs regularly from Bangkok-Penang and Penang-Bangkok. The Eastern line from Bangkok to Petriew was completed in 1908. It has now been continued to Aranya Prades near the Cambodian frontier. The Korat line has been continued to Ubon. A further section of the North line, to Ban Dara, was opened in November, 1908, and a section to Utaradit and Pang Ton Phung, with a branch line to Sawankalok, at the end of 1909. By November, 1913, the line was open to traffic as far as Pak Tha, and the survey of the route to Chiengmai had made good progress. The war delayed the completion of the Northern line, but through traffic was opened to Chiengmai towards the end of 1921. The total length of State railways open to traffic on March 31st, 1935, was 3,100 kms. A line from Kon Kaen to Udorn is at present under construction. The private railway companies comprise the Meklong and Phrabad Companies. A fleet of steam and motor launches runs from the metropolis in all directions up-country. The railway from Bangkok to Paknam is now controlled by the State.

The total value of all imports and exports for the years 1934-38 inclusive are as follows:

Information regarding the Armed Forces of Thailand is not published, but they are expending, and additions to the Royal Thai Navy are constantly being made.

The last census was taken on May 23, 1937, when the total population of Thailand was found to be 14,464,489, as compared with 11,506,207 in 1929, when the previous census was taken. Detailed particulars of the subdivision by race of the population are not yet available.

On June 24, 1932 a successful coup d'état took place in Bangkok, the result of which was the acceptance by the King of a form of constitutional government. Dissatisfaction with the policy of the new Ministers led to a second and equally bloodless coup détat on June 20, 1933, headed by Colonel Phya Bahol, who held the position of Premier until he was succeeded by Colonel, now Major-General Luang Pibul Songgram, the Prime Minister of Defence at the end of 1938. In October of the same year, an armed revolt organised by reactionary elements was suppressed by the government. The Constitution provides that the King is the Head of the State; he exercises legislative power by and with the advice and consent of the People's Assembly, executive power through the State Council, (which corresponds to a Cabinet), and judical power through the Courts duly established by law.

On March 2, 1935, King Prajadhipok abdicated, and H.M. Ananda Mahidol was proclaimed King, a Council of Regency being appointed to act during the King's minority.

BANGKOK

The city of Bangkok is situated on both sides of the Menam about 23 miles from where this magnificent stream empties itself into the Gulf. On the left bank of the river is the city proper, enclosed partly by a wall. The Royal palaces and Government Offices are within the wall, the foreign *hongs, and the principal rice mills being adjacent to the principal or main street of the city. The right bank is principally occupied by Thai, Chinese and Mahommedan residents. The bulk of the business is transacted on the left. Here a road, called New Road—in Thai, Charurn Krung—extends from the Palace walls to Bangkolem, and the electric tramway runs along it for a distance of about six miles. Another electric tramway to Samsen has a length of four miles. Other lines opened in 1906, traverse the city and its environs in various directions, the total length being about 12 miles. All the tramway services are in the hands of the Thai Electric Corporation, Ltd. except the railway to Paknam which was purchased this year by the State. Various new streets and roads have been made recently, and its immediate suburbs have now some 400 miles of carriage roads. There is now also a road running from Bangkok to Don Muang (22 Kilometers) and one running South to Paknam (21 Kilometers). Bangkok is in direct wireless communication with Europe. The principal trade of Bangkok and the foundation on which not only its prosperity but its actual existence mainly rests, is rice. This article is drawn in immense quantities, not only from the innumerable fields which line the fertile valley of the Menam, but from the adjacent rivers which flow into the Gulf from the enormous watershed of the mountain crescent which fringes the northern extremity of the kingdom. The output of this grain in favourable years is scarcely to be calculated. It not only furnishes support to the native population of Thailand and the Malay Peninsula, but largely contributes to the supply of China, Manila, the Straits, Java, and Sumatra; a large amount is also sent to Europe and even to South America. There is also a large trade in teak-wood and ivory, with very many other minor articles of native produce which are exported to China and the Straits. Butterfield & Swire steamers give a regular weekly connection with Hongkong and Swatow; and the Straits Steamship Co. has a weekly service with Singapore. The British-India S. N. Co. also maintains a frequent service between Singapore and Bangkok. The Osaka Shosen Kaisha maintains a connection with Singapore and Netherlands-Indies. There are always a number of Norwegian and Japanese steamers chartered by Bangkok firms. The Thai Steam Navigation Co. provides regular connection with the coast ports.

The public buildings and institutions include the Royal Museum, which is situated in the Wang Na, Bangkok, and consists of two buildings—that on the left of the approach contains the natural history collections and ethnological exhibits from Japan, China, Java, etc.; that on the right (formerly a royal building) contains the Thai ethnological collection. There are two Protestant Churches—Christ Church and St. Mary's Mission; four Roman Catholic Churches; nine Hospitals (two being maintained by and for the accommodation of Europeans, with a staff of European nurses). Chulalongkorn Memorial Hospital, maintained by the Thai Red Cross Society, is one of the finest and best equipped hospitals in the East. The Society has also under its charge the Pasteur Institute, first opened in 1905. St. Louis' Hospital, a spacious building, was opened in 1899, the Sisters of Charity being in charge. The French Roman Catholic Mission maintains two schools for boys and two for girls. The American Presbyterian Mission, also, has a school for boys and one for girls. The State system of education is thoroughly up to date and the University comprises Faculties of Medicine, Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and Nursing and Midwifery. An Act was promulgated in 1921 making elementary education compulsory and free for boys and girls alike. A new University of Moral and Political Science was established in June 1924. There are three first-class hotels — the Oriental, the Rajdhani, belonging to the State Railways Department, and the Trocadero—

* hong=a large shop or store.

and several smaller ones; and several clubs including—the British Club, the Royal Bangkok Sports Club, The Silom Club and the Royal Turf Club. The King's palaces and the temples are magnificent and on a large scale; the architecture is of a kind peculiar to the country; and there is much of novelty and interest to be witnessed by the passing traveller. The roads have been greatly improved. The city throughout its principal streets, as well as all hotels and principal shops, is lighted with electricity. The last census of the population of Thailand was taken in May 23, 1937, the figures being: City of Bangkok—681,214; District of Bangkok—921,617.

The average mean temperature at Bangkok is 82°. The hottest months are February, March, April and May when the highest temperature recorded in the shade averages over 100°. The lowest temperature averages 61° Fahr.

The harbour and island of Koh-si-chang, which lie some 20 miles from the bar and about 50 miles from Bangkok, are places of importance. The harbour, formed by a strait of sea running between islands, offers a fine anchorage for vessels loading rice and teak. The largest ships can load there. A lighthouse aids vessels to make the entrance. A project for dredging the bar at the mouth of the Bangkok river is now in execution. Foundations have been laid for a completely new harbour in the river below Bangkok, and a dredger, recently brought from Holland, has begun dredging operations in the bar. It is hoped eventually to cut a channel 26 feet deep.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS

The Crown Colony of the Straits Settlements dates from 1867. It now comprises the four Settlements of Singapore with Christmas Island and the Cocos Islands, Penang with Province Wellesley, Malacca and Labuan.

Malacca was in the 13th century the seat of a Malay Sultanate which exercised suzerainty over the Peninsula and had diplomatic relations with China and Siam. Being situated midway in the Straits connecting the Pacific with the Indian Ocean, it was the emporium of trade between East and West just as Singapore is to-day. For this reason, it was taken by the Portuguese in 1511 and retained by them till 1641 when it fell to the Dutch. In 1795, it was captured by the British who were at war with the Dutch as allies of the French Republic, and restored to the Dutch in 1818. It finally was exchanged for Bencoolen in Sumatra, under the terms of the Anglo-Dutch treaty of 1824.

Penang, the oldest of the British Settlements, was founded as Prince of Wales' Island by Captain Francis Light in 1786. It was ceded by the Sultan of Kedah on a perpetual lease for an annual payment of $6,000, partly as a trading settlement and partly as a base for the English fleet in the Bay of Bengal. Province Wellesley was similarly ceded in 1800, for a rent of $4,000 to protect Penang from attack by land, and the Dindings, by the Chiefs of Perak, in 1874, for the suppression of piracy. The Dindings Territory was restored to Perak in February, 1935.

Singapore was in the 13th and 14th centuries a Malay city of importance till it was destroyed by the Javanese about 1377. It then remained waste till the present Settlement was founded on January 30, 1819, by Sir Stamford Raffles, then Lieutenant-Governor of Bencoolen, Sumatra. Singapore remained a dependency of Fort Marlborough, Bencoolen, till 1823, when it was placed directly under the Government of India. The original lease by the Sultan of Johore and the Dato Temenggong, Chief of Singapore, of the site of a factory, in 1819, was followed in 1824 by the cession of the Island in perpetuity, this being accepted by the Dutch in the Anglo-Dutch Treaty of the same year.

In 1805, Penang became an Indian Presidency and in 1807 was granted, by the Crown, a Charter of Justice, the first Court of Judicature sitting in 1808. In 1826, the three Settlements were united to form a single Presidency, with headquarters at Penang. The same year, a second Charter of Justice was granted, establishing the Court of Judicature of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore and Malacca, the first Court sitting at Penang in 1827. In 1830, the Presidency was abolished, the Settlements becoming part of the Presidency of Bengal. In 1836, the seat of local Government was moved from Penang to Singapore. On April 1, 1867, the Settlements were transferred, on the request of their inhabitants, from the control of the Government of India to that of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, in London. The Cocos Islands were incorporated in the Settlement of Singapore in 1886, and Christmas Island in 1889. Labuan, which had itself been a Crown Colony since 1848, was incorporated in the Straits Settlements and declared part of the Settlement of Singapore in 1907, and was constituted a separate Settlement in 1912.

The Constitution of the Colony consists of Letters Patent, passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, dated the 17th February, 1911, amended by Letters Patent dated, respectively, the 18th August, 1924, the 18th March 1935, and the 19th July, 1937, constituting the office of Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Straits Settlements and their Dependencies, and Instructions to the Governor passed under the Royal Sign Manual and Signet, dated 18th August, 1924, amended by Additional Instructions dated, respectively, the 23rd February, 1931, the 12th February, 1932, and the 19th July, 1937.

The administration of the Colony is in the hands of the Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Council. The Executive Council consists of six Members ex-officio, excluding the Governor who presides, such other official Members, and such unofficial Members not exceeding three in number as the Governor on His Majesty's Instructions may appoint. The Legislative Council consists of eleven Members ex-officio, excluding the Governor who presides, two official members (nominated) and thirteen unofficial Members, two of whom are elected and eleven of whom are nominated. Business is transacted under Standing Rules and Orders dated 1st June, 1925. In the Governor's absence from the Straits Settlements the officer performing the duties of Colonial Secretary becomes his Deputy.

The Governor, or other Officer for the time being Administering the Governments of the Straits Settlements, is His Majesty's High Commissioner for the Federated Malay States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, and the Malay States of Johore, Kedah, Kelantan, Trengganu and Perlis, which are under His Majesty's Protection, and is empowered to appoint any person to be his Deputy in this Office during his pleasure and in the exercise of such powers as he may deem necessary.

The Governor of the Straits Settlements is also High Commissioner for the State of Brunei and British Agent for the States of British North Borneo and Sarawak which, in common with the Malay States in the Malay Peninsula, are in treaty relationship with Great Britain.

There is railway communication between Singapore, Penang and all the principal ports and towns in the Peninsula. Direct communication by rail was opened in 1919 with Bangkok, the capital of Siam.

The output of tin in the Federated Malay States, the bulk of which finds its way to the smelting works in the Colony, has largely contributed to the wealth of the Peninsula, as has too the extensive planting, throughout the Peninsula, of rubber.

A considerable area of land is under cocoanuts, paddy and pineapples, and constant attention is paid to the development of other forms of Agriculture.

SINGAPORE

The island of Singapore, situated in lat. 1 deg. 17 min. N. and long. 103 deg. 51 min. E., is 26 miles long by 14 wide, containing an area of 206, or, with the adjacent islands, 220 square miles, and is separated from the territory of Johore, which occupies the Southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, by a narrow strait about three-quarters of a mile wide across which a causeway for road and rail traffic was completed in 1923. Singapore was originally taken possession of in 1819 by Sir Stamford Raffles, and was formally ceded to the British Government by the Sultan of Johore in 1824. In that year it became an appanage of the Indian Government, and remained so until 1867, when it was placed under the Colonial Office in conjunction with Penang and Malacca. The island is almost entirely level, the highest hill in the island, Bukit Timah, about eight miles from the town, rising to a height of only 581 feet. The roads are well kept and thanks to the luxuriance of tropical vegetation, abound in shade.

The town of Singapore is situated on the southern shore of the Island and is the seat of Government of the Straits Settlements, containing the residence of the Governor of the Straits Settlements and High Commissioner for the Malay States. The town proper extends for about four miles along the south-eastern shore of the island spreading inland for a distance of about a mile, though the majority of the residences of Europeans lie further back, within a circle with a radius of four to five miles from the heart of the town. The town streets are wide and well metalled.

There are clubs catering for all classes of people and all forms of sport, art and recreation. There are several good hotels, among them the Raffles, the Adelphi and the Sea View.

The principal show places in Singapore are the Airport, the Botanical Gardens at Tanglin, the MacRitchie and Pierce Reservoirs in Thomson Road, the Gap Road, the Raffles Library and Museum, the pineapple factories, and the various Chinese and Indian temples.

A bronze statue of Sir Stamford Raffles stands in front of the Town Hall, to which position it was removed on the occasion of the Singapore Centenary on 6th February, 1919. A dignified and imposing Cenotaph has been erected on the esplanade to commemorate men from the Settlement who fell in the Great War. This memorial was unveiled by H.R.H. The Prince of Wales on the occasion of his visit in 1922. A new Supreme Court Building was opened in August, 1939, adjoining the Municipal Building.

The various cloth-merchants and jewellers shops chiefly centred along High Street and South Bridge Road are a never-failing source of attraction to visitors and residents alike.

The English daily press is represented by the Straits Times, Singapore Free Press, Morning Tribune and Malaya Tribune. There are several Chinese, and also Japanese, Indian and Malay papers. The Government Gazette is published weekly.

Singapore is a free port, there being no Customs Duties, but Excise Duties are levied on alcoholic liquors, opium, tobacco and petroleum. The Harbour is practically landlocked by islands, and the rise and fall of ordinary spring tides is 9 feet. Although the majority of ocean-going steamers are berthed at the Harbour Board's wharves, many smaller vessels discharge and load in the Inner and Outer Harbour, the Inner Harbour being protected from the north-east monsoon by a mole of granite rubble approximately a mile long. The Singapore Harbour Board constituted under the Ports Or-nce (Chapter 149) now controls all the wharves and commercial drydocks Singapore, their premises being about a mile to the westward of the

There are 14,834 lineal feet of wharves, including the Empire Dock (24½ acres). his, 7,677 feet have a depth of 33 feet and over, L.W.O.S.T., while 4,026 feet have pth of 30 feet. There is storage capacity for about 334,000 tons of cargo and 180,000 tons of coal, the stocks of the latter being chiefly Natal, Welsh, Indian Japanese although a variety of coal supplies from local sources such as Borneo, atra, Labuan and Sarawak are generally available. A mechanical coal handling t is in use on a part of the reconstructed and extended West Wharf. The plant ists of a land discharging plant capable of handling 200 tons of coal per hour, or tons per day of 9 hours, allowing for normal stoppages. Land and floating kering plants are also available, each unit being able to bunker at the rate of 100 per hour. With the use of the floating bunkering unit vessels can be bunkered ny berth, simultaneously whilst working cargo on the wharf. The Board owns m tugs with complete fire and salvage equipment, sheer legs with lifting capacity 0 tons, cranes, 14 miles of railway connected with the Federated Malay States ways system, launches, lighters and other appliances for the expeditious hand- of cargo. Connections to the Board's pipe lines enable ships to be bunkered 1 fuel oil and Diesel oil at the rate of 500 tons per hour from private installations he Board's premises. There is an up-to-date plant for the bulk handling of palm which is stored in eight 500-ton tanks, and an installations for storing 193,000 ons of latex and for handling this comodity in bulk. The Board operates five docks one of which (The King's Dock) is divided by an intermediate caisson into docks of 486 and 325 feet each, its equipment including a 30-ton electric travelling ne. The machine shops are capable of effecting ship and machinery repairs to sels of the largest class, and castings and forgings of the largest size can be made the Board's premises. The power of electric motors driving the machinery used the Board exceeds 500 K.W. The Crown Agents for the Colonies, London, act as Board's agents in England.

The characteristic features of the climate of Singapore are uniform nperature, high humidity and copious rainfall. The variation of tem- rature throughout the year is very small and the excessively high tempera- res found in continental tropical areas are never experienced.

The average annual rainfall is 95 inches. December is the wettest month th a little over 10 inches while February, May, June, July and September e the drier months with between 6½ and 7 inches. Rainfalls on the average half the days in the year.

Ordinarily, temperatures range from 75°F in the early morning to 86°— °F during the heat of the day. Temperatures below 70°F are rare and ove 90° comparatively infrequent.

Severe storms are experienced in Singapore known as "Sumatras"; these e violent squalls which occur usually during the night or in the early orning approaching from W or SW; they are usually accompanied by under and lightning and torrential rain. Local thunderstorms occur equently at midday or during the afternoon and though accompanied by ery heavy rain do not usually last for more than an hour.

The SW monsoon does not affect Singapore. Land and sea breezes are rominent although from November to March, the winds are predominantly ortherly or Northeasterly and from June to August predominantly South r Southeasterly.

Although the days are hot and on account of the high humidity somewhat ppressive, the nights are almost always reasonably cool, and it rarely hap- ens that refreshing sleep is not obtained. The effect of the heat and humidity, without seasonal change, is however cumulative, and after a few years a change to a bracing climate becomes imperative for Europeans if health is to be maintained.

PENANG

Penang—or Prince of Wales Island, as it was formerly called—is situated on the west coast of the Malay Peninsula in 5 deg. north latitude. With a strip of land on the opposite coast known as Province Wellesley, from which it is separated by a strait varying from two to 11 miles in width, it constitutes the second in importance of the three areas known as the "Straits Settlements." The island contains an area of about 110 square miles, being 15 miles long and eleven broad at its widest portion, while Province Wellesley extends for a distance of 45 miles along the coast, and has an average width of eight miles, containing 280 square miles. The chief town of Penang is George Town, but the name of the island (which signifies "Betel-nut Island") has become so identified with the town that the specific designation has almost dropped out of use.

Penang was ceded to the famous Captain Francis Light for the East India Company in the year 1786 for an annual payment of $6,000 which was later increased to $10,000 to the Rajah of Kedah, a step which was followed, 13 years later, by the cession of Province Wellesley. In the year 1805 Penang was elevated to the rank of a presidency, its rising fortunes even then bidding fair to eclipse those of Malacca, while Singapore was as yet unknown as a settlement. In 1826 Singapore and Malacca were incorporated with Penang, and the three were designated by the title they still retain. But, as the fortunes of Singapore brightened, those of Penang declined, until the former quite overshadowed her older sister, and in 1826 the seat of government was transferred to Singapore.

The Settlement of Penang is governed by a Resident Councillor and has four unofficial representatives in the Legislative Council, which sits at Singapore. An important department of its trade lies in the business transacted with the Dutch settlements in Sumatra; and recently it has become an emporium and port of shipment for the Malayan Rubber supplies. As it is now the railway terminus for the southern Siam Malay States and the port of disembarkation of passengers for Bangkok, its commercial importance is likely to develop considerably. It is a convenient coaling and man-of-war station, and is the seat of government for Province Wellesley, which must always be an important centre of British influence. The Government in 1906 acquired the graving dock at Prye River in Province Wellesley, 250 feet in length and 50 feet broad at entrance also a slip for vessels 100 feet long. The Prai Dock and Wharves were purchased in 1914 by the Federated Malay States Railway Department from the Colonial Government but have not been a great success owing to silting. New proposals for better wharfage facilities are now being discussed. George Town is built on a plain, at the back of which rises the hill which, as Penangites declare, renders life on the island more enjoyable than in any other part of the Colony. The construction of a Hill Railway by the F.M.S. Railways Department is completed and there is an excellent hotel at the top. A proposal to make a road up the Hill is under consideration.

The formation of Penang is granitic, being covered in many places with a sharp sand or stiff clay, the produce of the decomposition of the granite. Above this again comes a coat of vegetable mould of greater or lesser thickness. With the exception of a plain about three miles in depth, upon which stands the town and environs, the whole of the island consists of hills with narrow valleys. No minerals of commercial value are found in Penang.

The influence of the regular monsoon is more distinctly felt at Penang than in the most easterly part of the Straits of Malacca, owing to the wideness of the latter to the west and vicinity to the Bay of Bengal. During the north-easterly monsoon, from November to March inclusive, clear settled weather prevails, and in the south-westerly, from April to October, the rains take place. But neither rain nor drought is of long continuance. The average heat of the year at the level of the sea is 83°, and at the height of 2,500 feet, the highest inhabited point, 70°, the annual range being about 20°. Where there is free ventilation the climate is superior in salubrity to that of any other tropical one.

Of mammals, the principal species are monkeys, and two species of viverrida—the musang and binturong. The ornithology calls for no special remarks. The island is a happy hunting ground for the entomologist, numerous fine species of lepidoptera frequenting the hills. The botany of Penang is perhaps better known than that of any part of the Peninsula, and, for the area involved, is particularly rich. Palms, bamboos, banana and other fruit-trees, and nutmegs clothe the hillsides, while ferns are also plentiful. The high land permits of the cultivation of many flowers, and other plants which will not thrive in the flat level lands of Singapore or Malacca.

Betel-nut, with copra and fruits and nutmegs, are the indigenous articles of trade. Nutmegs were at one time a most important branch of industry, but the blight, which simultaneously affected the whole Peninsula, destroyed it. Their cultivation has, however, now been resumed, and Penang nutmegs stand high in the market. There is no agriculture properly so-called. Pepper was at one period of its early history produced to the extent of three and a half million pounds annually; but the competition of other places, notably of Netherlands-India, proved fatal, and it is now only cultivated in small patches, and is not classed as an article of export trade. Tapioca, coconuts, gutta, rubber and citronella are also among the products cultivated.

The Singapore-Penang railway has its terminus at Prai, which is connected with the island by a ferry service.

The town possesses few attractions, and the public buildings are mediocre, with the exception of the Government Offices, a fine block erected in 1889 near the jetty St. George's Church is an unpretending edifice of 80 years' standing, centrally situated. There are also a Roman Catholic Church and several mission chapels. The Botanical Gardens and Waterfall are well worthy of a visit, and another place of interest at some distance from the town is the Chinese Temple at Ayer Itam. There are many beautiful little beaches round the coast of the Island; the round trip by motor car takes about 2½ hours and is well worth while. The estimated population on December 31st, 1937 of Penang and Province Wellesley was 391,149 persons, ascompared with 59,851 in April, 1931 (including Dindings).

Penang is a free port with the exception of duties levied on Alcoholic Liquors, Tobacco and Cigars, Opium and Petroleum. There are no port or harbour dues. The Harbour is sheltered from the monsoons by Penang Island on the West and Province Wellesley on the East. The rise and fall of ordinary spring tides is 7′3″. The rise or ordinary neap tides L.W.O.S.T. is 4′6″. A constant depth of water alongside Swettenham Wharf, which is 1200 ft. long, is maintained 30′ L.W.O.S.T. The total area of the Penang Harbour Board has a godown area of 186,000 square feet, and owns 9 steam tugs of varying capacity, 5 steam cranes with a lifting capacity from 3 to 7 tons, one 15 ton steam crane at Prye Dock, & one 10 ton steam crane at Bagan Dalam Slipway, 14 electric cranes with a lifting capacity from 1 ton up to 3 tons, and one 3 ton overhead electric crane. The harbour can accomodate from 15 to 20 ocean-going steamers within easy reach of the quay. A good supply of excellent water is available. A regular ferry service for passengers, motor cars and lorries between Penang and Butterworth is maintained by the Penang Harbour Board and regular ferry service is also run between Penang and Prai Railway Station in connection with the F.M.S. Railways. The Penang Harbour Board operates a graving dock on the left bank of Prai River near the entrance, 340′ long by 50′ wide at entrance with a depth on sill of 14½′ at spring tides. The workshop is fitted with up-to-date machinery electrically driven for small ship repairs. Also a slipway on the right bank of Prai River beyond Prye River Dock with a patent slip 450′ long by 76′ wide, carriage, 151′ x 26′. Coal is stored on the F.M.S. railways premises at Prai and is handled by them.
